Oregon SuperValu owner says store is working hard to keep up with demand

By Brad Jennings Fditor

OREGON - It has been a little crazy lately for Jim Kaufman, owner of the Oregon Super Valu grocery store

"We didn't ever anticipate what was going to happen," he said at the start of another busy day last week.

But that doesn't mean the run on grocery stores brought on by the CO-VID-19 virus and the stateimposed shelter in place directive was a total shock to the longtime grocer. He said he heard from relatives in the Chicago suburbs a couple of weeks ago that Walmart was running out of toilet paper. That was surely a sign.

"I got kind of a jump start on it because of them,' he said.

That means Kaufman started bumping up his orders early to try and keep up with the coming demand. But, why the run on toilet paper?

Kaufman said people saw that it was happening overseas and started buying it in bulk. And when Walmart started running out, that really pushed people to buy.

'It's something you don't want to be without really," he said.

Kaufman, whose family bought the store in 1970, said people are buying enough to last two or three months. He said others are buying it to stockpile and try to sell at a higher price.

He said the store is still getting toilet paper in regularly and limiting the number of packages customers can buy, but it doesn't last long. He said he always holds some back for customers who really need it, like the elderly.

Kaufman said with the closure of stadiums and restaurants - other places people use toilet paper that put a lot of pressure on grocery stores.

"The biggest problem is the grocery stores got kind of blindsided in the United States," he said.

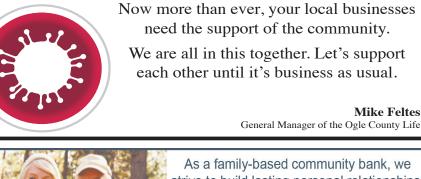

He said his meat department employees are working long days to try and keep up. He said people are buying a lot of meat, fruits and vegetables. And bread is hard to keep in stock.

"The bakers can't keep up," Kaufman said. He said eggs are also difficult to keep in stock. He said Mexico is taking more eggs than usual, and the government is using 900,000 eggs a day to try and develop a vaccine for the virus.

SHOPPING: His advise is don't panic

frozen items on hand in case

Kaufman does have some advice for people on how to handle grocery shopping right now. "I would say don't panic," he said. "Buy what you need." He said it doesn't hurt to have extra canned goods and the shutdown is extended. And if there is something you just can't be without, just buy a little extra of that item. Kaufman also praised his staff, who have been working staff, who have been working long, hard hours. "My employees have been killing it," he said. And while a few out of town people have complained, Kaufman said his regular Ogle County shoppers have been "just wonderful."

He said that while people have changed where they are buying their food, there is still plenty of it.

"The world is not running out of food," he said.

Area seamstress making protective masks

By Andrew Heiserman Staff Writer

ROCHELLE – As healthcare facilities and providers across the country face a shortage of protective masks, one local seamstress is doing her part to help keep them supplied.

Zoe Ujcic began sewing at a young age, but it was not until the end of high school when she began to take it seriously. After high school she went to the College of DuPage taking tailoring and alteration classes to become a fashion designer.

Once she completed her classes, she worked as a seamstress focusing on alterations, fixing clothes to get away from fast fashion. Doing this is more sustainable than always buying something new rather than repairing it.

"If your zipper breaks, come to me and I will fix it, rather than buying a brand-new coat," said Ujcic. "It is just a little bit more efficient."

Recently, Ujcic has seen the shortage of available protective masks on the news and decided she wanted to do something to help. She did research and learned that she did not have the resources necessary to make N95 respirator masks, but that did not stop her.

After doing more research she learned that by using a three-layer blend of materials, she could make a reusable, surgical-like mask. The masks are made of two layers of cotton, one layer of woven material, such as Kevlar and a wire to help keep it snug against the face.

All masks are machine washed, dried and immediately put in Ziploc bags. While the masks are not manufactured in a medical facility, they protect against multiple substances.

"I have so much extra fabric and will be home for the next two weeks just like everyone else, so why not do what I can to help," said Ujcic. "They are pretty heavy duty and protect against aerosols and liquid from getting in. It is much better than nothing."

Currently she is making them for those in need, such as medical facilities, nursing homes, and a few nurses that have reached out. She plans to continue making masks until either supplies run out or the demand is met.

If anybody has extra one-eighth-inch elastic or 20-gauge wire to donate to help continue making masks, reach out to cicalterations@gmail.com or Yvonne Brass on Facebook. All donations are greatly appreciated.

MOMENTS IN TIME

* On April 14, 1818, Noah Webster, a Yale-educated lawyer with an avid interest in language and education, publishes his American Dictionary of the English Language. Webster's dictionary was one of the first to include distinctly American words, introducing more than 10,000 "Americanisms."

* On April 13, 1870, the Metropolitan Museum of Art is officially incorporated in New York City. The city stipulated that the collection be kept open to the public year-round and free of charge. The first object the Met acquired was a Roman sarcophagus.

* On April 16, 1881, on the streets of Dodge City, famous Western lawman and gunfighter Bat Masterson fights his last gun battle. He would live another 40 years. Masterson had his first shootout in 1876 in Texas over the affections of a dance hall girl named Molly Brennan.

* On April 19, 1897, John J. McDermott of New York wins the first Boston Marathon, a measured distance of 24.5 miles from the Irvington Oval in Boston to Metcalf's Mill in Ashland. The marathon's distance was changed in 1908 to its current length of 26 miles 385 yards.

* On April 17, 1945, U.S. Lt. Col. Boris T. Pash commandeers over half a ton of uranium at Strassfut, Germany, in an effort to prevent the Soviets from developing an A-bomb. Pash headed a group searching for German scientists to prevent the Soviets from capturing them.

* On April 15, 1959, new Cuban leader Fidel Castro visits the United States. President Dwight Eisenhower, however, had no intention of meeting with the communist revolutionary and instead went to the golf course.

* On April 18, 1983, the U.S. embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, is almost completely destroyed by a suicide car-bomb explosion that kills 63 people, including 17 Americans. The terrorist attack was carried out in protest of the U.S. military presence in Lebanon.

LIFE letters' policy

Concise letters are most likely to be chosen for publication, but the use of any material is at the discretion of management. All letters must be signed or they will not be considered for publication.

During election times, no letters written by the candidates endorsing themselves will be considered for publication.

Éditing may be necessary for space, clarity or to avoid obscenity or libel, but ideas will not be altered. Writers are urged to use discretion and refrain from sarcasm or personal attacks.

Criticism of individuals or organizations that is not broached tactfully will jeopardize the publication of a letter. Letters will be published in the order that they are received, unless there is a time factor involved, space permitting.

Social distancing is not my strength

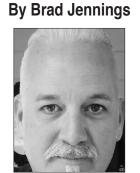

Here we are, social distancing with the best of them.

For some, this is a dream come true. There are plenty of people who do their best to avoid other humans as much as possible. Others, of course, need to have human interaction in their lives. Not just because they like people, but because it is a part of their job.

All of us, no matter how we feel, find ourselves much more distanced these days, good or bad. I certainly feel for those who make money working at or running businesses that rely on humans being there – bars, restaurants, dentists and many, many more.

Many of us find ourselves working from home. It's not a bad thing, to be sure. And with a great Internet connection and a solid computer, we can get most of what we need done with no problem.

But there are the downsides. For example, I find myself counting our remainLiving the Life ing toilet paper rolls over and over. I can't say I have ever worried about toilet paper before, but I find myself being more obsessed than Mr. Whipple. (Younger folks might want to Google that).

I am also trying hard to find ways to avoid doing those "big projects" my beautiful wife, who is also working from home, has been suggesting.

"Ah, I would love to go through all of the storage in the basement, but I'm busy writing my column and worrying about how much toilet paper we have left."

I would love to get out and take a nice walk during the lunch hour, but our weather has been anything but cooperative. Snow? Check. Rain? Check. Beautiful sunny spring day? Nope – at least not yet.

So what have you been doing during this mandated isolation? I have plenty of friends who are happily doing projects, putting together puzzles, streaming shows on TV or reading books. Many of my musician friends are writing or learning songs, honing their craft or complaining about the cancellation of all live gigs.

This is a unique time, that is for sure. We have never really gone through anything like this before. Thankfully, it seems that most people are taking it seriously – well, not in Florida where they are pretending nothing is happening. What is wrong with Florida?

My dogs were thrilled that we were working from home – at first. Dogs love the attention and are glad to snuggle on your lap and happy to accept extra treats.

But when they realize you actually have to work and can't just be their play buddy, they quickly throw you the stink eye. In short, they become cats.

I am hoping this shelter in place thing doesn't last too long. I understand it and I fully support it. But I am not one to just stay in one place for too long. I want to get out and talk with people and go out with friends and enjoy some social interaction.

In the meantime, I will be here working between bouts of counting toilet paper rolls and worrying that I will run out of hairspray. Hey, pandemic or not, I have to keep up with my hair routine.

The unraveling of the American democratic web

The patriot in me believes that American democracy is here to stay. The hardheaded realist says the odds are against it. The record shows that democracies are rare, unnatural, fragile things that will sooner or later fall apart.

The first democracies arose over two thousand years ago in ancient Athens and Rome. Athenian democracy can be said to have lasted about 250 years or less, although elements remained in place for some time afterward. The Roman Republic survived for almost 400 years before it began a century-long slide into dictatorship and eventual rule by emperor.

That's not a long time compared to the thousands of years of monarchies, dictatorships, and oligarchies that came before and after. It wasn't until almost 2,000 years after the collapse of the Roman Republic that democracy reappeared with the American Constitution.

The system that we Americans created and that others around the world have since adopted isn't just about elections and majority rule. Civil liberties, checks and balances, and the rule of law are among the builtin safeguards designed to keep it from falling back into tyranny. But it now appears that, at over 200 years old, modern democracy is showing its age and may be following the ancient ones into decline and fall.

The trend shows up in a yearly Democracy Index published by the British magazine, The Economist, which ranks the nations of the world according to how democratic they are. The Index reveals a decline in the number that qualify as "full democracies." The United States, for its part, has been slipping in the index since it was first published in 2006. In 2016, we dropped from a full democracy to a "flawed democracy," with a ranking of 21 out of 167 countries. As of 2019, our ranking has further slipped to 25.

Having lived all our lives under democracy, it's hard for us to appreciate how uncommon and delicate it is, and how much it depends on an elaborate web of institutions and traditions for its survival. Our complacency is misguided and dangerous. The Democracy Index portrays a web that's beginning to unravel here and around the world.

Ancient Rome's Republic fell apart under the pressure of severe changes in its society and economy, brought about by years of war and a growing divide between rich and poor. Historians, such as Garret C. Fagan in his Great Courses lecture, describe how the loss of common identity weakened respect for the institutions and traditions that had formerly held it together. More and more, the Republic was dominated by demagogues and dictators until it ceased to be a republic in all but name, and finally abandoned even the pretense of democracy.

We and other modern democracies seem to be following a similar course. This time, technology, urbanization, income inequality, and globalization are among the forces reshaping the economy and splintering society into irreconcilable tribes. The result, as in ancient times, is a government that increasingly fails to represent the people as a whole.

The smart money says that American democracy won't survive these trends, but there are signs that we could beat the odds. The current Democratic presidential primary contest reveals a widespread longing for a return to a more respectful attitude toward democratic institutions and traditions, and for civility in public discourse. My reading is that many Republicans are yearning for the same.

If I'm right about that, American democracy might, in spite of the odds, turn away from its historic arc into decay and ruin.

Be wary of power officials try to take

Dear Editor,

Listen closely to the rhetoric our political leaders are using!

Watching Gov. Pritzker's address "ordering" the closure of public and private facilities the other day really irritated me! He is elected and has authority, and indeed responsibility, to make these decisions for publicly funded institutions, but he has absolutely no authority to dictate to private business or private citizens. He can request, he can ask, he can cajole, he can even beg, but he cannot order!

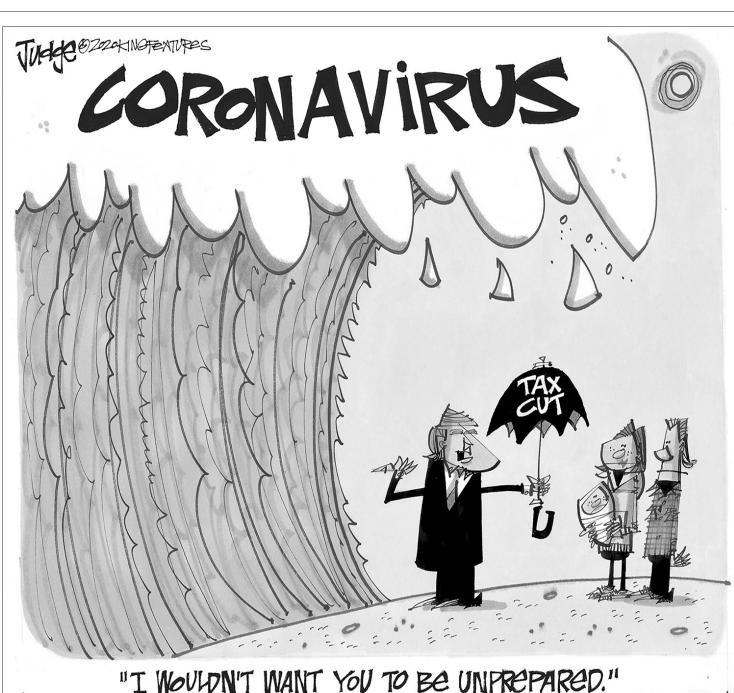

I was glad to see Gov. Pritzker back peddled the following day when questioned about this "authority" by an offscreen reporter (I give that reporter lots of credit for asking).

The positive I see coming out of this COVID-19 strategy; it is bringing us together for a common goal/ cause, something this country has been lacking for a long time!

While I agree with this strategy for reducing the impact of this virus, it has to be voluntary it cannot be dictated! Be very aware of how much power our elected officials subtly try to take from "We the people." Remember they work for us (or they are supposed to) not the other way around!

Even one of the most infamous dictators of modern times, when confiscating guns from "unreliable persons," was smart enough to know that he had to sell compliance for safety reasons!

Kennay Farms has made switch to making hand sanitizer

By Andrew Heiserman Staff Writer

ROCHELLE – During tough times like the country is currently facing, many organizations are coming together to help each other through it.

Due to the coronavirus pandemic, the country has been facing a shortage of cleaning supplies and hand sanitizer. Many distilleries throughout the country, including Rochelle's local Kennay Farms, have switched from making spirits to making hand sanitizer.

The governing agency gave Kennay Farms the approval to go ahead with making hand sanitizer on Thursday and the distillery began working right away. The decision was made based on the need in the community, as well as what the family felt was the right thing to do.

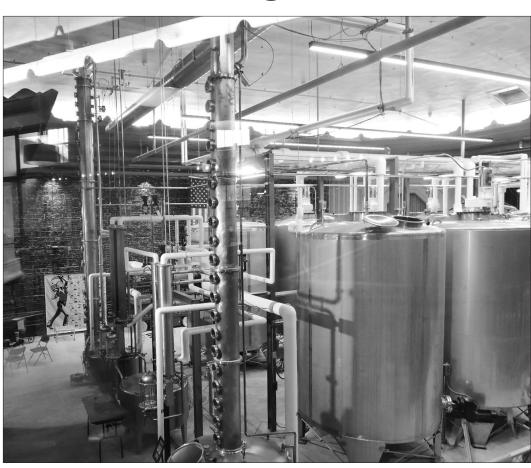

"We realized that there was a need and that we needed to get production up and running," said Evan Quinn, member of the Kennay family and vice president of marketing. "We saw the need to band together as a family to help out the Rochelle community and Northern Illinois the best we possibly can."

The process of making the hand sanitizer is nearly the same and uses the same corn it distills in its spirits. The corn is distilled to an alcohol percentage of 78 percent and then additional ingredients such as glycerol and hydrogen peroxide are added.

Once the product is finished and packaged, it is being sent to health care providers and first responders in the area. The goal of the distillery is to shock the system, to get things as balanced as possible in the regional area.

The distillery has been given the green light to continue producing hand sanitizer until the middle of June. It has begun making its first batch and hopes to have it ready to be distributed by the end of the day Friday, March 20. While the demand for spirits was still there, Kennay Farms said they did what they felt was the right thing to do.

"We could have chosen to continue distilling and distributing our whiskey, vodka and gin," said Quinn. "But, that just did not seem right to us when we could be doing something for the greater good instead."

Did you know?

On December 3, 1872, an ordinance was passed by the City Council of Oregon to establish a library and reading room for the general public. Eight gentlemen were appointed to a Board of Directors which held their first meeting in the office of Judge Woodcock (then County Clerk) on December 14, 1872. A committee was formed to make selection of books. The report of the committee was accepted at a later meeting and the books were ordered to be purchased. There were 967 volumes in the library, exclusive of all public documents. In the reading rooms, there were five weeklies, four monthlies, two quarterlies, and many other magazines and papers. Experiencing God's power in everyday life

After I became a Christian, there were many years when I had no victory in my everyday life. I was miserable because I still had wounds in my soul from the past that made me insecure, angry, suspicious of others, and hard to get along with.

Even though I loved God and went to church every week, I had no idea that there was power available to me to overcome the hurts from the past and the struggles of everyday life. And everything that came along that was hard to handle, defeated me.

But I was so grateful when I found out in God's Word that not only is He powerful, but He wants to fill us with His power. He promises in His Word that we can have abundant life in Christ because He has overcome the world! (See John 10:10; 16:33.)

The truth is, as believers in Christ, we don't have to live weak, wimpy, pitiful, pathetic, barely-getting-by lives. We can have God's power working in us to enable us to do whatever we need to do in life!

There's No Such Thing as a Problem-free Life

Some people have the misconception that when they give their lives to Jesus, they will no longer have any problems. It would be nice if this were true, but in this world, we WILL have trials and tribulations. The good news is we can cheer up anyway because Jesus has overcome the world.

In John 16:33 (ESV), Jesus says, "...In the world you will have tribulation. But take heart; I have overcome the world."

No one can promise you a problem-free life, but God promises that if you will put your trust in Him, He will give you a faith that enables you to rise above the problems you face. And when you get through them, you'll be stronger on the other side than you were before you had them.

The Truth About God's Power

Knowing you can have power from God to live in this world is one thing, but learning to believe this truth and walk in it is the key to having victory over the trials and suffering you face. I love Philippians 3:10 because it says we can actually experience the same power that raised Christ from the dead.

In this verse, the apostle Paul says his determined purpose was to "know Him [experientially, becoming more thoroughly acquainted with Him, understanding the remarkable wonders of His Person more completely] and [in that same way experience] the power of His resurrection [which overflows and is active in believers], and [that I may share] the fellowship of His sufferings, by being continually conformed [inwardly into His likeness even] to His death [dying as He did]" (AMP).

This is an amazing and encouraging promise from God, because we all face problems and have weaknesses we can't overcome in our own strength or effort. But if we are determined to trust God in every situation, all the time, we can fight the good fight of faith by HIS grace.

Being More Than a Conqueror Through Christ

Romans 8:37 (AMP) says: "Yet in all these things we are more than conquerors and gain an overwhelming victory through Him who loved us [so much that He died for us]." I love this phrase "more than conquerors." But what does it really mean?

Being more than a conqueror means that before you ever have a problem, you are confident that you have whatever it takes to overcome it through your relationship with Christ. In other words, you know you have the victory before you ever get the problem.

Now, in order to "qualify" for the power of God, we must first come to the place where we recognize that in and of ourselves, we are weak and we have limitations without God. If we didn't have any weakness, we wouldn't realize we need Him. And one of the best prayers we can ever pray is "God, I need You, and I'm nothing without You!" (See John 15:5.)

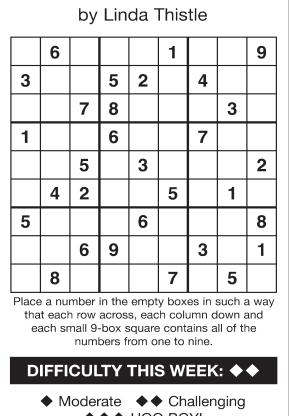

It's so important for us to understand this because if we wait until we have a problem that's too big for us to handle before we rely on God's strength, then we're setting ourselves up to fail.

The best thing we can do to live this life in victory is to continually seek God with our whole heart, realizing we're desperate for Him all the time. Spend time with Him in prayer and studying His Word every day. Then, when the storms of life happen, you will be confident that in Christ, you already have everything you need to overcome them...and you'll experience the power of His resurrection as you rise above them!

Stillman Bank provides free pre-approvals, no-prepayment penalties, local loan approval and servicing, and a variety of affordable mortgage opportunities. Additionally, their online Mortgage Center provides the latest technologies to offer some of the fastest service available in today's market. Since their founding, their continuing objective is to maintain state-of-the-art technology combined with local decision making to deliver financial products and services that conveniently fit your lifestyle - anytime, anywhere. And, because they are a community bank, they have a genuine and vested interest in their local communities and customers. Stillman Bank takes this commitment seriously because their success depends on the satisfaction of those they serve. When planning your financial future, look to Vitrus Capital Partners

Keeping your cool can be hard to do when the market goes on one of its periodic rollercoaster rides. It's useful to have strategies in place that prepare you both financially and psychologically to handle market volatility. Here are 11 ways to help keep yourself from making hasty decisions that could have a long-term impact on your ability to achieve your financial goals.

1. Have a game plan

Having predetermined guidelines that recognize the potential for turbulent times can help prevent emotion from dictating your decisions. For example, you might take a coreand-satellite approach, combining the use of buy-and-hold principles for the bulk of your portfolio with tactical investing based on a shorter-term market outlook. You also can use diversification to try to offset the risks of certain holdings with those of others. And if you're an active investor, a trading discipline can help you stick to a long-term strategy.

2. Know what you own and why you own it

When the market goes off the tracks, knowing why you originally made a specific investment can help you evaluate whether your reasons still hold, regardless of what the overall market is doing. Understanding how a specific holding fits in your portfolio also can help you consider whether a lower price might actually represent a buying opportunity. And if you don't understand why a security is in your portfolio, find out. That knowledge can be particularly important when the market goes south, especially if you're considering replacing your current holding with another investment.

3. Remember: Everything is relative

Most of the variance in the returns of different portfolios can generally be attributed to their asset allocations. If you've got a welldiversified portfolio that includes multiple asset classes, it could be useful to compare its overall performance to relevant benchmarks. If you find that your investments are performing in line with those benchmarks, that realization might help you feel better about your overall strategy. Even a diversified portfolio is no guarantee that you won't suffer losses, of course. But it means that just because the S&P 500 might have dropped 10% or 20% doesn't necessarily mean your overall portfolio is down by the same amount.

4. Tell yourself that this too shall pass

The financial markets are historically cyclical. Even if you wish you had sold at what turned out to be a market peak, or regret having sat out a buying opportunity, you may well get another chance at some point. Even if you're considering changes, a volatile market can be an inopportune time to turn your portfolio inside out. A well-thought-out asset allocation is still the basis of good investment planning.

5. Be willing to learn from your mistakes

Anyone can look good during bull markets; smart investors are produced by the inevitable rough patches. Even the best investors aren't right all the time. If an earlier choice now seems rash, sometimes the best strategy is to take a tax loss, learn from the experience, and apply the lesson to future decisions. Expert help can prepare you and your portfolio to both weather and take advantage of the market's ups and downs.

6. Consider playing defense

During volatile periods in the stock market, many investors reexamine their allocation to such defensive sectors as consumer staples or utilities (though like all stocks, those sectors involve their own risks, and are not necessarily immune from overall market movements). Dividends also can help cushion the impact of price swings.

7. Stay on course by continuing to save

Even if the value of your holdings fluctuates, regularly adding to an account designed for a long-term goal may cushion the emotional impact of market swings. If losses are offset even in part by new savings, your bottom-line number might not be quite so discouraging. If you're using dollar-cost averaging - investing a specific amount regularly regardless of fluctuating price levels - you may be getting a bargain by buying when prices are down. However, dollar cost averaging can't guarantee a profit or protect against a loss. Also consider your ability to continue purchases through market slumps; systematic investing doesn't work if you stop when prices are down. Finally, remember that the return and principal value of your investments will fluctuate with changes in market conditions, and shares may be worth more or less than their original cost when you sell them.

8. Use cash to help manage your mindset

Cash can be the financial equivalent of taking deep breaths to relax. It can enhance your ability to make thoughtful decisions instead of impulsive ones. If you've established an appropriate asset allocation, you should have resources on hand to prevent having to sell stocks to meet ordinary expenses or, if you've used leverage, a margin call. Having a cash cushion coupled with a disciplined investing strategy can change your perspective on market volatility.

9. Remember your road map

Solid asset allocation is the basis of sound investing. One of the reasons a diversified portfolio is so important is that strong performance of some investments may help offset poor performance by others. Even with an appropriate asset allocation, some parts of a portfolio may struggle at any given time. Timing the market can be challenging under the best of circumstances. Make sure your asset allocation is appropriate before making drastic changes.

10. Look in the rear-view mirror

If you're investing long term, sometimes it helps to take a look back and see how far you've come. If your portfolio is down this year, it can be easy to forget any progress you may already have made over the years. Though past performance is no guarantee of future returns, of course, the stock market's long-term direction has historically been up. With stocks, it's important to remember that having an investing strategy is only half the battle; the other half is being able to stick to it.

11. Take it easy

If you feel you need to make changes in your portfolio, there are ways to do so short of a total makeover. You could test the waters by redirecting a small percentage of one asset class to another. You could put any new money into investments you feel are wellpositioned for the future, but leave the rest as is. Even if you need or want to adjust your portfolio during a period of turmoil, those changes can — and probably should — happen in gradual steps.

Ukulele Station America – the biggest little store in the country

Don't let its size fool you. Oregon Ukulele Station America might be small in size, but it is huge in sales and known across the country by ukulele enthusiasts.

Ukulele Station America opened in the Summer of 2015 after total restoration of the "Old Mongan Gas Station" was complete. The "Magical Little Stone Cottage" soon became a destination. In the first year it sold nearly 100 ukuleles. The second year over 300. The third year the store and owner John Lindhorst sold over 600 ukuleles.

He now sells more than 1,000 instruments each year and continues to see substantial growth each year.

Ukulele Station America is a specialty shop in a unique building. Its huge selection and personal, friendly service stands out in contrast to "big box stores." Even though the shop is small (208 square feet), it carries the top major brands including Kala, Oscar Schmidt, Lanikai, Fender, Gretsch, Gold Tone and more.

There are at least 100

ukuleles in stock at all times. The store also has hundreds of music books and lots of accessories, and even stock strings for other instruments like guitars, banjos, mandolins, dulcimers and more. It has special order other instruments too, like banjos, mandolins and guitars.

"We constantly change and increase our inventory to meet the latest trends and tastes," Lindhorst said.

Lindhorst said he has sold ukuleles to people from Hawaii, California, New York, Colorado, Texas and every state in the Midwest. The store is still strictly a "Brick & Mortar" shop and does not yet sell online.

"Ukulele Station America is truly a magical place where people gather to make music and have fun," Lindhorst said.

Magical and award winning. Held during the Summer NAMM Show in Nashville, the annual awards honor retailers who demonstrate exceptional commitment to their stores, neighborhoods, and customers, and share in a vision of creating a more musical world through their local communities. Ukulele Station America has been named a "Top 100" Music Store every year since it opened. That's four years in a row. At the Awards Ceremony in Nashville, it has been a top 3 nominee for Best Emerging Dealer, Best Community Store and Customer Choice Award. It is a huge accomplishment to be named a Top 100 store by the National Association of Music Merchants.

And while Ukulele Station America is earning a name for itself across the country, Lindhorst has an eye on the future.

"This is only the beginning," he said. "There is so much more yet to come."
