People using technology to keep in touch during ‘shelter-in-place’

Gordon Woods

CLINTON — With a statewide shelter-in-place order significantly reducing traffic, conducting business and other activities currently is more difficult. But people are using technology to bridge the gap.

Since Gov. J.B. Pritzker last week enacted the shelter-in-place order to limit the spread of the coronavirus, vehicular and people traffic have dropped. Restaurants already were operating on a pick-up basis only for the time being under an earlier order that closed bars and eating establishments to walk-in customers.

Businesses classified as essential continue to operate, but most have instituted practices to limit person-to-person contact.

Other services, such as Vespaian Warner Public Library, have pulled out the technology stops to stay connected with their patrons. Churches, too, have gone into live and video production on a small scale to communicate with their congregations.

Warner Library staff already used video and live streaming on their Facebook page as part of their regular updates and programs for the public. But, since temporarily closing its doors to patrons, the library is exploiting the positive attributes of Facebook by offering a schedule of video and live streaming events.

“Songs with Wendy,” “Virtual Toddler Time and “Storytime with Paula (Lopatic)” are helping to keep kids occupied. There also was “Virtual Breakfast with an Otter,” and library executive director Bobbi Perryman hosted a library history chat, showing off some of the library’s historical artifacts.

Churches, too, marshalled their Internet reserves to reach its members.

Many have started using Facebook Live for their Sunday services and other activities, instructing members when to go online to watch and listen.

Assembly of God, Clinton Church of God, Clinton United Methodist Church, First Baptist Church, First Church of the Nazarene and Wapella Christian Church are among the churches live streaming their services on Facebook, and St. Patrick Catholic Church, Wapella, is streaming Mass.

See list on page A6

Some churches, are posting videos of sermons, while other are streaming services and Bible studies.

Kenney Christian Church began this past weekend using telephone conference calls to get their Sunday message to church members.

Some local governmental bodies, such as the Clintonia Township board, also have decided to employ the tried and true technology by inviting the public to call in to listen to its upcoming meeting.

COVID stimulus passes

Help would go to individuals, health care, small businesses, corporations, local & state governments

Gordon Woods

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Senate was set to vote on Wednesday for a $2 trillion coronavirus stimulus package aimed at helping businesses and individuals.

But, late Wednesday, some Republicans balked, saying parts of the bill involving expanded unemployment insurance would encourage recipients to not return to work. They said some workers stood to receive more in unemployment than they earned on the job.

Members of the Senate finally voted in the late evening, 96-0 to approve the package. Four senators were absent from the session. Senator John Thune (R), of South Dakota left earlier to go home and self-quarantine after reporting he felt ill.

A summary of the bill Workers, hospitals, industry as well as state and local governments would receive help from the federal government if legislators pass the bill, according to major news outlets.

Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer and White House Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin met six times on Monday, working until the early hours on Tuesday to formulate a deal. In a statement, Schumer said he was pleased with the result.

Farm Bureau urging farmers, ag industry to donate surplus masks

CLINTON — Due to a national strain on the U.S. healthcare system from COVID-19, there is currently a shortage of medical personal protective equipment, specifically N95 masks.

DeWitt County Farm Bureau is calling upon farmers, grain elevators, construction companies, union laborers, and individuals who use these masks as PPE, to donate any surplus new/unused masks.

The DeWitt County Farm Bureau is participating in F.A.R.M. for Health, which stands for Farmers and Ranchers Masks for Health. This is a campaign in coordination with numerous county Farm Bureaus across the state of Illinois to ensure that our rural healthcare workers have proper supplies and PPE during this pandemic.

“Farmers, ag workers use those N95 masks to clean out grain bins and work in conditions with less than ideal air quality around the farm. We are hoping that individuals and businesses will check their shops, offices, and farm trucks to collect any surplus, unused masks,” said manager, Allison Reinecke. “We’ll be working with the DeWitt Piatt Bi-County Health Department to make sure that those masks are distributed where they are needed locally.”

A collection box is located just outside the front entrance of the DeWitt County Farm Bureau office, 1060 IL-54, Clinton, where individuals can drop off their unused masks any time.

Due to the shelter in place order, DCFB asks that individuals drop off masks if they feel the trip is considered essential travel. For a full list of participating drop off locations or any other information, visit Farm4Health on Facebook, or email farm4health@outlook.com.

For more information, contact DeWitt County Farm Bureau at 217-935-2126 or email dcfb3@frontier.com.

Amber Waves

Cleaving is a lost cause

Welcome to my little corner of culinary delights. I gave a précis on kitchen knives in past articles. I left cleavers out since they are rarely used in a commercial kitchen and next to useless in a home kitchen. However, I think you should know why.

One must not confuse the cleaver with a Japanese vegetable chopper called a nakiri. It takes a lot of practice to handle a nakiri accurately. It appears to me that its use is mostly for show. I find that the chef’s knife can do the job better and has more versatility and class.

The cleaver gets its name from the job it is designed to do. One definition given in the Webster’s New World dictionary is “to divide by a blow as with an ax; spit. It is to sever, to disunite.” Although some dictionaries may disagree with me, to cleave does not include slicing. The cleaver’s job is therefore limited and normally used for a specialized job called butchering. In college, the only time a cleaver was used was in butchering class. We divided a whole pig’s carcass down the center. This would be the preliminary process for getting the carcass ready to break down into various cuts. The three cutting tools exclusively used in wholesale butchering would be the cleaver, saw, and scimitar knife. Unlike your flimsy household butcher knife, my personal scimitar has a 14-inch blade, it is thicker and inflexible. It has a generous convex curve along the belly sweeping up to a sharp point. My scimitar impressed my instructor.

The Culinary Corner
By Chef Roger Joss

The size of a cleaver is based upon the length of the blade. The largest we used in college was an 8-inch. I have a wicked 10-inch cleaver hanging above my butcher’s block at home. It looks like the type one might see used in a cheap horror movie. I have several different cleaver sizes. My smallest is a 5¼ inch. I use it to break bones for use in making stock. The blade should be thick and heavy. Most cleavers today are made of stainless steel. Naturally, I prefer carbon steel. If the blade is not hefty, it is worthless in my estimation.

For most cleaving jobs, use a firm blow. When dividing a carcass along the spine, I needed to use heavy blows. I have seen cleavers that had their top side (spine) dented. Apparently, some people think they need to use a hammer on them. Never ever abuse your cleavers. Try sharpening them and only use them for what they were designed. Pick the right size and weight for the job. If you feel a need to use a hammer, you are doing something wrong.

About the only need for a cleaver in a household environment would be for cracking small bones to make stock. Otherwise, do not bother purchasing a cleaver. For something like turkey bones, use a heavy but short bladed cleaver.

Until next time, peace to all.

Support for community is a top priority

In today’s challenging times, Edward Jones financial advisors are thinking about the health of their clients, their families and their colleagues, what’s happening in their communities and the effect of Covid-19 on the markets.

“Most importantly, we want everyone to know we’re taking steps to protect the health and well-being of our clients, associates, families and communities,” Bryce Starkey says. “We’re right here in the community with you, going through this together as neighbors and friends. And we will get through this together.”

To help reduce the impact of the coronavirus, financial advisors are taking several steps, including suspending face-to-face visits with clients, holding virtual meetings and training sessions and ensuring office spaces are sanitized and disinfected.

“Like everyone, we really have to do our part to help mitigate this crisis,” Starkey says. “But since our entire reason for being in business is to help our clients enjoy more rewarding lives, we feel that our efforts now are just an extension of that.”

Of course, people’s financial situations also weigh on their minds, Starkey says.

“The current market selloff is certainly concerning, but it seems to be driven more by fear and panic than by economic or financial reality,” Starkey says.

Monetary and fiscal policy are necessary, but at the end of the day, it will be the medical progress that will dictate the timeline for reducing market volatility and the ultimate rebound in stocks, Starkey says.

Starkey said Edward Jones expects daily volatility to persist until new virus cases begin to slow, but added that investors should find optimism in these facts: unemployment is near a 50-year low, with solid wage growth; there’s been an uptick in the housing market, which may accelerate due to declining mortgage rates; and the Federal Reserve has cut short-term interest rates back near 0 percent.

Furthermore, Starkey says, the drop in investment prices may indicate that the financial markets have already “priced in” the likelihood of a short-term recession.

“This could mean that we’ve already endured much of the stock market pain,” Starkey says. “And even a short recession is of concern to all of us, since it’s likely to bring at least a temporary disruption to an otherwise strong labor market.”

For investors wondering what to do now, Starkey offers these suggestions:

First, remember why you’re investing.

“With the market declining, people will be tempted to change their investment strategies,” Starkey says. “But they need to keep in mind that most of their financial goals, such as a comfortable retirement, are long-term in nature - a lot longer-term than the shelf life of the coronavirus. If investors have established a long-term strategy that’s appropriate for their needs, they should stick with it, no matter what today’s headlines are.”

However, Starkey does suggest that individuals who are particularly concerned over the current results of their investment statements might want to evaluate their risk tolerance.

“If you are truly losing sleep over what’s going on in the markets, it’s possible your portfolio is positioned too aggressively for the amount of risk with which you’re comfortable,” Starkey says. “In that case, you should work with your financial advisor to see if you need to adjust your investment mix to include more fixed-income securities, which can provide some downside protection, but you’ll be making a trade-off, because you’ll also be affecting your long-term growth potential.”

Finally, Starkey says, now might actually be a good time for investors to consider actually adding to their portfolios.

“Right now, many stocks are at their best values in more than a decade,” Starkeysays. “If you need to rebalance your portfolio, this could be a time to do so.”

Ultimately, Starkey says, investors need to realize that, while we are in somewhat uncharted times, the temptation to panic should be fought.

“All our emotions are running high right now,” Starkey says. “And while everyone’s top priority should be to protect themselves, their families and their communities, it’s still important not to lose sight of their financial well-being. And for that, the best thing all of us can do is look past short-term downturns and maintain the discipline to keep investing in all types of markets.”

Stay put to stay out of harm's way

A show of hands, please: How many of us are getting nervous since the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention announced that seniors and those with medical conditions should stay at home as much as possible due to the coronavirus? (Those medical conditions include heart disease, diabetes and lung disease.)

I've spent several days wondering whether I actually have to go out as often to get the things I need. I've learned:

* Petco, PetSmart and Chewy, the pet food and pet supplies companies, will deliver. If you get on a repeat delivery schedule, the prices are lower than at the stores, and the heavy packages come right to your door.

* Instead of standing in line at the always-crowded post office, I can order stamps online at usps.com. Call 1-800-782-6724 to learn more.

* My grocery store still doesn't deliver, but if I order online they will at least bring my purchases out to the car.

* CVS, however, does deliver, and as of now, it's

by Matilda Charles

free. In my area, either the post office or a courier will make the delivery. I decided to have my prescriptions sent by mail.

* I made a few calls and two restaurants in my area will now deliver when they didn't before.

* There's even a mobile oil-change company that will come to my house to service my car.

So, what will I do with all my non-shopping spare time, now that I don't need to go out as often? My list looks like this: order puzzles and paperbacks from Amazon, start spring cleaning, begin outlining a novel to write this summer, sign up on Duolingo [www.duolingo.com] for free language lessons on the computer, and order seeds (and all the supplies) to get a head start on growing a few vegetables on the porch this year.

Questions & Answers

General

Question:
I run a bed and breakfast. By this time every year, I am tired of all the paperwork involved with filing taxes. Is there an easier way for small businesses to file W-2s for their employees?

Answer:
Absolutely. If you are a small business owner or entrepreneur, you should check out Social Security's Business Services Online (BSO) website. There, you can file your employees' W-2s and W-2cs electronically and print out the W-2s to provide paper copies to your employees. You also can verify the Social Security numbers of your employees. Our online services are easy to use, fast, and secure. Visit our BSO page at www.socialsecurity.gov/bso.

Question:
I recently applied for a replacement Social Security card, but I might be moving before it arrives in the mail. What should I do if I move before I get it?

Answer:
Once we have verified all your documents and processed your application, it takes approximately 10 to 14 days to receive your replacement Social Security card. If you move after applying for your new card, notify the post office of your change of address and the post office will forward your card to your new address. If you do not receive your card, please contact your local Social Security office. To get a replacement, you will have to resubmit your evidence of identity and U.S. citizenship, or your lawful immigration status and authority to work. You can learn more at www.socialsecurity.gov.

Retirement

Question:
How are my retirement benefits calculated?

Answer:
Your Social Security benefits are based on earnings averaged over your lifetime. Your actual earnings are first adjusted or "indexed" to account for changes in average wages since the year the earnings were received. Then we calculate your average monthly indexed earnings during the 35 years in which you earned the most. We apply a formula to these earnings and arrive at your basic benefit. This is the amount you would receive at your full retirement age. You may be able to estimate your benefit by using our Retirement Estimator, which offers estimates based on your Social Security earnings. You can find the Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

Where now?

First, the political landscape of the country goes upside down in the Democratic primary. Then, within days, a totally unconnected event called the COVID-19 virus rears its ugly head with vengeance and the physical health and economic health of the nation are thrown on life support.

Political and medical leaders can plan for disasters. In all honesty, this nation's leaders had in place plans for local and regional disasters of a medical nature. The stock markets had in place automatic stop selling arrangements if the market fell by certain percentages. The planning was there. The problem is that the world has changed, especially over the past 25 years.

Economists like to talk about micro and macro economics, which usually respectively refers to local situations and national situations. The macro has changed from national to the world. Look at your cars, your medications, your tools, your furniture and yes look at the very food we consume. Much of those items come from places well outside of our country.

On the economic side, stocks are traded on a 24-hour basis throughout the world. Americans no longer stay within 100 miles of their residences. Americans travel the world for business and pleasure. The rest of the world is doing the same. The macro scale has become grossly enlarged and the governmental, medical and business leaders largely saw only opportunities and rarely discussed the consequences of this global expansion.

It is unfair to blame either political party for where we are. The world used to have natural borders and localized quarantines that stopped disease from rapidly spreading. Markets were local and reflected the season. Craftsmen were a part of the community, and little was manufactured outside of the community.

The world has changed to a global economy and global travel. The nations have simply not considered the consequences of globalization. When it is working, it is great and all are happy. We have failed to consider the true impact of global economics and viral contagions in our macro theories.

This week showed that our national leaders (Trump, McConnell and Schumer) could actually work together. It also showed what could happen if a leader chose to present a personal agenda rather than a national agenda (see Speaker Pelosi's interventions). The world has now seen its physical and economic health greatly harmed by a virus that has crossed all borders and is creating destruction in all of its definitions in all nations. This is not the time for petty politics.

President Trump has stated that he is concerned that the cure is more harmful than the disease. Governor Pritzker has stated there is no livelihood without life. Both gentlemen's comments have merit.

We must protect individual life, but if we fail to provide a working economy then poverty and despair will occur and that ultimately results in disease and death. There are no simple answers.

The current Senate proposal is a radical step to move society forward in the midst of great difficulties. The medical community is making remarkable efforts to control this epidemic. Now is not the time for philosophic debate. The world needs to become very pragmatic. If something works, use it. If something isn't working don't complain, try something else.

Six tips to help you stay well

How can we best protect ourselves from ANY virus? We MUST be proactive in our own health!

1. Proper nutrition. Eat healthy foods. This isn't rocket science. Rolling through the drive thru for every meal and snacking on sugar treats all day is only weakening your immune system. Drink WATER!! It flushes toxins from your body. You wouldn't wash your hands with Diet Soda... don't rely on it to wash your insides either!

2. Get moving! Stay active. Inactivity is why we are more sick in the winter months anyway... we stay inside and don't move! Take a walk. Quarantine doesn't mean you can't go outside and exercise. Do an at home work-out. There are thousands of them posted online!

3. REST! Take time to slow down and get enough sleep. Sleeping is our most restorative time of the day!

4. Think well! Turn off the news. Stop scrolling online every two minutes. Living in fear will stress you out and REDUCE your immune response to any illness. Surround yourself with positive people. Read a good book, listen to music, pray, meditate.

5. Practice good hygiene. Keep yourself and your environment clean.

6. Make sure your nervous system is firing on all eight cylinders! Get ADJUSTED! Removing the nerve interference and restoring connection from brain to body is crucial for optimal health! Your nervous system controls every cell, tissue and organ in your body. If your nervous system isn't healthy...neither is the rest of you!

Love to you all!
Be well!

The real hero is Dr. You! That's because the power that made your body is the power that heals your body. If there isn't any nerve interference. We're nervous system experts. We locate and reduce nervous system interferences, usually along your spine, so your body can work as it was designed. Without interference, your nervous system can correctly control and regulate every cell of your body.

Weather History

March 27

• 1890: Several strong to violent tornadoes affected southern Illinois. One tornado near Rockwood threw 18 inch thick trees across the Mississippi River into Illinois. Another tornado crossed the river further downstream and tore through Grand Tower, where some of the 27 destroyed homes were completely swept away, before lifting north of Carbondale. A family of tornadoes affected areas along the Ohio River, while another tornado destroyed 32 buildings in Olney.

• 1961: Intense low pressure produced high winds of 50 to 80 mph across much of Illinois. At the Joliet airport, a wind gust of 100 mph was recorded before the wind gage was blown away. A gust of 74 mph at Capital Airport in Springfield caused damage to a hangar. In Dwight (Livingston County), one person was killed in a car accident when a dust storm reduced visibility to near zero.

One of the major sticking points between Republicans and Democrats was insistence by Democrats that there be oversight of money going to large corporations. Democrats also wanted federal help for unemployment insurance benefit programs.

The final bill contains Republican and Democratic proposals, including $500 billion in federal funding for big businesses and municipalities hit hard by the coronavirus outbreak, as well as a direct one-time cash payment to Americans plus four months of expanded unemployment insurance.

Tuesday afternoon, Democratic leaders and Senate majority leader Mitch McConnell reached an agreement.

The bill still must pass the House, where Democrats have discussed passing the bill by unanimous consent in order to expedite the bill's passage and to protect members by keeping them at their home.

The package includes:

- A $500 billion loan program for businesses
- The bill includes language that will prevent members of congress and businesses owned by the Trump family from receiving any of the stimulus money, The Guardian reported.
- Increase in unemployment insurance by up to $600 per week for four months. The money is in addition to the amount states pay as base unemployment

- $150 billion for hospitals treating coronavirus patients.

- Increased aid to state and local governments

- Direct payments to adults would include one-time $1,200 checks sent to most adults making $75,000 or less annually, based on past tax returns. A $500 payment also would be sent to cover every child in qualifying households.

- Loans to small businesses would include $367 billion in the bill aimed at providing loans for small businesses, according to Vox.

CLINTON Journal News

How to support local businesses during mandatory restrictions

(METRO) — The outbreak of the novel coronavirus COVID-19 throughout the United States in March 2020 transformed American lives in ways many might never have imagined possible. Social distancing recommendations and restrictions on gatherings of more than a handful of people had a ripple effect on the economy that adversely affected many small businesses.

Small businesses are the backbones of local communities. According to the U.S. Small Business Administration, small businesses make up 99.9 percent of all businesses in the United States and employ 59.9 million employees. The SBA notes that the accommodation and food services sector is the second largest small business industry. Many of these businesses have been hit especially hard as more and more of their regular customers stay at home in the wake of government advisories promoting social distancing.

But small businesses are vital to local communities, and there are ways to support them and help them stay afloat as they confront the challenges posed by the COVID-19 outbreak.

- Order delivery. It's still possible to enjoy foods from your favorite local restaurants. Many restaurants that had not previously done so have begun to offer delivery services, be it curbside or at-home, and this can provide a great respite for families who have had to cook three meals a day at home for their entire families for extended periods of time. Curbside delivery has made it possible to get takeout meals without compromising social distancing recommendations.

- Purchase a gift card. Gift cards can help small businesses generate revenue at a time when their doors are largely closed to the public. This can be vital to these businesses' survival, and it gives consumers something to look forward when life returns to normal.

- Help market local businesses. Spread the word when local businesses deliver in the wake of the restrictions put on them due to COVID-19. Share these experiences via social media or online reviews, and urge your neighbors to patronize these businesses.

Local businesses are suffering during the COVID-19 outbreak. But communities can come together to support business owners and their employees to help these vital businesses stem the tide.

How to clean when faced with a shortage of cleaning supplies

(METRO) — In light of concerns about COVID-19, various health organizations have issued specific instructions on how to maintain personal safety and cleanliness. These recommendations involve using common household products to sanitize homes, offices and public spaces. As people take such precautions, many are stocking up on extra essentials — resulting in shortages.

Everything from hand sanitizers to paper towels may be hard to find on grocery store shelves, leaving some to wonder what they can do to remain safe without sanitizers?

The Environmental Protection Agency states that coronaviruses are some of the easiest types of viruses to kill because they have an envelope around them that enables them to merge with other cells and infect them. If that protective coating can be disrupted, the virus can't do its job. For those having trouble finding well-known cleaning agents, these alternatives may suffice.

Hot water and soap

The reason hand-washing is at the top of the list of sanitizing methods is because it is so effective at washing away viruses and bacteria. Friction from scrubbing with soap and water can help break the protective envelope, states the EPA. Soap and water can clean all surfaces in a home, especially when applying a little extra elbow grease.

Hydrogen peroxide

As people clear isopropyl (rubbing alcohol) off the shelves, do not discount hydrogen peroxide. The CDC says household hydrogen peroxide at 3 percent concentration can deactivate rhinovirus, the virus that causes the common cold, within six to eight minutes of contact. Coronavirus is easier to destroy than rhinovirus, so hydrogen peroxide may be effective at combatting that virus as well.

Natural items can be used for general cleaning, but have not been endorsed for use on COVID-19 disinfection. In lieu of shortages, white vinegar, baking soda pastes and citrus oils and juices could fill the void of chemically-based cleansers for other home tasks.

Who is at elevated risk for COVID-19?

COVID-19 continues to dominate headlines across the globe. This novel coronavirus first made headlines in late 2019 after an outbreak in Wuhan, the sprawling capital city in China's Hubei province. The virus has since spread beyond China's borders, leading to school closures and changes in public life, such as the shutting down of professional sports leagues, that many might never have thought they would see in their lifetimes.

Despite the relative infancy of COVID-19, doctors have learned much about it, including who might be most at risk. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, early information out of China revealed that some groups are at higher risk of getting very sick from COVID-19 than others. Older adults and people who have serious chronic medical conditions are at the greatest risk of getting very sick from COVID-19. Heart disease, diabetes and lung disease are the chronic medical conditions that appear to make people especially vulnerable to sickness from COVID-19.

How people in at-risk groups can reduce their risk of getting sick

It's important that elderly people and people with chronic medical conditions take their risk for getting sick from COVID-19 seriously, as the virus had already contributed to thousands of deaths by early March 2020. The CDC notes that it is especially important that people at elevated risk take actions to reduce their risk of getting sick with the disease. The following strategies can be part of a proactive approach that may help at-risk people lower their risk of getting sick from COVID-19.

- Stock up on health supplies. Contact your physician and arrange to obtain extra necessary medications so you do not have to leave your home should an outbreak occur in your area. If that's not plausible, the CDC recommends signing up for mail-order medications. Stock up on over-the-counter medications and medical supplies, including everyday items like tissues, so you don't have to leave the house if an outbreak occurs.
- Stock up on groceries. Make sure you have enough groceries on hand so you can stay at home if restrictions on leaving home are put in place during an outbreak.
- Embrace the basics. Basic strategies like avoiding people who are sick; washing your hands with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, especially after blowing your nose, coughing, sneezing or spending time in public; avoiding touching your face, nose, eyes, etc.; and avoiding crowds can help to reduce your risk of getting sick from COVID-19.

Since the initial outbreak of COVID-19 in China in late-December 2019, doctors have learned that certain people are especially vulnerable to getting sick from the virus. Such people can take certain steps that may reduce their risk of getting sick. More information about COVID-19 is available at www.cdc.gov & warnerhospital.org.

The defense starts with Diamonds and Declarer ruffs the third round. Declarer has lost two tricks already, must later lose the ♠A, and appears to have an inescapable Heart loser. Down one? Or perhaps there is a way to escape that Heart loser after all?

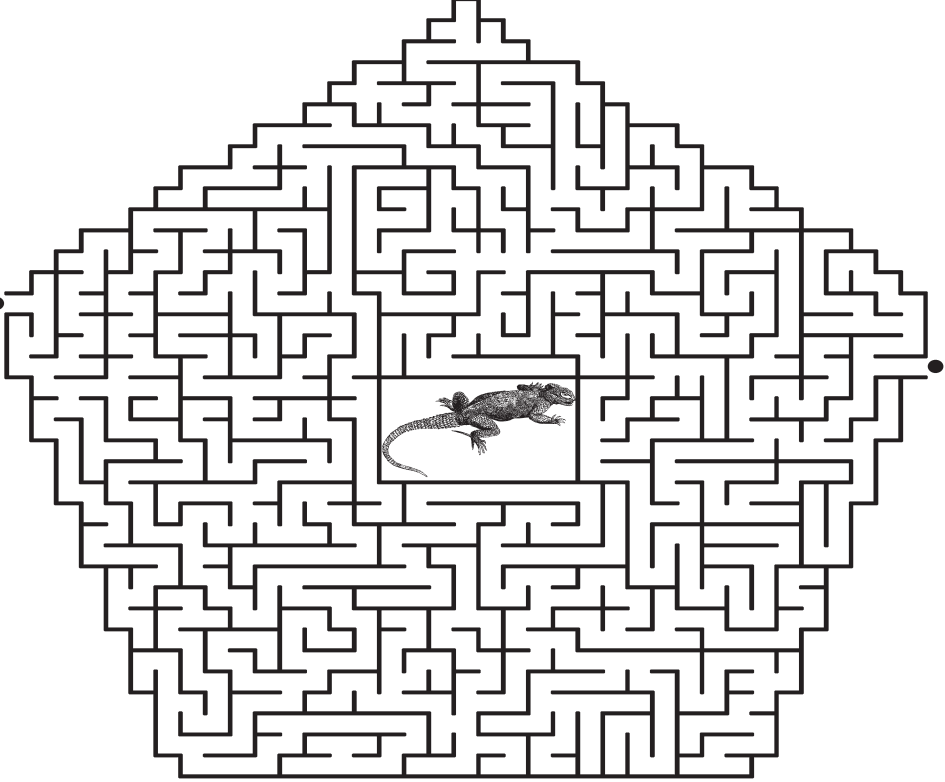

Declarer makes her contract by “stripping the hand”. After ruffing the Diamond, she cashes the ♠A, then the ♠K, and ruffs a Club. Then she cashes the ♥A and ♥K and plays a trump. Her hope is that West started with the singleton Ace of trumps in which case there will be no safe exit. Whichever minor suit West chooses to lead, Declarer will be able to ruff in one hand and pitch the “inescapable” Heart loser from the other hand.

A bouquet for Declarer, who did well to grab the only chance she had to make her contract. But a brickbat to West who apparently was fast asleep during the entire proceedings. He walked straight into that end-play and could have avoided it by cashing the trump Ace at Trick 2, before persisting with Diamonds. After that defense there really would be no way to avoid a Heart loser.
