CLINTON — Wind farm testimony continued Tuesday during hearings conducted by the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA). Rural Birkbeck area resident Terry Husted was first on the schedule, and he talked about potential dangers to birds and the Mahomet Aquifer if the Alta Farms II project were developed.

Husted listed items in Tradewind Energy's special use permit (SUP) application he said concerned him, including potential interference with weather

Survey to seek opinions on Clinton graduates

CLINTON — A community survey of local business owners and managers is being developed by the Clinton school district in an effort to gain insight about the quality of the workforce graduating from Clinton.

"We would like to know what we're doing well, what we need to improve upon and get information from the community on how we can improve our quality of graduates as this community sees them and needs them for their workforce," said Nettles.

"I would suspect if the survey goes well, we will find out some things we didn't think about or know about and incorporate those into our main planning processes," he added.

"I think it's a great thing," said board member Rodney Rogers. "Small businesspeople are going to tell what they need and tell you what's missing. It will help us fine tune our goals."

Board president Dan Matthews added the board wants to engage with the community to put together a plan that will "take us several years down the road with our students."

A school maintenance project for $50,000 that should be matched by a grant from the state of Illinois, was approved by the Clinton school board at Tuesday's night meeting.

Superintendent Curt Nettles explained the roof and the HVAC work needed at the junior high will easily meet threshold to obtain the full amount on the matching grant.

"I think we'll get the grant," said district business manager Drew Goebel, "so we essentially just gained $50,000."

elcome to my little corner culinary delights. Kitchens can get pretty hot at times with both the temperatures and tempers. But obtaining a good job as a cook is difficult and more so for a chef. Why then did I become a chef? Many seek security in their jobs, great benefits, lots of money, vacation time, etc. Others may seek a job that fits the type of work they best love doing. There are many reasons that can be listed. I will give mine.

When beginning my teenage years, I watched a cooking show newly coming out. It featured I began Julia Child. baking things and selling them at school until the principal put a stop to it. I also helped out at convention kitchens. I discovered from that that I love cooking in huge quantities. I enjoyed the kitchen. It challenged me to learn more and to create. I had worked with chefs and with George Bianucci. George was the original owner of The Shack in Clinton, Illinois. The arduous work took much time away from his family. As with an artist, the amount of pay does not justify the work done. Just after high school graduation, I worked the griddle at the T & C Burger ranch.

I have always had a very high mechanical aptitude. I was a natural for the toolroom. It was also a secure job with benefits, insurance and There vacation time.

was room for growth. I began as an apprentice, then a journeyman and finally a master tool & die maker. I moved on to become a product designer, tool designer and drafter. When I was out of work, it was easy to find other employment. I later earned my bachelor of science in Industrial Technology from I.S.U. I enjoyed this life and became a workaholic.

It was after I retired that I took culinary classes. Having loved cooking and learning somethings from chefs and cooks, the subject matter was not difficult for me. There were those that either flunked out or dropped out of class. This is another reason for being sure before venturing on. It is not for everyone.

Even the successful cooks do not necessarily find good jobs; if they can find one at all. Many restaurants are chain restaurants having their own hard-set methods. Places like McDonalds have on-the-job training. Culinary schooling gives no advantages to working in such places. Your small restaurants are often run by family members. Your high-end restaurants and fine hotels require chefs that have had extensive training well beyond the two-year college. Very few restaurants want to pay the wages a chef requires. There are a few success stories. But who can become another Julie Child or Escoffier?

I knew this girl who graduated from culinary. She proved to be a most excellent student and cook. We talked. She could only find menial work at a pizza parlor.

Until next time, peace to

Amber Waves

Impeachment—The end is near

As I write this on Tuesday, the Senate is about to begin its part of the impeachment process of President Trump.

The beltway is fixated with the political intrigue. The rest of the nation appears to simply want the drama to end and for the nation to get back to business. It is time for this charade to end and let the voters, the average good ol' American citizens cast their ballots in November.

Historically American voter has tended to be a centrist. The voters don't want drastic changes in government and they want basic services to be present and obtainable. The American public wants steady employment, good roads, public safety, good schools, and a safety net for those in need.

The public doesn't want an impeachment process that has Constitutional lawyers arguing what the Constitution says. The basis for impeachment is treason, bribery, high crimes and misdemeanors. That is pretty simple and it doesn't take a bunch of lawyers to define those terms. The House of Representatives is now seeking to impeach a President for Obstructing the House of Representatives. Most people refer to that as Separation of Powers. Politicians quite often disagree with each other. They may even say nasty things about the other's position. So What. That is the political process.

Speaker Pelosi said months ago that an impeachment action was dead on arrival when it got to the Senate. That was a reasonable assessment of political reality. Then she listened to the ever vocal left wing of her party and felt fear that she would lose control of her caucus.

Pelosi flipped and went all in on the impeachment allegations. It took her and her team a little time to settle on the wording and then it was full speed ahead. The Democrats significant majority in the House and Pelosi used that to her advantage. Only a couple Democrats voted against the impeachment resolution in the House.

No Republicans voted for it. To say the House was partisan would be a gross understatement. Then Pelosi did the political unfathomable taunt. She made the signing of the articles as Speaker of the House into a media event and then used numerous personalized pens to sign document, giving pens to impeachment supporters.

Our founding fathers viewed impeachment as an extremely serious affront to the nation and to be considered in utmost respect and thoughtfulness for the Nation. Making a media spectacle of the impeachment process is appalling to all who deeply respect for the Constitution.

ON POINT

What amounts opening statements in a court proceeding are to commence on Tuesday the 21st. The process changes in the Senate from the process in the House. Democrats control the House and Republicans control the Senate. However it is the Senate that is the jury, not the House.

The Republicans voiced that Trump was not given a fair shake in the House. Now the Democrats are complaining about the trial rules in the Senate. Perhaps both parties in Washington would be benefit from attending a city council meeting or county board meeting. Local government seems to do a much better job of getting to the truth than our friends in Washington.

What should be a somber and thoughtful inquiry has become a political free for all. While the Nixon certainly had considerations, inquiries were somber and serious with no one making jokes about the hearings.

Conspiracy theories are all too often placed in the medial This impeachment process does give one pause to consider the aspect of a change of form of government conspiracy theory. Trump won the electoral college and lost the popular vote.

The Democrats have been angry ever since 2016.Elements of Democratic party have objected to the legitimacy of the Trump Presidency ever since. These articles of impeachment are very weak from a purely legal analysis. However if the President were to be impeached that would be a real blow to the office of President.

At that time, would there then be a movement to change the Constitution to a Parliamentary form of government. That would mean Speaker Pelosi would be our Prime Minister. It is a thought worth considering.

In any event, the impeachment process will soon end and the voters will finally have a say in November as to the course this Nation should go on.

Proud to be American

Neither neocon nor isolationist

Donald Trump isn't George W. Bush.

That should be obvious to everyone by now, but his critics and even some of his supporters immediately acted as if it were 2003 on the cusp of the Iraq War when Trump took out Iranian commander Qassem Soleimani.

Suddenly, the neocons had cachet again (Vox warned that "the Iraq War hawks are back"), and we were about to launch yet another endless war. Trump's decision to kill Soleimani, New York Times columnist Michelle Goldberg wrote, repeating a common refrain, "has brought the United States to the brink of a devastating new conflict in the Middle East."

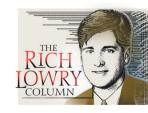

There's no doubt that the operation against Soleimani carried risks, but it didn't transform Trump into a conventional interventionist. In fact, taking out Soleimani was wholly consistent with the president's approach to the world that can't be plotted on a simple hawk/dove or neocon/isolationist axis. As a Jacksonian, Trump is none of the above, combining a willingness to whack our enemies with a distaste for ambitious foreign interventions.

The Jacksonian label is the famous construction of foreign-policy analyst Walter Russell Mead, who traces the tradition back to Andrew Jackson and the cultural influence of the American backwoods. Jacksonians are content to let the world sort itself out, except if they perceive a threat, in which case they react with great ferocity.

Trump's overturned the reigning Republican foreignpolicy consensus, but it didn't herald a lurch to isolationism pure and simple.

Even when Trump sounded most hostile to U.S. commitments and alliances abroad in 2016, he promised, in one of most Jacksonian sentiments, to "bomb the s---" out of ISIS. No matter how much Trump disdained being in the Middle East, it wouldn't be possible to follow through on this threat without military assets, an intelligence network and allies on the ground. Once elected, Trump did, sure enough, bomb the s--- out of ISIS.

Killing Soleimani is keeping with this general orientation rather than a departure from it. In fact, the whole thing is shot through with Jacksonian attitudes.

Trump's red line to Iran didn't have to do with our values or shipping lanes. It reflected the most basic imperative of a nation protecting its own: Don't harm Americans.

When a rocket attack by an Iranian-supported militia killed an American contractor and injured other Americans at a base in Iraq, Trump's response was also characteristically Jacksonian: a stunning, bolt-out-of-the-blue droning of an enemy commander who was thought to be safely out of bounds, designed to create the maximum deterrent bang for the buck.

For his most loyal backers, the killing of Soleimani is likelier to add to the legend of Donald Trump instead of give them pause. In their view, here is President Trump once again doing what no other president would do, taking an inordinate amount of criticism for it, often from a perpetually hysterical press corps, and having it work out (so far).

The Jacksonian impulse alone is not enough to solve the complex foreignpolicy problem presented by Iran. But it can be useful in a contest of intimidation and escalation. The killing of Soleimani isn't a deepstate or neocon project, rather an unmistakable expression of Trump's distinctive worldview.

residents as DeWitt County documented evidence contrary to the environmental report that bald eagles ...do not occupy areas within the footprint of the project," Husted testified.

He said he felt, along with others opposing the project, that the project would definitely "pose a hazard to bald eagles."

"Further, there evidence that shows that, to date, there has been no effective way to deter the eagles and other raptors from entering the area," Husted said.

When later questioned by the attorney for Tradewind Jim Griffin, Husted acknowledged the Illinois Department of Natural Resources (IDNR) as expert on the Illinois environment. Griffin asked Husted if he had any information contradicting IDNR officials that no bald eagles had been killed by wind turbines in Illinois.

Husted answered only that he heard that one was killed by a wind turbine in Illinois, but he didn't know where.

"I don't have any evidence, buy I have heard one was killed," Husted Husted also addressed what he felt was a potential threat to the Mahomet aquifer posed by a wind energy project.

The Mahomet aquifer is a "sole source" aquifer that provides drinking water to residents of a large portion of central Illinois.

"We do not know the long-term effects on the aquifer," Husted said.

He said large wind

towers create vibrations, some of which would project downward toward the aquifer. "We're not sure what types of vibrations will project downward and what potential impact the vibrations will have on the aquifer."

The concrete pads anchoring the wind towers could reach as much as 65-70 feet wide and penetrate the ground from 9-15 feet.

NEWS

Scientific sources generally the place Mahomet aquifer's depths at between 100-200 feet.

Reading information about construction work in Ontario, Canada that caused damage to aquifer wells there, Husted agreed with that report that it was wrong to assume Mahomet aquifer was several hundred feet below the surface at every point.

Husted expressed fear that vibrations from wind towers could reduce aquifer flow in the area.

"We really count on having a good flow in the aquifer to supply everybody." "Do you know how deep the Mahomet aquifer is, approximately, below the ground surface," Griffin

Husted said he did not believe anyone could that question answer without performing an aerial groundwater mapping survey.

"It's approximately 200 feet below the surface, correct," Griffin asked.

wouldn't say that's correct," Husted answered.

Griffin asked if Husted was an expert in geology. Husted answered he was Griffin asked if Husted had any evidence that other wind energy projects had caused issues with the aquifer.

"Not here in Illinois," Husted answered.

He asked if Husted was proposing to stop all projects infrastructure and remove underground storage tanks over the aquifer.

"I'm not proposing anything," Husted answered.

When Griffin asked if Husted had anv information that contradicted the engineering report concluding wind the project would not affect the aquifer, Husted said he did not have any respect for the report.

Keeping Kids Safe from Drugs

Elements of Effective Prevention Programs

There is a multitude of effective substance abuse prevention interventions that may have different areas of focus and can be implemented in a variety of settings. Interventions can involve the family, school, and community and may provide substance abuse prevention for an individual or a population of youth by focusing on environmental community factors and developmental policies, skill factors, development. The National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) has identified 16 key principles for prevention programs based on risk and protective factors, the type of program, and the delivery of the program.

Core Components of Evidence-based Prevention Programs

Structure, content, and delivery are the core elements of effective research-based programs that NIDA suggests can help to address the key principles, and should considered when determining what kind of prevention program is best for individuals and your community.

Caring AdultsPrevention programs have proven to be effective, but families and influential adults continue to play the most important role in determining how youth handle the lure of alcohol, cigarettes, misuse prescription drugs, and illegal drugs. More recent studies have shown that parents and guardians (and adults influential in a youth's life) who speak to their children about the issues and have dinner with them on a regular basis, have children with a lower rate of use and abuse.

Prevention programs can help to support family/ mentoring relationships by providing parenting/ mentoring skills communication strategies.3

Early Intervention

Intervening early before high school—is critical. The data suggest that patterns of substance abuse become worse in the high school years. Individuals who begin using alcohol or tobacco when they are very young are more likely to abuse them later in life, when it becomes much more difficult to quit.

Resources

National Institute on Drug Abuse

A division of the National Institutes Health, NIDA's mission is to lead the nation in bringing the power of science to bear on drug abuse and addiction.

Center for Substance Abuse Prevention

The Center, a division of the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, provides national leadership in the federal effort to prevent alcohol, tobacco, other drug problems.

National Registry of Evidence-based Programs and Practices (NREPP)

The Substance Abuse

and Mental Health Services Administration supports NREPP, searchable online registry of more than 200 interventions supporting mental health promotion, substance prevention, and mental health and substance abuse treatment. NREPP connects members of the public to intervention developers so they can learn how to implement these approaches in their communities.

youth.gov Program Directory

The program directory provides up-to-date information for effective programs that address risk and protective factors related to substance abuse. All programs included in the program directory have been rigorously reviewed based on their conceptual framework, if the program was implemented intended, how it was evaluated, and the findings of the evaluations.

The directory also includes youth-focused programs from the Substance Abuse

Lady Maroons JV over Lady Redskins 31-24

Marc Rogers jmarre@frontier.com

CLINTON — Thursday, January 17, saw the Lady Maroons hosting the Lady Redskins, of Sullivan.

The evening's festivities began with a bizarre start to the junior varsity (JV) game. The first tipoff ended in a jump ball situation, so a second tipoff was performed with different players. This second round the Lady Maroons took possession of the ball.

Although the Lady Redskins hung tough after leading through the first quarter, the Lady Maroons appeared to want the victory more. The home team took the lead in the second quarter and fought off the pesky Lady Redskins through the rest of the game. The Lady Maroons came away with a 31-24 win.

The home team was led by Kylie Raymer with 10 points.

The varsity game was especially tough for the Lady Maroons. After being down by six at the end of the first quarter, the team was able to forge a one-point lead before going in to the locker room at halftime.

The Lady Redskins came out in the second half like an arctic blast from the north, chilling the Lady Maroons offense and de-not relinquish. The Lady Maroons made several runs for the lead, but just could not top the crest of the hill to gain the momentum needed. The Lady Redskins won the tussle 49-38. The Lady Maroons were led by Kaitlyn Rauch with 16 points followed by Mallory Cyrulik with 10.

The Lady Maroons are now 11-11 overall and 0-4 in conference play.

Sullivan

Marc Rogers jmarre@frontier.com

CLINTON — The Clinton Lady Maroons posted a big win this week against the Lady Cougars, of Illini Central.

It was a surprisingly low scoring game in the initial quarter compared to some other recent games, but the Lady Maroons moved to capitalize on an early

The end of the first quarter saw the Lady Maroons gaining a two point lead, 4-2. From there the Lady Maroons caught fire and kept the Lady Cougars caged.

In the third quarter the Lady Cougars exploded for 17 points. The Lady Maroons, however, came back with good defense and more offense in the final quarter to keep the Lady Cougars at bay and then some.

The home team captured the 42-27 win, giving them a 13-11 overall win/ lose record and 0-4 conference record.

How will ♥ K2 + A986 you take advantage of this? ♣ Q963 The Club finesse is sure to work, taking the trick count to eight. The bad news is that the Spade King is surely sitting over the Queen ... the good news is that, as West holds the missing high cards, he is likely to come under pressure when you play the Clubs. So, after winning the ♥K at Trick 2 you successfully run the ♣9, play a low Club to the King and Ace, and cash the &J. When West shows out, what do you know about his distribution? Not five Diamonds (West didn't lead one), nor three Diamonds (East didn't raise), so assume four Diamonds. How many Hearts? West would have led top-of-nothing with three (also, East might have bid 1♥ with five), so assume West has four Hearts. That means West is 3=4=4=2 and the hand is an open book.

What does West pitch on the third Club? Not a Spade, in that case you cash the $\triangle A$ and duck a Spade to West's King, scoring the 9^{th} trick with the $\triangle Q$... not a Heart, in that case you cash the ♥Q and run the ♦J around to West (now West must play on Diamonds or Spades, either of which gives up the 9th trick) ... and not a Diamond, in that case you run the +J around to West's Queen and have the timing to set up the 13th Diamond. Poor West was squeezed in three suits, but it required accurate card reading to take advantage of that.

Fayetta Isaac recovered and ready to keep moving

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON — A good number of people know Fayetta Isaac as a retired local teacher. She taught physical education her for 35 years, including 11 years at the high school.

Fayetta is one of those people who used the services of Liberty Village but wasn't there as a longterm resident. It might seem obvious that once Fayetta recovered from her ailment, she would be eager to return home. In Fayetta's case, that wasn't necessarily so.

"I have felt like I'm on a vacation," Fayetta said on the day she was set to leave Liberty Village.

She also said she would miss the staff.

But, Fayetta's six and a half-week rest and recovery from back surgery doesn't mean the diminutive, whitehaired retiree is ready to stop moving. Except for the month and a half that her surgery laid her low, she continues to drive herself around town and remains active in the HCEA and local blood drives.

Fayetta arrived at Liberty Village in a wheel chair on April 20 after having back surgery to repair a nerve.

Keeping the past alive

Janeen Burkholder Clinton Journal

CLINTON Joey Clinton's Woolridge, most prolific historian and winner of the Studs Terkel Humanities Service Award, has been selected as the city's quartoseptcentennial parade grand marshal.

Aside from her work at the Clinton Area Chamber of Commerce & Tourism Bureau, she is known for writing "Pieces of the Past," a weekly historical column, for the Clinton Journal since 1994.

Annette McGrath, a member of the committee that selected Woolridge, said there are more than 50 entries in the parade, including youngsters dressed like Abraham Lincoln, and the bicycle decoration contest entries.

McGrath said decided, committee selecting Woolridge and in keeping with the historical nature of the event, "What was more fitting than having someone in the present who is keeping the past alive?"

"I thought it was really nice," said Woodridge about her selection.

She joked that for once she thought she was going to be able to just watch a parade from the sidewalk and not be involved in it as she is with the annual Chamber-sponsored Christmas parade.

Weinberg from C1 Over the years, Weinberg has seen the most important period of the library's growth in a new, muchadmired building and in the formation of the library district. Weinberg, too, has tutored many reading students at the library.

Now, his name and reputation as a local scholar are permanently associated with the library with the establishment of the Library of Comparative Religions. Weinberg donated some 500 books on religion he collected over the years, and they are housed in a reading room just off the nonfiction wing of the library in part of the old building.

"When I took on as codirector, I was scared to death of this man," said Warner Library's Joan Rhoades during a reception held on Saturday to open the collection. "The second I started sassing back, he was the biggest champion I had," she laughed.

Warner Library's Bobbi Perryman catalogued Weinberg's collection. She said she learned about Weinberg's collection several years ago, when he loaned the library a book titled "The Art of Hanukkah."

"That was the first book from his collection that I got to see," Perryman said.

"I want to thank the library, and I want to thank my family for coming and the people of Clinton," Weinberg said. "The Clinton library has been part of Clinton and part of my life almost from the day we came to Clinton."

CLINTON — "We're here to move forward with a new building project," said Clinton Community School District board member Rod Wertz, as he presided over the board's Dec. 20 meeting.

Citing 4 percent interest rates and deteriorating buildings in Webster and Washington schools, Wertz said he wanted to "enable our students to have the best educational opportunities," getting the proposed building referendum on the March 2012 ballot was imperative. The official ballot for the proposition was to issue $16.7 million in school funding bonds.

"One of these buildings is over 100 years old,

Construction is set to begin in spring 2013 with the school opening to students in fall 2014.

On Friday morning, 222 people, including two busloads of third grade students from Lincoln

Legion Auxiliary helping local veterans

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON The Clinton American Legion and Auxiliary make several trips each year to the Veterans Administration Hospital, in Danville. Legion members take veterans there personal items, such as razors and hand sanitizers, among other items, as well as goodies

But, the Legion also continues to do work for local veterans right here in Clinton.

"We want to make sure we keep in touch with local veterans as well as those in Danville," said Legion Auxiliary member Margaret Feaman.

On Monday, a committee of Auxiliary members extended that touch to veterans living at Liberty Village. Marcia Burns, Judy Hight, Sally Toohill and Feaman delivered Easter baskets to the vets and brought some smiles to the faces of men whose experiences in war often were not the stuff of joy.

"You want to know about hell," one of the men asked. "I've been there."

The vet fought in several of the major battles of the Pacific during World War II.

But, he and the other veterans who received the baskets on this day had lived long ...long enough to get revenge on war by leading full lives.

Funds for the baskets, and many other Auxiliary services for veterans, came from the annual Poppy Day collections, which will come up again in May. The Auxiliary also plans to visit vets living at DeWitt and Nixon manor, Arbor Apartments and MacArthur Apartments.

The Auxiliary's outreach is all part of trying to help as many veterans as possible.

CLINTON — The city council approved on Tuesday modifications to the city's gambling ordinance to allow legal payouts of winnings from video gambling. The city now will permit types of gambling already sanctioned by the state.

The amendment passed by a 3-1 vote.

PSI recommended as DeWitt County ambulance provider

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON — The DeWitt County Board's ambulance advisory committee will recommend the county contract with Paramedic Services of Illinois (PSI) to run ambulance service in DeWitt County.

The Schiller Park, Ill.based company was one of three firms to present proposals the committee. Abbot EMS of Illinois, based in Belleville, and the local nonprofit organization DeWitt County Ambulance Association also made proposals to operate county ambulance service.

Dr. John Warner

Hospital is scheduled to end its ambulance service at the end of December, citing a $500,000 annual operating loss. The county recently approved a plan to continue ambulance coverage for most of the county. Its ambulance advisory committee is expected to recommend an ambulance provider at the Aug. 30 county board meeting.

Voters approved in March a referendum to levy a tax to support funding for ambulance service.

The recommendation to the board at its full August meeting will be the culmination of a process that began this past spring. An advisory committee made up of heads of the various fire districts, the 911 director, the head of DeWitt County Emergency Management Agency and a county board representative spent about three months formulating a plan to provide ambulance service to most of the county.

PSI has been in business since 1957. The company employs more than 200 fulltime employees and serves 26 communities primarily in the suburban Chicago area, as well as LaSalle, Ill.

PSI asked for the smallest subsidy of the three proposals for the three-year period at $1,175,220.

Shown are members of PSI's DeWitt County EMS after the service received certification in 2015 for increased capability to treat stroke patients.

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON — Richland Community College announced it will open a new 4,000 squarefoot extension center in Clinton. Clinton is RCC's largest satellite campus community.

RCC board trustees approved a 10-year lease and two five-year options to become the first tenant in the Douglas subdivision.

RCC administration cited the high visibility of the location as one of the factors in the college's decision.

"DCDC (DeWitt County Development Council) has actually been working with them since 2008, when I first got here to do this, DCDC executive director Ruth Stauffer told the DeWitt County Board on Thursday. "So, I got really excited when they finally said, 'yes'."

Stauffer said there would be much more to the process of Richland's expansion but expected the new facility would be ready to open for the fall 2013 semester.

"And, there's more than one reason to be excited about that," Stauffer said. "It's the first building to be built out there, so it will help us sell the other lots and the other advantages and opportunities in the area."

RCC would be able to offer dual credit and transfer courses as well as community education classes, such as dance, culinary arts and others, at the new facility. The new building would also help create a broader, more flexible scheduling.

City council selects broker for electric aggregation

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON Clinton City Council voted Monday to contract with Good Energy as the city's electricity purchaser. The contract would hinge on voters passing an April referendum to approve electric aggregation.

Electric aggregation involves a third party that purchases power residents through an annual auction. Clinton, the third party agent would purchase electricity for Ameren customers, who would still be served by Ameren as their electric utility provider. The DeWitt County board earlier this year to place a referendum on the April 9 ballot offering voters the opportunity to aggregate their electric supply.

Good Energy, one of the two companies to make presentations to the county, is a broker.

Good Energy would take bids from supplies during the auction, and the city would have to approve the low bid.

Aggregation usually results in lower rates for electricity customers.

"We're assembling a group of communities that we hope Clinton will be a part of," said Tom Lay, of Good Energy. "The biggest strength that we can bring you is the size of the bidding group that we put together."

Integrys, the second company to approach the city and also the other company that made a presentation to the county board, is an electric supplier. If the city had chosen Integrys, that company's bid during the auction would have been the rate Clinton customers would have paid.

Good Energy will coordinate the public education program leading up to the April 9 referendum. If the referendum passes, Good will becomes the city's purchasing agent for a contract period of 12 months.

Dean Nichol, of Integrys, while it was important for his company to earn a margin for its shareholders and employees, it is "not our sole objective."

"We look at stakeholder group a tripod," Nichol said. "You can never emphasize one at the cost of the others. We like to serve our customers, earn a profit and do it in a way that allows us to run a respectable organization that our employees are happy to work for."

Mayor Carolyn Peters felt that using a broker was the best method for securing the lowest electric rate for customers. Commissioner Wise, although he said he was impressed by the presentations of both firms, agreed with Peters.

The council approved Good Energy by a unanimous vote.

A wish 'grant-ed'

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON - Clinton American Legion members likely will feel a sense of satisfaction when work on their hall is completed, wrapping up a project that began several years ago. And, a recent $100,000 grant from the state is playing a big part in that satisfaction.

Rep. Bill Mitchell was at the Legion hall on Wednesday to celebrate with members the first phase of work being paid for with a $100,000 grant Mitchell and Illinois Sen. Bill Brady were able to secure for the Clinton American Legion Post.

A 100-car capacity parking lot, located immediately west the Legion building, is completed, and parking lot lighting will soon be erected.

Redington said the post was required to provide a parking place for every three people attending the hall for an event.

"We now have 100 parking places back there," Redington said. "We also have lighting that will light that." He said money from the grant is also designated for installation of some asphalt." money awarded in the grant must be designated for a specific purpose.

"The grant went through the House and the Senate, and the governor signed it," Redington said. "And, we had to document what we were going to use the money for."

"The Clinton American Legion and its members do a great service to their community, said Rep. Bill Mitchell. "I am honored to be able to help them continue their mission of community service."

Legion hall began its existence as a high school and junior high annex building in the early 1970s. When the junior high moved into its new building 2000s, the Legion bought the annex from the school district, dismantled it and reconstructed it on its current site, near the location of the old Illinois

Confirming a library treasure tucked away for decades

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

Vespasian Warner Public Library director Joan Rhoades was aware of the book and its inscription for more than 25 years. It was a volume of C.H. Moore's personal collection that helped start the library in 1908. But, it wasn't until the staff and research facilities of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum, located just 40 miles down the road, were able to help that she knew for certain who inscribed the book.

By now, there is hardly a national news outlet or publication that isn't aware of the story — just Google it, and you'll find out, telling how the library in a small Midwestern town discovered it owned a book inscribed by Abraham Lincoln.

It took ALPLM curator James Cornelius "about seconds" recognize the handwriting Lincoln's, Rhoades. Of course, though, it still required the requisite scrutiny to confirm the inscription belonged to Lincoln and make the find official.

"Types of Mankind," written by two physicians and a third man and published 1855, purported to offer scientific evidence of not only the inferiority of African-descended people and Native Americans but also proof supporting the notion that they were not human beings in the same sense as Caucasians. The book aided slave owners in their argument for the institution that supported their way of life and over which Americans fought

It was a book in which Lincoln, who opposed separate standards for whites and blacks, would have been keenly interested, author James Lander told the magazine of the Illinois Historical Preservation Agency.

the Civil War.

The year the book was published, Lincoln defended a DeWitt County resident Bill Dungey, who sued his brotherin-law for libel after he spread the rumor Dungey was secretly African-American — not likely the terminology Dungey's brother-in-law Lincoln won the case for Dungey against his friend C.H. Moore, who represented the brother-

It is possible Lincoln borrowed the book from Moore to prepare for the case. It is also possible he used it later, during the Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1858 or in 1860 for his presidential campaign.

Warner Library's copy of the book has not been in circulation since the 1950s. It was first stored in the basement of the old library and then moved upstairs with other books to a temperature and humidity-controlled environment after the new library was completed in 1992, said library assistant director Bobbi Perryman.

Since the discovery that the inscription in the book was genuine A. Lincoln, it has been kept in a safe deposit box in one of the local banks.

Rhoades suspects that the book was probably safe from theft because "Lincoln didn't actually sign it," she said. Considering the amount of phony Lincoln handwriting littering the collecting world, Rhoades also had suspected that, at some point, a kid might have inscribed the book in imitation Lincoln script as a joke.

"What the Presidential library determined, which makes sense, is that Lincoln borrowed it from C.H. Moore and wrote C.H.'s name in it so he could return it to its rightful owner," Rhoades Perryman contacted someone at the ALPLM, recommended bringing the book to them for analysis by Cornelius.

"So, Joan took it over, and he took one look at it and said, basically, 'yeah'," Perryman said. Rhoades said she at first thought Cornelius was kidding because "he was so quickly, 'yup, that's it'."

The announcement the discovery that the inscription was genuine did not initiate a "worldwide press release" primarily because of the nature of the book, Rhoades said.

"This was based on the pseudoscience of the time that said that the races were actually separate species," Rhoades said. "That way the white could own a 'different species'."

"This was basically the precursor to Eugenics," Perrryman said. Eugenics advocated reproduction increasing of people with so-called improve humanity. One of the desired traits sought was whiteness - intended in part to ensure African-Americans and other nonwhites would remain minorities.

Eugenics became prominent during the first third of the 20th century, becoming an academic discipline universities. Many of its principles were instituted in the U.S., Europe and Brazil. The Nazis used Eugenics to justify their racial policies.

The important aspect of the book for Warner Library, however, is its historical connection to a man who spent much of his time as an attorney in DeWitt County and would eventually become our 16th President.

A librarian Rhoades met, and whose husband is a Lincoln scholar, expressed how important the authentication of this inscription was.

"They've been trying to put this book into Lincoln's hands for years, and now they can do it," Rhoades said.

For now, the book is in safe keeping until the money is raised to have it restored. The fly page of the book on which Lincoln wrote has become separated from the book, and there is also damage to the book's spine. Once that is done, Rhoades hopes the book will be on permanent display in the library's museum room.

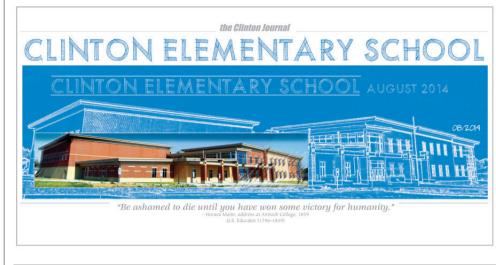

Restoration could be expensive, something with which Rhoades and Perryman are already familiar.

The library is currently fundraising to restore two ledgers kept by a local doctor who fought with the Illinois 20th Regiment during the Civil War. The doctor kept in the ledger detailed information about the men of the regiment. Unfortunately, as years passed, he pasted items over the pages, covering the information. The restoration will cost several thousands dollars.

Library staff is excited, though, to have two such important projects, two that are so inextricably connected - a detailed ledger about the local Civil War regiment and a book inscribed by the Civil War president.

"It makes you wonder what other have tucked away that they don't know about," Rhoades said.

Black's property approved for new animal shelter

CLINTON The county board voted 6-5 on Tuesday to purchase the former Black's Heating & Air Conditioning property to house the county's animal shelter. The vote took place during a special meeting.

Board member Doug Tucker counted the results of a survey conducted asking the public about choices being considered for a new animal shelter. The result overwhelmingly favored the Black's property, 291 of the just over 300 returning surveys were in favor of buying Black's.

Board member Dan

Ballenger immediately made a motion to buy Black's property at the negotiated price $320,000; Tucker seconded the motion. The purchase was more than an alternate plan to add on to the existing shelter but several hundred thousand dollars less than the plan developed to build a new CLINTON -Some people might have thought they'd never see the day, but work on the new county animal shelter is now about 20 percent completed. Plumbing and some of the HVAC ductwork was in place late this past week, and the first interior walls went up on Sept. 9.

The county bought the former Black's Heating and Air Conditioning property in 2014. The property is located east of Clinton on Rt. 10 near Stericycle. The architect hired to develop the animal shelter plan recommended converting the building on the south side of the site for shelter. The structure initially was a storage building with no interior walls. DeWitt County EMS will lease from the county the building located on the north part of the site.

The negotiated purchase price for the vacant property was $320,000. The purchase was more expensive than alternate plan to add on to the existing shelter but several hundred thousand dollars less than the plan developed to build a new shelter.

The project will triple the space available from the current shelter at about 1,000 square feet to approximately 3,000 square feet. The building, which has a total square footage of about 7,000 square feet, lies inside a fenced-in property. The building also will provide garage space for impounded cars from the sheriff's department and some storage for other county departments.

In addition to expanded kennel space and separate space for cats, the new shelter will include a covered, outdoor run for animals, additional storage space and future expansion space where vets could perform spay and neuter procedures. The shelter also will have specially designed troughs and drains for washing the kennel floors.

Rogers praised the contractors doing various work to the new shelter.

New Save-A-Lot store coming to Clinton

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON - Save-A-Lot food storeowner Dave Jackson announced Monday his plans to build a new store that could open by November. The came announcement during the regular Clinton City Council meeting.

Tim Followell, with the City of Clinton, said the city worked with Jackson for several months to arrange his purchase of city owned property for the new store, which will be located at Monroe and Washington Streets. Earlier, Jackson had applied for a reduction of the railroad setback on the property to help accommodate the new store. Railroad authorities recently granted setback change.

felt confident it would go forward. Jackson also is working with the city to create a plan for the building left empty by the Save-A-Lot move.

Followell said the new store would help improve area considered blighted. Jackson said the property falling inside the TIF district was an important element in the plan. TIF (Tax Increment Financing) districts were created to help funnel money back into the redevelopment of those blighted areas.

Jackson said his new store would be 66 percent larger than his current store, a store he said sees some 10,000 customers a week from, not only Clinton, but surrounding communities as far away as Farmer City and Bloomington.

Jackson said the new store and the move one block south could help generate business traffic for other businesses in the downtown square vicinity.

"We've outgrown the box," Jackson said about his current store. Jackson's current building was built in 1908 and for many years was an Eisner Foods store familiar to many Clinton residents. "Our customer count is growing every single week, every single year," Jackson said. He attributed this growth largely to increasing numbers of out-of-town

Jackson said he hoped to break ground on the new store in June with opening by November, optimistically by sometime in October.

Awaiting outcomes before changing wind ordinance

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON — County zoning administrator Mike Bradford, on Monday, recommended to land use committee of the county board that the county not pursue a "fast track" approach to updating its current wind tower ordinance. E.ON Climate and Renewables, a builder and operator of wind farms, is expected to submit its application to the county in June.

E.ON must apply to the county for a special use permit.

"I am opposed to doing anything with it until we have a chance to see what the other counties are doing and go through item by item in ours," Bradford said. Macon County had done some adjusting to its wind farm ordinance in expectation of E.ON building in that county, Bradford said.

"I wouldn't want to recommend any track approach to getting it done," Bradford told members of the land use committee.

Bradford said he felt it would be better to rework the wind farm ordinance as part of a plan to update the county's comprehensive

"I would hate to see us piecemeal a wind ordinance right now just to make it match Macon County's, and then in another year come back through the Bradford said a number of counties had "tweaked" wind ordinances recently. But, he said there were some unresolved legislative considerations that also were part of the "Right now, the Farm Bureau is working with a lobbyist about ag impact mitigation surveys," Bradford said.

Bradford said the impact mitigation ag legislation could through by the end of this week, "but we don't know yet knew when it would take effect." He said it would be better to wait.

He also cited recent by counties concerns over the decibel levels of towers and reported some had incorporated noise restrictions into their ordinances. Under current DeWitt County ordinance, a tower may not be located within 1,500 feet of a nonparticipating residence and the noise from a tower may not exceed 50 db (decibels). Some counties have enacted ordinances restricting noise levels to 35 db.

A dangerous comeback

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

On March 2, DeWitt County Sheriff Jered Shofner, Clinton Chief of Police Ben Lowers, county and city leaders met at the sheriff's office to talk about the alarming increase in the use of heroin in DeWitt county. The goal, to begin a plan of action to help people addicted to heroin find help, to intervene and possibly save a life.

"This heroin epidemic, it has been worse lately," Shofner recently told the Clinton Journal. "But, if it's your child who died six years ago, it's still "Exploded" is the word Shofner uses to describe the proliferation of heroin usage locally over the past year. Champaign and Decatur are the two primary areas serving as sources for the local heroin supply.

"We talk to those agencies, and we hear them say, 'Heroin is hitting us hard'," Shofner said.

seizures and Drug contact between informants and narcotics agents are two of the ways authorities know where the drugs come from and where they are going.

"You just get a feel for what's going on."

An increase in usage and in deaths from heroin overdoses partly illustrates how much of the drug authorities are unable to stop in spite of their efforts.

"Spice," a synthetic drug, still shows up frequently in drug tests conducted by probation officers.

"But, usually, it doesn't just outright kill people," Shofner said.

He said one of the disturbing aspects of the heroin problem is the often-questionable level of purity in the end product and the other substances that frequently get added to the heroin that is sold. complications Those can make the drug more dangerous than obvious destructive effects of being addicted. "In the past year, it's been like a snowball rolling down hill," Shofner said about the problem.

Local authorities were hearing about the heroin problem from surrounding agencies, but it hadn't yet struck home in DeWitt County. "It was almost as though we were insulated a little," Shofner said. "But, now it's seeping into small, rural counties." He said he hadn't heard much about the problem from those other rural counties, and he wondered why that was the case. "I think the two biggest things going against most rural counties is, one, there are no treatment centers here, and, secondly, we're fortunate that we have our drug task force here, but a lot of small counties don't."

Without a treatment facility and not being part of a coordinated enforcement effort, tracking heroin addiction in those counties is more difficult.

"It's not a problem you can deal with in conventional traffic stops," Shofner said.

Shofner said that about 47,000 people in the U.S. died from drug overdoses in 2014, 60 percent from overdoses involving opiate, or heroin related, substances.

According to National Survey of Drug Use and Health, about 9.4 percent of Americans used an illicit drug during any one-month period in 2013. After alcohol, marijuana has the highest rate of dependence or abuse among all drugs, according to the survey. But, heroin usage and addiction has increased over the past three years, in many cases in people who had been using prescription drugs, and of the nearly 8.6 percent of the population needing treatment for drug addiction, less that 1 percent receive treatment at a specialized facility.

With regard to the drastic increase in heroin use nationwide since 2013, California prominent treatment centers referred to it as "a dangerous comeback."

"I know a lot of people feel helpless," Shofner said. He said he had reached the point at which the problem was literally keeping him up at night thinking about it.

The treatment gap, the disparity between people who need treatment but aren't getting it, was, like the national survey, a point Shofner also made, feeling that arresting and incarcerating drug users will not necessarily solve the problem.

Shofner would like to implement a program similar to ones used in other counties that would make it possible for law enforcement to help people addicted without legal consequence.

"It's a program where people can walk through the door of a police department or sheriff's department, and 'here are my drugs, I want treatment."

If the person surrendered his drugs and asked for treatment, he would not be charged criminally and authorities would get that person into treatment.

"If we have to, we'll drive you there," Shofner said. He said locking people up who are addicted tended only to stall their drug usage, "and give them better connections when they get out."

The current condition of the Illinois budget also is not helping the situation. The state mandated drug courts that counties must oversee are currently bogged down because funding for state assessment personnel is nonexistent.

Candidates for drug court must be assessed for their suitability in the program.

"The mechanism that handles those assessments is broken," Shofner said. "There is one lady who does those assessments for five big counties and ours, so they have a backlog of people who need to be in drug court."

A law, known as "Casey's Law," permits families to force members into drug treatment. Some states have implemented that law.

Shofner said it was good that those people received

"The bad thing about it is, if you force someone into rehab, they're not going to succeed because they don't want to at that stage in their lives."

Having a neutral third party was a better option, Shofner felt.

"It's not going to be the police, it's not going to be a family member who's maybe fought with them for the past two years or who they've stolen from."

He said the goal was to get that person treatment.

"I think the future here lies with our faith-based and other community organizations that will step in and help those people get treatment," Shofner said.

Those organizations would be part of coordinated effort that would include "volunteers who are not police officers."

"So, when these people (those addicted to drugs) walk in to a police station, they call these folks." The group formed from the community organizations would then take the lead in assisting the people asking

• Future meetings for developing a program are planned. Gov. Rauner signs bill to save Clinton Power Station

CLINTON -There was plenty of energy Wednesday at Clinton High School as Gov. Bruce Rauner put some energy of his own back into the local economy by signing an Illinois energy bill that will save jobs and keep Clinton Power Station open for another 10 years. The Ill. The bill also makes it possible for Exelon, owner of the Clinton nuclear facility, to keep open its plant in the Quad Cities area. Exelon announced several months ago plans to close the two plants, Clinton in June 2017 and Quad Cities in June 2018, because of major loss of revenue at the facilities. Local man gives $1 million to local organizations

CLINTON — William 'Bill" Davenport is described as a private person who was always generous to others.

Leaders from several non-profit organizations know this is a massive understatement. Davenport's nephew, Steve Davenport, remembers visiting with his uncle and said he would invariably receive a couple phone calls requesting donations during nearly ever visit.

"He never turned them down," recalls Steve.

So when Davenport passed away last July at age 90, he already had plans in place to continue his generosity.

Never married, Bill lived with his sister, Netti, in a house on Quincy Street in

He was a local native who spent 20 years in the Marines serving overseas several locations before heading back to his hometown to farm with his uncle, George Davenport. Upon his retirement from farming, Bill and Netti became snowbirds and enjoyed wintering in Florida where Bill could enjoy his trapshooting hobby on a regular basis.

"He was pretty good (at trapshooting)," says Steve, but like everything else in his life, "he didn't brag about it."

Such appeared to be the way Davenport wanted to live his entire life: by quietly helping others without recognition. Davenport's generosity continues today donations to local and national organizations that he believed made Clinton a good place to live.

Davenport's last will and testament directed donations of $100,000 to each of the following organizations, noted:

- St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital ($125,000 beneficiary to a life insurance policy)

And so he has.

A happy life

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

"Love thy work, and life will be a happy one."

Those words by 19th century English writer and artist John Ruskin are favorites of Sherry Fulton's. By most measures, Sherry would agree with Ruskin's assessment - she has loved her work, hence, her life has been a happy one.

Sherry will retire at the end of March after nearly 35 years as unit educator for University of Illinois Extension, most of her career spent in DeWitt County. But as much as she has loved her work here, doing what she always knew she was meant to do, Sherry looks forward to the next phase of her life and new adventures.

"A lot of it is attitude," Sherry says. "Because in my 34 ½ years, we have gone through ups and downs."

Sherry says she feels fortunate that she has spent the majority of her career in DeWitt County and that DeWitt County has had the funds to support Extension programs.

"About half our funding DeWitt comes from County tax dollars," she says.

Several years ago, Sherry told the Journal about how much she enjoyed teaching, which is a big part of what she does in the myriad programs Extension conducts, including the 4-H program.

"I just really enjoy teaching," she said then.

She also said her parents, who operated a dairy farm in Iowa, were very education conscious and were strong influences in guiding her future career. Sherry earned her Bachelor of Science from Iowa State University and, later, her Master of Science from the University of Illinois.

Sherry met her husband John while working with Extension. He, too, will retire at the end of March from the Logan County Extension office. They have three adult children, Andrew, and twins David and Daniel. The desire to teach has been at the heart of Sherry's years with Extension. "It warms my heart;

yes, I'm retiring, but I'm passing that skill set to not only my own kids, but other kids," Sherry said. And, adults benefit from Extension programs as well. "Of course there's 4-H, but there's the Small Farms Program, there's Food & Nutrition, the Horticulture, Master Gardeners, and we definitely do some partnerships with those groups," Sherry says.

4-H itself is offering some of the most exciting programs in its history. "4-H has expanded into robotics," Sherry says. "My gosh, that's exciting." In fact, the robotics program is so popular, the group has some 30 meetings scheduled for this year. "The kids were engaged; they were working on their robotics - that's cool stuff." The success of the program has hinged on a large part on the quality of volunteers who can work with the kids.

"For me, it's finding the volunteers who have that skill set to be teaching kids," Sherry says.

She had praise in general for all of the volunteers who make the Extension programs and 4-H what it This includes Dan Enos and his volunteer work with the horse program, something he started many years ago.

"And, it just grew and grew," Sherry says. "And, starting in April, they'll be out there every Thursday riding. That's really cool."

Local winners at AmVets Illinois convention

As president of the DeWitt County Fair, Enos, too, has led continual improvements of the fairgrounds.

"He's given it the leadership, as lot of people have. The fairgrounds look really nice."

Sherry also is proud of the DeWitt County 4-H Foundation board, formed when she first arrived at DeWitt County Extension in the early 1980s. "And, with funding the way it is, I repeatedly tell the Foundation board, 'you may be a big source of the 4-H program. Keep that 4-H Foundation going."

The Foundation board has helped many times supplementing funding to create new programs or help existing ones.

Sherry said the Foundation had been the recipient of a number of generous donations and memorials.

"I just want to see them keep going," she says.

Sherry also praised the diligence of retired Clinton teacher Don Prather, who has served as Foundation treasurer since its inception.

"Big hats off to Don Prather. He does the most thorough treasurer's report, and I really appreciate that." But, as much as she has enjoyed her career with Extension, Sherry says she just feels it's time for her to move on.

"I'm not retiring, I'm just rewiring," she read somewhere. "And, I thought, exactly, it is time to go do something else."

Sherry said she had a pretty full calendar through the summer. One of her sons is getting married, and her mother will celebrate her 90th birthday.

After that, some traveling, some gardening, and who knows.

CLINTON Less than 36 hours after the city council decided to remove downtown parking meters, they were gone Wednesday morning. The commissioners' decision came during Monday's council meeting.

Main St. Salon owner Diane Peck addressed the council in August about removing the meters. Peck felt it would make parking convenient more downtown customers and said she wasn't worried that free parking would cause some people to monopolize available spaces. The council enacted a 90day trial period, covering free during that time. "Everything in my end of town has gone really well," Peck told commissioners on Monday. There are still a few business owners who of the red bags loose from the meters about two weeks ago, which further confused some customers, Peck reported. Based on her experience with the trial, Peck said she was in favor of removing the meters.

Re-attaching the red bags probably would not have been a good option. Police Chief Ben Lowers said the bags would not likely hold up under winter weather.

Commissioners they did not feel strongly one way or the other about the meters, and the consensus was to remove them at merchants' recommendation. City administrator Tim Followell also suggested removing the posts that hold the meters, for liability reasons, and also because it would make conditions safer and more convenient for city snow plow drivers.

City treasurer Lichtenwalter said the city took in about $6,000 a year from metered parking. Commissioners agreed the amount was not significant enough to necessarily warrant keeping the meters. And, it was pointed out that factoring in employee hours for maintaining and enforcing the meters might

CLINTON — Walmart

Corporate office announced Wednesday it will close its Clinton Walmart store on July 20. Walmart corporate director communications Anne Hatfield told the Clinton Wednesday Journal morning that Clinton store employees would be paid through Aug. 31. She said the company would help employees who want to remain with Walmart locate other positions in the company.

The pharmacy will close on July 20. Hatfield said they would help customers transfer their records to other pharmacies.

The Clinton Walmart opened in 1983 and is the smallest of the retailer's stores in Illinois, at about 35,000 square feet.

"The decision to close our Clinton store is not an easy one, but, as a company, we are committed to continuing our growth and investment in Illinois. We opened this store in 1983 and we are as proud today as we've ever been with how the store leadership and associates have served and contributed to the local community over the the customers who have given us the privilege of serving them in Clinton. We look forward to continuing to serve them at other area locations and online at walmart.com," Hatfield said.

"We were surprised to hear (about Wal-mart closing)," said DeWitt County Development (DCDC) Council director executive Elizabeth Foulks. "We recognize this is a blow to Clinton and DeWitt County."

Foulks said DCDC was "in the dark" about the closure but said the council is "trying to find a direction to move forward to help the situation."

Clinton AmVets Post 14 receives $100k grant

Darrel Tucke

Post 14 Finance Officer, Publicity Officer, Grant Writer and Administrator

CLINTON — As his final term as state representative inches toward the end, Bill Mitchell has been able to help two DeWitt County organizations in a big way.

Earlier this summer, Mitchell was able to deliver a $100,000 grant to the DeWitt County Friendship Center. On July 19, it was Clinton AmVets' turn.

Mitchell presented a mock check to Clinton AmVets Post 14 as a representation of funds for an Illinois grant that was applied for and approved over four years ago.

The AmVets Post 14 Mission Statement reads, in part, that the Clinton AmVets is here "to assist with the needs of our country's veterans through moral, citizenship and financial support." As writen in the grant application, the grant funding supports this mission by providing the funds to obtain a building and property to perform various functions of the Post as discussed below:

a) Continue our Veterans objective of Helping Veterans: have become one of the primary veterans organizations in Clinton area of Veterans Helping Veterans.

Meet onewith local on-one veterans who need assistance (financial, advisory [obtaining help/assistance], and counseling [listening, sharing/venting])

c) Establish an office, Post meeting place, and Veterans meeting place: The Post previously had no place to perform daily tasks. In the past, the organization met in a barber shop and were granted some use of an area in the American Legion building.

d) Hold Post meetings and any special meetings

e) Work to raise money selling at local events: AmVets have four money-raising efforts a year (May Days booth, July 4 booth, Apple and Pork Festival booth and Eagles supported event). With these efforts, AmVets has been able to make several donations to support veterans and their families, while still developing a "nest egg" for the operation of the Post, But it was not sufficient to buy a facility.

The scope of the grant is to procure a building, then add on to it, obtain furnishings, and make some minor repairs to the building exterior. The grant application is required to provide a specific breakdown of the plan and, as part of the grant process, quarterly updates are required to be submitted to the state of Illinois.

Post has membership of about 110 veterans, and members expressed excitement about expanding future activities and influence with the receipt of this grant.

CLINTON — It's been difficult for Clinton residents to miss the work going on at the Van Buren Street and Illini Drive Ameren substation. But, most people might not know just how big the project is. Ameren has already started upgrading the transmission power lines from South its Bloomington Substation to Clinton Route 54 Substation. The project should be completed by the end of the year, weather permitting. Work will begin this spring to upgrade the Ameren Illinois transmission lines from Clinton Route 54 to its North Decatur

The purpose of the work is to enhance reliability for customers, Bretsch said.

CLINTON — The Vault teen and community center could open as early as late summer, and a $1,000 donation toward a security system will help keep the premises protected.

Dr. Harold Allen and pastor Jeff DeLaughter, of the DeWitt County Substance Abuse Coalition, met The Vault founder Michelle Witzke recently to present her a check from the coalition and to talk about the project.

Jeff DeLaughter said that young people were not only the next generation, but "the now generation." "And, we're trying to help all we can."

DeLaughter said, as a youth, he spent time, as many kids did, on the square.

"We didn't have anything else then either, but we didn't get into trouble," DeLaughter said.

He said that, today, young people seem more separated into various groups, and he hopes the center can bring them all together. DeLaughter expressed excitement that local youth were playing an important part in developing the center.

"The kids are the heart and soul behind this because they know their needs, they know what's going to draw peers in here and what kind of help they need," Witke said.

She said the kids working with adults has made all the difference.

"And, you see businesses getting involved, and that amazing," DeLaughter added.

On this day, workers were busy welding metal wall studs and building the snack bar area. Students decided to adopt an industrial look for the center, which has saved money by leaving exposed brick as part of the look.

Because fundraising is so much work, the initial phase of the project is focused on rehab of the main floor for program and services development.

"As long as we stick to the budget, we've got what we need for the first level," Witzke said. "It will take the summer to get set up, but we're looking at late summer to

Clinton IGA to sell to Kirby Foods

CLINTON — Clinton IGA, a staple in the community for 60 years, will change owners on Dec. 2, 2019.

Champaign-based Kirby Foods, Inc., will take over ownership of the "Hometown Proud" grocery store and retain all the employees.

"The main thing to me was my people," said owner Mike Chapman, who has been in the grocery business for 47 years. "I've turned down other offers to sell over the years, but this felt like the right fit at the right time."

Anita McDonald and

Chapman

"continue to run the store as they have for years," said Chapman.

Chapman said they will grandfather in all vacations and sick time for the employees.

It was a difficult decision to sell for Chapman who feels his employees are like family.

"A lot of my employees started here when they were 16 just like I did," said Chapman. "I've watched their kids grow up."

Chapman said he will remain in Clinton and plans to spend more time outdoors and with his wife, children, and five grandchildren.

"I've realized how important health, life and family are I want spend as much time as I can with them."

December 1 will be Chapman's final inventory before handing over ownership to Kirby.

"The Clinton store fits well into our geographical operating area," said Kirby Foods President and CEO Larry Tobias. Kirby currently has 16 stores within a 90-mile radius.

Tobias said Kirby Foods

sets itself apart from other grocery companies because it is 100 percent employee. "Employees have the opportunity to grow and share in the company."

"Clinton is a great community," he continued. "We are honored to be there."

ZBA says 'no'

Gordon Woods

Donny

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

CLINTON — Members of the DeWitt County Board will be in the hot seat next month after the Zoning Board of Appeals (ZBA) voted Tuesday to recommend the county deny a special use permit for the Alta Farms wind energy project.

The ZBA voted 5-1 to send the matter to the full board for final consideration with a recommendation to not grant the permit.

After approximately 25 hours of testimony during a series of ZBA hearings, ZBA members met Tuesday to discuss their concerns about the project. ZBA member John Griffin entered a motion to grant the permit and read a statement of support for the project.

Griffin has a farm in Barnett Township.

"Our home is just outside the boundary of the wind turbines, but they will influence our home and property 24/7," Griffin said. "Grandchildren will continue to come to enjoy the property. Regardless which study property values I review, I am confident that if a decision would be made to sell, there would be willing buyers that would be willing to pay a price significantly higher than my cost."

He also felt Tradewind had complied with the county's original wind energy rules under the ordinance, but then those rules were changed.

ZBA chairman Andy

Hedrick related a letter he received from the superintendent of the Armstrong, Ill. school district describing illness in school children there he believed was the result of shadow flicker from nearby wind towers. Hedrick himself said one of his sons no longer can travel near the towers in Macon County because he suffers from vertigo.

Mark Sterr said testimony given about wind farm interference with weather radar caused him concern.

"I hadn't considered that prior to Mr. Waddell's presentation, but that definitely causes me to have some concerns about public safety," Sterr said.

Dave Waters said he felt most of the shadow flicker could be better controlled or eliminated. Waters felt shadow flicker should be controlled sufficiently so as to result in no flicker on the residences of nonparticipating land owners.

A key issue for chairman Hedrick was the potential effect the project would have on drainage districts in the area of the wind farm. He feared the deep digging necessary for erecting the towers would damage the carefully planned system of drainage tiles.

Hedrick expressed concern that there was no recourse for non-participating land owners if a broken or re-routed tile caused damage to their property.

Other ZBA members

shared Hedrick's concern.

ZBA member Steve Perring said he understood land owners' feelings they should be able to decide how to manage their own properties. But, he said he also understood that neighboring property owners should be able to enjoy their homes as well.

"Someone has to look out for those people's rights, too," Perring said.

Perring also felt Tradewind did not have a clear strategy for decommissioning the wind towers when the farm outlived its usefulness.

None of the ZBA members expressed any opposition to wind energy. At least one member said he supported green energy. But, the consensus among members was they had not received enough detailed information about key aspects of the proposed Alta Farms project.

Fire training facility will save money, help insurance rates

CLINTON — While Clinton Fire Department's fire training facility already has been used for some training, it continues to take shape. Eventually, Clinton firefighters should be able to do the majority of their training locally, saving the city quite a bit of money.

"We pay a lot of money.

"We pay a lot of money for individual groups to go to Champaign to the Fire Service Institute," says Dan Ballenger, commissioner of public health and safety. The Illinois Fire Service

The department began looking into buying some of the containers, which cost them about $2,600 each.

The stacked containers have been attached to one another and mounted on concreate footings. The department enlisted help from engineers at The Farnsworth Group.

The containers

themselves already are engineered, but Farnsworth examined plans for interior stairways and other modifications to ensure their safety.

"And, then, it's up to us to

"And, then, it's up to us to do an inspection every time we use them," Ballenger says. "We've also had to set up policies about how to use them properly." Six containers make up the main structure, and later two containers mounted separately on end will serve as practice towers for practicing high-rope rescue, among other things.

The main structure also will have areas for firefighters to practice cutting through roofs, and rails will be mounted around the tops of the containers. Windows and doorways have been cut through spots in the containers so firefighters can practice crawling through those openings to fight fires.

The site measures 4.8 acres, which meets the state requirement for this type of facility.

Blake West is in charge of training at the department and will design the scenarios firefighters will use to practice.

Designated areas of the structure will hold the fire so the heat can be controlled, partly to prevent warping of the structure's metalwork, but firefighters will practice in real conditions with actual smoke created from the fire.

The equipment, such as ladders, used for calls will be the same used for training, which is one reason the department tests its equipment on a regular basis. All of the department's ladders, for example, recently passed stress tests.

"You can get hurt training too, so we're trying to do everything by the book," Ballenger said.

The project has been funded with donations and primarily volunteer labor.

Local nonprofit marks 25 years

Gordon Woods

gwoods@theclintonjournal.com

It's tough these days for small communities to keep some traditions alive and to provide activities for residents to enjoy. But, in Wapella, a group of volunteers manages to do just that, and they've been doing it for 25 years.

The informal board of the "Wapella Says YES" organization met this week, as they do every month, to map out activities for the community. And, it so happens, this is the 25th year they've done that.

"Rose Harrold is actually the one who started it," says Wapella Says YES volunteer Jane Buraglio.

At the time, a grant, known as the Homework Club grant, was available in Wapella.

"And, the same guy who put the grant together called her (Rose) at home and said, 'Hey, there's another grant out there'," Buraglio says. "It was a positive year."

Someone told Rose she would "never get it done."

"That lit the fire under her," Buraglio says.

Wapella Says YES hosts

a number of community activities each year, and even people who aren't regular volunteers often pitch in to help. "A lot of people who

"A lot of people who come also help with clean up and that sort of thing," Buraglio says.

Local students, too, often help.

"We were lucky, the last thing we did was family fun night, and we had two students who offered to come and help us," says

Cheri Miller.

High school students can receive community service hours for helping with activities. Wapella Says YES is a nonprofit, 501 (3) (c) organization.

"That was nice, and they did most of the heavy work, Miller says.

"Our event lasted a little over four hours, and they needed four hours," says Miller's husband Mark Miller. "So, it was perfect for them," and they really enjoyed it."

Wapella Says YES events are always free and open to the public. Over the years, the organization has hosted line dancing lessons, babysitting clinics, Halloween parties, family fun nights, cake decorating, town beautification projects, the community Christmas party, Easter parties, spaghetti dinners, karate lessons, teen dances and a long list of other events.

The group also has been generous to other organizations, making donations to organizations such as Angel Tree, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Dove, Wapella Fire Department, The Write Stuff for Kids and many others.

Before 1994, the local

The Write Stuff for Kids and many others.

Before 1994, the local Booster Club helped support activities of the Wapella School District.

When the school district dissolved, so did many of the community activities.

The Illinois Coalition for Community Services offered a grant to fund the kinds of activities Wapella Says YES wanted to provide. They received a $15,000 grant, and for the next three years the group learned to plan, budget and implement free community activities.

Over its 25-year history, Wapella Says YES has raised about $337,000 in grants, donations and from fundraisers to use for the community. The group has raised more than $40,000 for improvements to Wapella Park and the village over the years.

Activities sponsored by Wapella Says YES often draw from 50-70 people, with the Christmas party around 100.

Their biggest annual fundraiser, held on the grounds of the C.H. Moore Homestead during the Apple 'n Pork Festival, had to be abandoned a few years ago because of a lack of volunteers. But, that hasn't stopped them from looking at other areas where they could raise funds, including cookouts, hosted by Clinton IGA, and an upcoming ham and bean dinner at the Wapella Community Center, scheduled for 5-7 p.m. on March 30. The cost will be

$5 per person.
