Construction work begins in downtown Amboy

DIXON – The Illinois Department of Transportation announces today that weather permitting, construction work will begin Monday, July 6, at the intersection of US Route 52 and Main Street in Amboy.

O'Brien Civil Works, Inc. will be reconstructing the ADA sidewalk ramps on the $159,000 contract. Traffic will be reduced to one lane utilizing flaggers for the duration of the project, which is expected to be completed near the end of July.

Motorists can expect delays and should allow extra time for trips through this area.

To avoid the work area, when feasible, use of alternate routes should be considered. Drivers are urged to pay close attention to changed conditions and signs in the work zones, obey the posted speed limits, refrain from using mobile devices and be alert for workers and equipment.

Two new traffic safety laws took effect July 1

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White and the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) announced two new laws that take effect July 1 which establish tougher penalties for drivers who seriously injure others while texting and driving and for those who cause severe injury to pedestrians.

“These laws enhance the penalties for drivers who seriously injure others because of texting and driving,” said White. “Drivers who are negligent by texting and driving or disregarding pedestrians are putting others in grave danger. I urge drivers never to text while driving and to always be mindful of yielding to pedestrians.”

The first law, Public Act 101-0090, amends the Illinois Vehicle Code (IVC) by establishing a 12-month license suspension and minimum fine of $1,000 for a motorist who, while texting and driving, causes great bodily harm, permanent disability or disfigurement to another person.

The second law, Public Act 101-0470 also referred to as Mason’s Law amends the IVC by establishing a 12-month license suspension for a motorist who, while violating the right-of-way at crosswalks and in school zones, causes serious injury to another person.

“Distracted driving and the safety of pedestrians remain among our biggest challenges to get the number of traffic deaths where it should be: Zero,” said Acting Illinois Transportation Secretary Omer Osman. “I thank Gov. Pritzker for signing the bills. These laws will make drivers think twice about the life-and-death decisions they make behind the wheel.”

Facebook announces new data center in DeKalb

DEKALB — Facebook announced today that, as part of their commitment to invest in America, the tech company’s newest worldwide data center will be built in DeKalb, Illinois, bringing an investment of more than $800 million. The Facebook DeKalb Data Center will be among the most advanced, energy- and water-efficient data center facilities in the world, supporting an estimated 100 operational jobs and hundreds of construction jobs.

“There are many variables that enter into the decision process for data center locations, and DeKalb provided many compelling reasons for Facebook to bring our newest data center to Illinois,” said Rachel Peterson, Vice President of Data Center Strategy for Facebook. “We’re so thankful to the City of DeKalb, the DeKalb County Economic Development Corporation, the Illinois Department of Commerce & Economic Opportunity, and all of our community partners for their diligence and enthusiasm throughout this process. We are proud to join the DeKalb community and look forward to a strong relationship for years to come.”

“This new state-of-the-art data center will advance the State of Illinois’s commitment to growing technology and renewable energy throughout our state,” said Acting Director of the Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity (DCEO), Michael Negron.

This 907,000 square foot facility, the 12th Facebook data center in the U.S., will be supported by 100% renewable energy, will use 80% less water than the average data center, and, once completed, will be LEED Gold certified. As one of the largest data centers in Illinois, the Facebook DeKalb Data Center will accelerate opportunities for the community to attract skilled jobs, while increasing the northwest region’s competitive digital edge.

DeKalb was chosen as the site for Facebook’s newest data center site due to its access to renewable energy, a strong talent pool, higher education institutions, community partners and strong infrastructure. Hundreds of construction workers will work onsite for several years. Facebook will be hiring for data center jobs including technicians, engineers, construction management, facility managers, logistics professionals, and security personnel. Mortenson Construction was selected as the general contractor for the DeKalb Data Center. The site will employ an estimated 1,200 construction and trades at the project’s peak.

Emergency Management officials encourage Illinois residents to learn a life saving skill

SPRINGFIELD – During the course of a year, the State of Illinois could see any number of potential disasters – from a tornado and earthquake to flash flood or ice storm. The most important thing to protect during a disaster is your life and the lives of those around you. That's why this month, the Illinois Emergency Management Agency (IEMA) and local emergency management agencies are highlighting the importance of lifesaving skills like first aid, CPR, fire prevention and utility management. These are simple skills that can help save lives during a disaster.

"Learning four simple lifesaving skills can transform your role during an emergency or disaster," said IEMA Director Alicia Tate-Nadeau. "Emergencies can happen fast and it can take time for first responders to arrive on the scene. By enhancing your skillset, you are trained and skilled to be the help until first responders arrive."

Getting to know your neighbors can be extremely helpful in a crisis. Research reported by the Federal Emergency Management Agency suggests 46 percent of individuals expect to rely on people in their neighborhood for assistance within the first 72 hours after an emergency or disaster.

When a potential disaster threatens your home, take action to keep your loved ones safe by shutting off the gas, water and electricity to your home. Failure to do so can result in fires and explosions and various home water supply issues.

Water can quickly become a precious commodity following a disaster, so knowing how to properly shut off the main water valve to the house can be a critical step in disaster preparedness.

Different gas meters have different shut-off procedures, so it is important to contact your local gas company for guidance. Never attempt to turn the gas back on yourself; only a trained and certified professional should perform this task.

When shutting down your electricity, always shut off all the individual circuits before shutting off the main circuit. For more information on taking care of all your utilities, visit www.ready.gov/safety-skills.

Additionally, if you are in an area that is prone to floods or earthquakes, there are steps you can take to protect your home from their impact. You can learn flood-mitigation techniques at <https://go.usa.gov/xPr2C> and <https://go.usa.gov/xPrZY>, and earthquake-protection measures at <https://go.usa.gov/xPr2Y>.

Fire Prevention

Making sure your home has functioning smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors on every level, and at least one fire extinguisher, is one of the simplest ways to protect your family. Test your alarms monthly and contact your local fire department for extinguisher training.

Another key step in fire prevention is making sure your family knows two ways out of your home in the event of a fire and practicing a fire drill with children regularly. The National Fire Protection Association has a wealth of resources available to help you create a culture of preparedness within your family.

To prevent fires from starting, stay in the kitchen when cooking, position barbecue grills at least 10 feet from flammable materials and keep children away from cooking areas. Also immediately replace any worn or damaged appliance cords, and do not run cords under rugs or furniture. For more fire safety tips, go to <https://go.usa.gov/xPr24>.

CPR and First Aid

No matter how well you prepare for disaster, you simply cannot guarantee your loved ones or neighbors won't get hurt. If someone does get injured, you can increase their chance of survival or full recovery by applying the skills learned in a basic first aid and CPR course. Your local chapter of the American Red Cross can provide information on available courses.

For more information on how to plan and prepare for all disasters or hazards, visit state's preparedness website, Ready Illinois (www.Ready.Illinois.gov).

Family is why we do it all.

Shirley Mae Hubbell Okland

Aug. 5, 1935 - June 28, 2020

AMBOY — On Sunday, June 28, 2020 Shirley Mae Hubbell Okland died of natural causes at the age of 85.

Shirley was born Aug. 5, 1935 in Amboy, to Marvin and Helen (Starks) Hubbell. Shirley was the youngest of three children and the only girl. Shirley had the charm and dark curls to rival her likely namesake Shirley Temple. She was clever and an "A" student graduating from Amboy High School the class of 1953. Also in 1953 Shirley married Richard (Dick) Dewey remaining married 37 years.

As a child Shirley grew up on West Provost Street in Amboy and returned to West Provost as a young wife and mother living in the white house with the large lawn and long white picket fence on the former location of the Amboy Grant School. Shirley was smart, pretty, fashionable and driven. Shirley worked throughout her life starting with the Dixon phone company, Amboy Rug Factory, The First National Bank of Amboy, Gascoigne Electronic, USDA ASCS office, and as a real-estate broker. Throughout her life Shirley often returned to Sauk Valley College for additional courses ranging from accounting, computer science and the arts.

Shirley was a loving mother and instilled a sense of hard work and a belief there are no limits to what you can achieve. Shirley was a perfectionist and could do anything from sewing, to furniture refinishing. Shirley had been an active member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Shirley loved music, played the piano and was a fan of Andre Previn, Roger Williams and Victor Borge who combined music and humor. Shirley encouraged her children to play the piano, guitar and saxophone.

Shirley had a sharp wit and liked to laugh. She was a fan of Carol Burnett, Joan Rivers, Lily Tomlin, David Frye and of course Johnny Carson. One of her favorite Lily Tomlin quotes was "I always wanted to be somebody, now I realize I should have been more specific."

She enjoyed late night conversations with friends on candle lit porches and screen houses. Shirley traveled and some highlights included Washington DC, Philadelphia, New York, London, Paris, Las Vegas (including a Cher concert) and closer to home frequent trips to Chicago, Galena and Lake Geneva.

Shirley was preceded in death by her parents; brother, Warren Hubbell; husband, Richard Dewey; husband, Peter Okland; husband, Charles Rogers; grandson, Corey Dewey; and son-in-law, Michael Draper.

Shirley is survived by her children, Sandra Draper, of Amboy, Rich (Monica) Dewey, of Mendota, Brian Dewey (Michael Tighe), of New York, Brett (Sheila) Dewey, of Amboy; six grandchildren, Jonathan Draper, Matthew (Katie) Draper, Annette (Greg) Cyrocki, Ashley (Johnny) Bulfer, Josh (Bree)

Shepard, Chelsea White; granddaughter-in-law, Heather Schmidt; and nine great-grandchildren, Curtis and Madison Draper, Ashton, Logan, Meghan Dewey, and Ellyn Schmidt, Anna and Blake Cyrocki and Alyxandria Shepard.

She is also survived by her brother, Earl Hubbell.

For her time and place Shirley had that spark of more.

A public visitation was held from 8:30 - 10:30 a.m., on Friday, July 3, 2020, at Chapel Hill Funeral Home in Dixon. A private funeral took place immediately following with Reverend Daniel Behmlander of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church in Rock Falls officiating. Private burial was held at Chapel Hill Memorial Gardens.

Due to COVID-19 guidelines, a maximum of 50 people will be allowed inside the funeral home at one time and masks are required.

A memorial has been established to Temperance Hill Cemetery.

THE PASTOR'S PEN

On Your Wondrous Works...

BY PASTOR JACK BRIGGS

There's nothing like nature to remind us of God's power and majesty and how much bigger God's mind is than ours. Way up in the Mississippi Palisades State Park north of Savanna, from a scenic overlook several hundred feet up you could gaze out across the lowlands and the river toward the bluffs in the distance on the Iowa side. Or driving along the ridge on Route 20 east of Galena, where the valley below spreads out as far as the eye could see. Talk about "look(ing) down from lofty mountain grandeur..." Wow!

I only mention this because of how it puts our lives in perspective, and how we view God's sovereignty in the lives we have been given, through the blessings and the troubled times. Whether they are big, small or medium-sized, we all have our share of troubles, don't we? We measure, analyze and brood over our troubles. We compare ours to other's, maybe even thinking "Well, at least I'm not as bad off as..." Health problems. Relationships problems. Financial problems. We know how big our problems loom in our lives.

But do we consider the size of our God? When was the last time we stopped to think about just how big God is? When was the last time we were truly awed by God's power, love, and wisdom?

We don't have enough of those moments when we say, "How Great Thou Art." Folks back in the "olden days," Biblical times, were well aware of how puny, petty and powerless they were in comparison to God. They knew that even their biggest problem was small when held up to God's greatness. That's why the Psalms are chock-full of prayers of praise.

For example: "On the glorious splendor of your majesty, and on your wondrous works, I will meditate. The might of your awesome deeds shall be proclaimed, and I will declare your greatness." (Psalm 145:5-6)

Maybe if we thought a little more about God's greatness and a little less about the size of our problems, we'd find ourselves a tad less anxious, stressed and confused. That's why hymns like "How Great Thou Art" remind of just how big and powerful and loving and great our God is. I recently saw a slogan on a church marquee that reminds us not to tell God how big our storm is, but to tell the storm how big our God is.

But you don't have to travel far to "consider the worlds Thy hands have made." Consider the world around us, the trees and the grass and the flowers, the gentle breeze we feel and hear whispering in the branches and consider how awesome Creation is and how puny we may feel in comparison. Then you take it a step further and consider how all the greatest minds that have studied and tried to explain it all, only to run into the same brick wall: how did it all begin? Logic and reasoning fail us but that's okay because faith is not bound by man-made notions of how things are or should be because the ways of God surpass all human understanding; God's ways are not our ways.

God is infinite - we are finite.

God knows the end from the beginning while we see just a short part of the right now.

God knows the whys, while we grasp for wisdom.

No matter how big your problems may seem today, in the end it doesn't really matter, because God is bigger. God created the mountains and God can move the mountains, figurative mountains of despair or worry or illness or whatever it is that may be troubling us.

Although finding God's awesome majesty in nature is a gift that is available to anyone who has eyes to see and ears to listen, there may be times in our lives when God may seem strangely absent. But the problem is not that God has disappeared. It's that we perhaps don't expect to see God in certain corners of our lives. But God is there, in every instance and situation and circumstance of our lives, if we will only stop and look and listen for signs of God at work in our lives.

Finally, as planting season is upon us, we ask God's blessing upon those whose lives and livelihoods are so closely tied to God's Creation as its stewards, for God creates and the farmer cultivates. Bless and keep safe all those who work the land and tend livestock, that we might have food on our tables.

Thanks be to God, day by days.

O Mexico

When Jeanine Cummins received a seven-figure advance for her novel, "American Dirt," and her publisher announced a first print run of 500,000 copies, Oprah's pick of "American Dirt" for her book club seemed like the crowning moment of a triumphal roll-out. It didn't quite work out that way. The uproar was immediate.

"American Dirt" tells the story of Lydia and Luca, a Mexican mother and her eight-year-old son forced to flee their home in Acapulco after 16 family members, including Lydia's husband and mother, are brutally murdered by the head of a drug cartel. Only Lydia and Luca survive. Lydia, a solidly middle-class owner of a bookstore, leads a charmed life with her husband, an upright newspaper man, and their genius son. Until, that is, she befriends Javier, a sophisticated, poetry-writing intellectual who reads Irish literature. When Javier is exposed as the drug lord of a cartel that has a fondness for decapitating people, Lydia's husband writes an in-depth article about him. Whereupon the poet turns into the beast.

"American Dirt" is a well-paced thriller of Lydia's harrowing odyssey through Mexico by foot and train to escape Javier's assassins. Along the way, she and Luca befriend two beautiful Guatemalan sisters who lived in a mountain paradise until the killers descended upon their village. Lydia and Luca and the two girls form a family. Their fellow migrants are kind and brave men. Never once betrayed, they are fed and hidden by good Mexicans, and they are in awe of the beauty of the towns they pass through. Even the coyote who leads them through the desert has a heart of gold. America is the promised land, where even the returnees, those kicked out by the Trump administration, glow in their enthusiasm for America.

In the author's note, Cummins writes, "I worried that, as a nonmigrant and non-Mexican, I had no business writing a book set almost entirely in Mexico, set entirely among migrants. I wished someone slightly browner than me would write it." Of course many people who are slightly browner than Cummins have written about Mexican migration. "But then I thought, If you're a person who has the capacity to be a bridge, why not be a bridge?" To accomplish this feat for her white audience, Cummins created an educated suburban American woman in the guise of a Mexican migrant to show the migrants' humanity.

Despite the dangers faced by the band of migrants, despite the close calls, "American Dirt" is bloodless. It lacks the immediacy of experience. Lots of research, no life. Of course this doesn't mean that only a Mexican can write about the Mexican experience. In that case, there would be no literature, only memoir. But you do have to be a good writer, you do have to breathe life into your characters.

Opinion

Will pandemic and protests spur rural relocation?

BY JIM NOWLAN

Living in a rural central Illinois town (Toulon, pop. 1,400), I am alert to any forces that might spur relocation to hinterland communities, which are often struggling to maintain population and vitality. Are the pandemic and recent urban, sometimes violent protests such prompts? I conclude there might be some, modest movement to already attractive communities outside the metro regions.

All creatures great and small tend to move away from threats and to opportunity. Based on limited research, interviews with students of rural America and anecdotal illustrations, I conclude that the urban protests will not have much effect on movement to rural areas, but that the increased amount of remote work engendered by the pandemic might do so.

A 2018 Gallup survey finds that more people would like to live in rural areas than do. Those with a greater interest in rural living tend to be white with modest levels of education (no thanks, report those with post-graduate degrees).

As for the urban protests of late, urban poor may indeed want to continue the diaspora out of difficult neighborhoods, but they are unlikely to find rural America inviting.

Those who can move from metro areas tend to be those with the income, often retirement based, and job security to do so. These folks, often suburban — and I have to generalize outrageously throughout this essay — would probably not be spurred to move by the protests, generally far removed from them, nor by the pandemic, as rates of infection are lower in DuPage County (one million folks west of Chicago) than in many rural counties.

The one group that fascinates me is that of young couples, often with good jobs, who are wondering where to rear their forthcoming families. Many of these young people have been working from home during the pandemic, and their companies are thinking maybe they can continue to do so.

Having enjoyed “the action” of the central city as young singles, these couples have often moved to the suburbs to build their nests. Might such couples now be attracted to communities beyond the suburbs — sociologists call this exurbia — where housing might be less expensive and the quality of life comparable, conceivably better, than in some congested suburbs?

I am aware of such couples recently doing so. One couple includes a software developer who travels by Amtrak into Chicago once a week, for two days. I have heard of another couple — don’t know their skills — who have been told by their company they are to be in the downtown office just one day a week and must live within four hours of Chicago. This work arrangement, spurred by the pandemic, might be the new normal for at least a significant number of families.

So, where to move? I contend — but who am I to know, 79 and over the hill — that the couples will want most of the following: high achieving schools; convenience to Chicago via Amtrak or interstates; a good grocery and a big box store or two; a couple of decent restaurants; an active arts life such as local theater group would be a plus, as well as a comfortable number of people like themselves.

In my part of the state, Princeton (7,500) and Dixon (15,000) fill the bill. Interesting to note, both towns are quite attractive, yet their populations have apparently declined a bit in the past decade. These types of small cities might band together to market their communities to the young couples I describe above; maybe they already are. We can’t afford to see such towns stagnate.

The towns I really worry about are those of a thousand or two residents, once vital farm-market communities, now often declining. Here I see a scary, possible trend: the unwillingness of professionals to move to these communities — in which they work.

In my area, I know of two recently appointed rural school superintendents who have refused to leave their residences in larger cities nearby, to relocate into the school districts they will lead.

Ditto for a couple of successful dentists who operate a large regional dental practice from a small town. This unwillingness would have been unheard of when I was a youngster. These are exactly the types small towns need for leadership, energy and creative thinking.

Unfortunately, these little towns have nowhere to turn but to themselves. If they can’t make their towns positive enough to attract the people who work there, especially the professionals, they will waste away.

People will continue, as always, to seek out opportunity, obviously defined a bit differently for each young couple. Each town has to put on its best bib and tucker, you might say, to draw new residents.

For many years, Jim Nowlan was a senior fellow and political science professor at the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign. He has worked for three unindicted governors and published a weekly newspaper in central Illinois.

IDOIA announces dates for junior livestock and horse shows

SPRINGFIELD - The Illinois Department of Agriculture (IDOIA) will host junior livestock and horse shows providing Illinois' youth with an opportunity to show their animals during an unprecedented show season.

The Junior Livestock Expo will take place in Springfield over the course of two weekends in September. Beef, sheep, dairy goats, pygmy goats and rabbits will all show Sept. 11-13. Swine, dairy cattle and meat goats will have their turn in the show ring on Sept. 18-20.

A Junior Horse Show will take place on the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds. The show will run for two weekends on the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds, with English showing Aug. 29-30 and Western Sept. 5-6.

need to recognize our junior exhibitors who work year round preparing for the fairs," said Jerry Costello II, Acting IDOA Director. "We are excited to provide modified shows that will provide an opportunity for young adults to exhibit their animals safely following the Restore Illinois plan."

Shows are limited to Illinois residents between the ages of 8-21. The entry fee for those participating in the Junior Horse Show is $10. Junior Livestock Entry Fees are as follows:
