New clues: 'The Irrational' takes an unexpected approach to investigating crime

Some investigators just have the knack when it comes to seeing the missing piece in confounding investigations.

In "The Irrational," a brand-new crime procedural premiering Monday, Sept. 25, on NBC, Prof. Alec Mercer (Jesse L. Martin, "The Flash") is pulled from the world of academia to lend his highly sought-after expertise to virtually unsolvable cases.

"The Irrational" is based on the popular book "Predictably Irrational" by author Dan Ariely, about the theories behind decision-making and rational thought. The series drops Mercer into active investigations in dire need of a fresh perspective. With law enforcement and investigators at a loss for tying suspects and motives to shocking crimes, the professor joins the team to lead them down his unique path of discovery.

In its series description, NBC notes that Mercer's "insight and unconventional approach to understanding human behavior lead him and the team on a series of intense, unexpected journeys to solve illogical puzzles and perplexing mysteries."

In the official trailer for the series, Mercer is seen very much at home at the front of a lecture hall, teaching one of his psychology intro courses before he meets a little bit of resistance when he encounters law enforcement. An investigator asks him if he's the "science guy," leading Mercer to quip, "That's Bill Nye. I'm actually the behavioral sciences guy." His sense of humor shows itself again when his theoretical approaches are gently questioned before he remarks, "Gravity was just a theory at one point."

What are the methods behind Mercer's breakthrough analysis of these high-profile, dead-end cases? Well, the trailer gives a glimpse into the theories he uses to shed light on where investigative trails have gone cold. Mercer shoots off a few choice $10 phrases like "predictable irrationality," "paradoxical persuasion," "attentional blindness" and "bereavement sex" as some of the things knocking around his head as he takes a new look at tough cases.

While Mercer is increasingly pulled away from his academic work as he successfully aids federal investigations, he does make sure to keep two of his best and brightest graduate students in the loop. Molly Kunz ("Chicago Fire") stars as Phoebe, a protégé of Mercer's who enthusiastically follows in her professor's footsteps, both literally and figuratively. Arash De-Maxi ("Partner Track") is Owen, another one of Mercer's students who gets pulled into his new side gig.

The new series also stars Maahra Hill ("Delilah") as FBI agent Marisa, Mercer's main contact and partner in these investigations. Travina Springer ("Ms. Marvel") is Kylie, Mercer's sister and current roommate. While the pair are close siblings, Kylie is more of a free spirit than Mercer, who uses his own creativity to shake up bureaucracies. Soma Chhaya ("The Breadwinner," 2017) stars as Jasmine and Ella Cannon ("iZombie") is Lila.

"The Irrational" debuts following the singing competition series "The Voice" on NBC and joins the new series "Found," the network's second new original series premiering this fall. Another procedural, "Found" follows a crisis management team that focuses on finding missing people. With most networks relying on non-scripted series amid the ongoing WGA and SAG-AFTRA strikes, NBC's new scripted dramas will be some of the fall's lone non-competition or reality offerings.

Gina Rodriguez might seem a bit young to be playing the mother to the latest incarnation of "Spy Kids," but Netflix evidently doesn't think so.

The "Jane the Virgin" alum - who's had more series work lately via the ABC sitcom "Not Dead Yet," which has been renewed for a second season – is teamed with Zachary Levi ("Chuck," "Shazam!") in playing secret agents whose children (Everly Carganilla, Connor Esterson) enter the espionage game in "Spy Kids: Armageddon," director and co-writer Robert Rodriguez's new reboot of the franchise that's now streaming on Netflix. The youngsters are duped into helping a game developer release a computer virus that could make him all-powerful technologically, prompting the kids to try to counteract what they've done before it's too late. Billy Magnussen ("No Time to Die") and D.J. Cotrona also star.

Though the industry strikes have impacted her career as they have for so many others, Rodriguez has kept up a steady output of work in recent years, even with having given birth to her first child last March. In addition to performing in such other shows as "Diary of a Future President" (which she also executive-produced) and "Lost Ollie," plus movies including "I Want You Back" and "Awake," she has directed episodes of "Doogie Kamealoha, M.D." and Sophia Bush's short-lived "Good Sam" (as well as the aforementioned "Diary of a Future President").

Rodriguez cut her directing teeth with three episodes of "Jane the Virgin," the series that delivered her to stardom over a five-season run (and exactly 100 episodes) and earned her a Golden Globe Award. Her success in that show set her up to pursue other projects on both sides of the camera, and she launched her own company, tellingly named I Can & I Will Productions. She has stated her intention for much of her work to be an accurate reflection of the Latino community, and since filmmaker (Robert) Rodriguez has maintained a similar aim, they make very logical colleagues on "Spy Kids: Armageddon."
