Pop fly and shut-eye: This fake baseball podcast is a cure for insomnia

By Aya Abdeen
Cronkite News

PHOENIX – It's the bottom of the ninth. The Cadillac Cars are hoping to hold their lead against the Manistee Eagles, and the crowd is buzzing as the late-game drama unfolds.

That's a slider in the dirt, 2 and 2. And the 2-2 pitch, pop fly to center field. Ortega is under it and he makes the catch for out number two.

If you're still listening to the dulcet tones of play-by-play voice Wally Mc-Carthy in the ninth inning, he'll be disappointed. He wants you to be sleeping.

That's the objective of Northwoods Sleep Baseball Radio, a podcast designed for fans seeking a little shut-eye. It is the brainchild of Mr. King – a humorist from Chicago who prefers to keep his first name private, the scriptwriter for the mock baseball games and the play-by-play voice you hear who uses the McCarthy pseudonym.

"It could pass for the real thing with ease to most listeners ... until that moment you realize everything is just a hair accentuated like a fever dream or an acid trip or a Dali montage in the middle of a Hitchcock film," said Matt Spiegel, a sports talk show host in Chicago. "Letting your consciousness toggle between relaxing with apathy, and listening intently to the high production values and elevated aesthetic sensibilities is a great way to pass the hours."

King told Cronkite News his play-by-play "is loosely based on real baseball games."

"There is an underlying storyline for each game, but that's a very small part of things – it's like a very short story, and it's something I come up with for each new episode. How? I don't know," King said. "In exactly the same way you would create a three-paragraph short story – from the ether. It's a mystery."

Listening to the games is soothing. The announcer speaks quietly and in an even-toned voice. The crowd noise is continuous but delivered in a pleasant slow hum. The podcast's website boasts, "There is no yelling, no loud commercials, no weird volume spikes. ... You don't listen to it, you listen through it." There are even pleasant-sounding commercials for fake businesses. During one game, King encourages listeners to patronize Baraboo Necessities on Berkely Boulevard.

The podcast staff includes Phil Hunter, one of King's friends who produces ads and is a main contributor. Corbette Pasko, an actor, singer and voiceover artist, is the voice for "WSLP," the station's fake call letters.

Others involved include Joshua Wayne Hensley, a band member with the group The Rutabega who records the jingles for WSLP, and Matt Hoffman, the podcast's music director.

"There's something about baseball on the radio that I find calming, generally," King said. "But they've gotten louder over the years. I started wondering about tamping down all the loud parts of a baseball broadcast. After much hemming and hawing, I released the first episode in January of 2022."

The volume at baseball games has indeed increased over the years thanks to the addition of powerful ballpark speakers, public address announcer promotions, prerecorded baseball highlights and up-tempo music. Curious about this change, author Darryl Bock once purchased a sound pressure meter and took it to an MLB game. He wrote in an article for The National Pastime that the sound periodically spiked over 90 decibels, an amount that can cause permanent hearing damage over an extended period of time, according to the World Health Organization.

Spiegel is grateful he found the podcast.

"Mr. King has made a few YouTube videos that have made me laugh deep to my core," Spiegel said. "Then someone told me about this project, and I was furious not to have known it existed before. I sought it out immediately."

Spiegel said he is grateful for the podcast's soothing artistic imagery. He enjoys that it eliminates the noise from a regular baseball game, such as the screams, loud commercials and volume spikes.

"Oh, so much," Spiegel said. "It perfectly mocks and pays homage to a uniquely beautiful American art form. The genuine article of minor league games on AM radio has always been a unique confluence of ardently mediocre baseball, ardently mediocre broadcasting and well-intentioned small-town values. There's literally nothing like it.

"Sleep Baseball embraces all of that coolness, while fully acknowledging how little attention it actually deserves in the grand scheme of things. So, listen to it, but get your rest at the same time. People have done it for decades. This lets you do that, but if you happen to stay awake, well, you get rewarded for that, too."

When it comes to sleep, Americans have recently been struggling with getting enough. A study by Gallup News revealed that only 42% feel they are getting adequate

Discovering God's Path

The Lord wants to show you His will—do you want to know what it is?

Courtesy photo

Perhaps you have wondered, Does God have a specific plan for my life? And if He does, is it possible to know what the plan is? These are questions many Christians have grappled with at some point.

And there's good news—the answer to both is a resounding yes! God has a plan for each believer's life. Moreover, He wants us to know and walk the path He has for us.

Sometimes we make the idea of finding the Lord's will more complicated than it needs to be. He's not playing hide and seek with His will. There are three simple things we can do to discover His best path for our life:

See PATH, page 7

A Father's Grace

God's forgiveness is complete, permanent, and always available.

The Parable of the Prodigal Son is a beautiful picture of the grace God showers on us when we repent and turn to Him. In this story, the father has been greatly disrespected by his younger son but continues to wait patiently for him to come home. Finally, as the young man is returning, the father runs to meet him and orders the servants to prepare a feast. His eagerness to celebrate his child's return exemplifies how God stands ready to receive us when we head toward Him. It also provides a perfect model for how we're to show grace to the prodigals in our own lives.

This illustration of God's character underscores Paul's assertion to the Ephesians: "In Him we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of our wrongdoings, according to the riches of His grace which He lavished on us"

1. We must have a sincere desire for God's guidance, trusting that He will direct us in His perfect timing (John 16:13).

2. We should seek the Lord through His Word. After all, the Bible is one of the primary tools He uses to make His will and His ways apparent to us (2 Timothy 3:16:17).

3. We are to pray continually (1 Thessalonians 5:17), fully expecting that our Father has something to say to us, His beloved children.

As we seek the Lord in these ways, we'll be able to perceive His direction for our life. Then, we can live with the confident hope that we are walking in His will.

(Ephesians 1:7-8). When we turn to God, He shows His grace on us. He doesn't forgive our sins begrudgingly or keep a record of our wrongs. He offers complete redemption that leads to new life.

Do you need that kind of grace today? Know that God stands ready to immerse you in it (John 1:16-17). Or perhaps you need to offer it to someone in your life. Let the image of the forgiving father in today's passage be a reminder of the grace God calls us to extend every day.

Call us and tell us what's buggin' you!

The evolving electric vehicle charging network plan is part of $76.5 million in federal funding Arizona is eligible to receive through the National Electric Vehicle Infrastructure (NEVI) program. The program encourages adoption of electric vehicles by building a nationwide network of publicly accessible and reliable fast chargers that will reduce drivers' concerns about the range of electric vehicles.

The charging stations will be built with 80% federal funding and a 20% private match. No state funding will be used to build the charging station network. ADOT will administer the contracting process with private companies that will operate the stations.

Planning and construction using NEVI funds is slated to start in 2025, but the buildout will take place over several years. This year, ADOT began seeking bids for private entities to build or upgrade the first phase of electric vehicle charging stations along interstate highways. ADOT expects to award contracts for these stations in late summer, with stations slated to be operational in one year from the start of construction

The timing of Northwoods Sleep Baseball couldn't be better considering the rise in popularity of sports podcasts in recent years. According to Edison Podcast Metrics, sports is ranked No. 5 among the United States' top podcast genres.

Fortunately, King said, the podcast has received mostly favorable reviews.

"The internet is a terrible and wonderful place," he said. "Having said that, I'm happy to report that the vast majority of emails, reviews, and feedback have been wildly positive.

"Maybe because the 'broadcasts' are exactly what they're advertised as – Fake Baseball Radio for Sleeping."
