The parade appearance will mark Stary's 11th year with the Brookings School District and his 31st year in teaching. The Brookings Bobcat Marching Band, under Stary's leadership, has repeatedly taken top honors in regional and national com-

Stary's forthcoming appearance in the Rose Parade is part of the Saluting America's Band Directors Project to "recognize and salute the exceptional instruction, character development and inspiration provided by music educators everywhere," according to the project's website at banddirectorsalute.org.

The goal of the project is to have up to 300 band directors from public and private middle schools, high schools,

Robotic milking is latest hightech tool on dairy farms in S.D.

By BART PFANKUCH South Dakota News Watch

Dairy farmer Rodney Elliott stands in a small room where part of his $12 million robotic milking system is doing

The robotic system is located inside a huge new barn on Elliott's farm northeast of Lake Norden and is one of only a handful of fully robotic milking operations in South Dakota.

As the system functions flawlessly around him - feeding, watering, bedding, washing and milking hundreds of cows day and night with nary a human touch - Elliott watches with a mix of excitement and awe.

"My mother milked cows with just a bucket and a stool," Elliott said, his Irish accent rising as in song. "We've sure come a long way, haven't we?" Elliott, 57, is the owner of Drumgoon

Dairy, one of the largest, most successful and now most technologically advanced dairy farms in South Dakota. After years of study and hesitance, Elliott made the move into robotic milking in mid-2020 and his first robotic systems launched in late January 2021. The system seeks to make milking easier and more efficient for farmers but also for cows. In the system designed by Swedish agricultural manufacturing company

DeLaval, about 75 cows are assigned to each milking machine. Within each robotic system, cows are trained to move on their own through a large rectangular pen split into two sides and outfitted with a series of one-way gates separating areas where they are fed, watered and rested before entering a small gated area where milking takes place. They can be milked up to three times a day.

The system is similar to traditional milking operations except cows are housed very close to where they are milked, they move on their own through the process without human guidance, and sophisticated robots perform the actual milking.

Cows eat silage placed in reach of their pens and drink water until fully sated. The cows then walk around the end of the rectangle through one-way gates to resting areas where they bed down in sand until their udders are filled with milk. At that point, they feel the need to be milked and make their way one by one to a holding or "perching" area where they await their turn to enter a gated milking chamber known as the "box."

After a cow enters the "box," the robotic milking begins.

'The cow can milk herself'

Once secure in the box, a robotic arm affixed with a $150,000 high-definition camera swings beneath the cow and its udder full of milk. The camera locates the cow's four teats, and the robot arm uses a device to wash and dry the teats one by one.

Now that the cow is ready for milking, the robot arm swings back to the milking machine, grabs a suction cup and, with the help of the camera, attaches it to a teat. Once all four cups are attached, milk begins to flow through flexible tubes that carry it to a nearby tank. To prevent any interruptions in the flow of milk, the robotic arm sweeps up the four tubes and holds them clear of the cow's feet during milking.

Lake Norden dairy farmer Rodney Elliott displays some of the systems that collect milk during the robotic milking process that was part of a $12 million investment that has improved efficiency and productivity at his farm.

All the while, a sophisticated computer that has identified the cow by number records how much milk is being collected from each teat. The computer knows the age of the cow, how long she has been milking, whether she has been bred and a host of historical information about when she has been milked and how much milk she produced. It records the temperature and other characteristics of the milk. When the cow runs dry, the robotic arm removes the cups and returns them to the milking machine, where they are washed clean. The robotic arm swings beneath the cow once again and uses the camera to locate each bare teat, which is then given a quick burst of blue disinfectant.

Just then, a gate in front of the cow opens and she walks forward, making room for another cow that soon enters. During this transition, the robotic arm moves the camera to a sponge and gives the screen a splash of water, a rub on the sponge and and a blast of air to clean and dry it.

After a milked cow has left, a gate closes behind it. A gate at the entry to the box swings open to allow in another cow, and the milking process repeats.

During the six-minute milking process, neither Elliott nor any other farm worker has touched the cow or the milking machine. No one had to position the cow, move her in or out of the machine, pull her back to a pen for food and water, attach any milking cups or shovel any manure. Wastes from the cows are scraped by an automatic mechanism that moves the wastes to a collection pipe that leads to a clay-lined earthen pit outside the barn.

After being milked, cows walk through a container of solution that cleans their hooves, and they can lean against a large vertical robotic brush that cleans their hides and scratches

"It's called a voluntary milking system and it basically means that the cow can milk herself," Elliott said. After milking, "she goes back to feed, back to her stall, back to water, then lounges around in a nice sand bed until she feels the need to be milked again."

Interest in automation rising

Dairy farming and milk collection have undergone a series of technological improvements and increased automation in recent years, said Marv Post, president of the South Dakota Dairy Producers Association.

In most modern dairy farms, for example, cows are backed into pens on a concrete platform that has a channel below it where workers handle the cows, cleaning their teats, attaching milking machines and monitoring the operation. The machines automatically collect the milk and carry it to holding tanks before it is loaded onto trucks. Most data collection on cows and milking is done through computers.

Post said he first learned about robotic milking 15 or 20 years ago at a dairy expo in Wisconsin, and was skeptical the process could catch on in South Dakota. He has been pleasantly surprised, he said, by its implementation and effectiveness so far in improving productivity and creating a better living environment for the animals.

"These barns are amazing," Post said. "I'm still amazed at how these cows will walk up, get milked, and the next one is ready to come in."

Post said he and other dairy industry leaders are trying to find funding to support educational programs at South Dakota State University that will train the next generation of farmers in robotics and further automation of dairies.

"We want to support research and get students trained in how the dairy industry is today, but also on what is coming in the next 10 years or more."

The dairy industry in South Dakota is in a mode of rapid expansion as existing dairies expand and new dairies have arisen to meet a growing need for milk by the burgeoning cheesemaking industry in the state.

Tom Peterson, director of the state dairy association, said the shift to robotic dairy farming is likely to be slow across the industry in South Dakota, mostly because of the large investment needed.

"It really has to fit their mode of farming and it's a significant invest-

SD State plans 'more normal' semester

BROOKINGS - After a year of planning and adapting to the COVID-19 pandemic, South Dakota State University's JacksRBack Task Force is beginning initial efforts focused on a return to more normal operations during the 2021 fall semester. T h e

Barry Dunn

JacksRBack Task Force was launched last April at the direction of SDSU President Barry Dunn to develop and execute efforts that would allow students on-campus instruction during the current academic year.

"The efforts of our students, faculty and staff these past 12 months has shown how resilient and adaptable we are at SDSU and how we can overcome the challenges created by COVID-19 with everyone's safety as a top priority," Dunn said. "While we still need to remain vigilant and committed to many of our protocols for the next few months, with the vaccines available and so far a high level of acceptance, it allows us to look toward a fall semester in which we will plan for more normalcy."

The JacksRBack Task Force will begin determining operations for the fall semester in several different areas, including academics, residential life, student life and move-in weekend to welcome the incoming class of Jackrabbits.

"Based on our projected enrollment for next fall, we anticipate a vibrant campus experience for all of our students," Dunn said. "The strong interest we are seeing from high school seniors who want to attend SDSU, combined with the record retention of our current students, certainly makes us a university of choice for those wanting to seek the benefits of a four-year degree. We will be ready and excited to welcome them to campus in a more normal environment."

Dunn also noted the task force will explore new opportunities created during the pandemic that will allow the university to be even more efficient in its operations.

"The pandemic has shown how efficient our university is in its operations and how we can adjust to any challenge we face," Dunn said. "We have a team of people at SDSU that ment, so it all has to pencil out for that to be the route," Peterson said.

Yet Peterson added that more farmers may start to consider adding robotics once they realize the production, efficiency and data-collection benefits. "With the amount of data mining available through robotic milking, it enhances milk quality, it enhances animal care and has just so much capability to identify any issues far in advance."

Robotics part of growth pattern at Drumgoon

Elliott is a native of Northern Ireland who moved to South Dakota to farm in 2006; his farm is named for the rural region of Northern Ireland where he grew up on a small farm and owned 140 cows before moving stateside.

Elliott runs the dairy operation and several associated businesses with his wife, Dorothy, and his two sons (he also has an adult daughter). Elliott served as the general contractor on construction of the new barn and installation of robotics. He said some fine-tuning of the operating robotics and new barn are underway even as more robotic milking stations are being built.

The financial goals of the robotics are to reduce employee costs and improve milk production of each cow and his herd as a whole, which have in fact occurred since the robotics launched in January 2021. Elliott also sees robotics as a way to improve living conditions for his cows, which live in greater comfort, move about on their own and are handled less amid automation.

Cows in the robotic system have already shown an increase in milk production, he said. His goal was to increase per-cow daily milk production to 75 pounds per cow, and already he has seen 82 to 83 pounds per day from robotic milking. His robotic operation will eventually include about 1,400 cows, still a fraction of his overall operation that has about 6,000

Elliott is that robotic milking will build a bridge to a brighter future in which his children and other young farmers in South Dakota can enter the dairy industry without the nearly 24/7/365 work and worry that Elliott and other dairy farmers have undergone for gener-

"I feel strongly that the future is going to be trying to find young people who want a better lifestyle than this industry has afforded them so far," Elliott said, "so they don't have to do the physical, overnight work because this facility never shuts down."

Elliott's cell phone, its ringer sounding like a train whistle, is a constant companion that keeps him on his toes. The phone holds an application tied into the robotic system that alerts him immediately if any issues arise.

On a recent day, he awoke at 3 a.m. to help solve a problem in a dairy barn, then returned to bed before waking at 5:30 a.m. to start his actual workday. He sometimes stays engaged in dairying and running his other businesses until well after dark.

Elliott has a quick wit, an unassuming appearance and a self-deprecating sense of humor that belie his farming and business acumen. He's known to baby talk his cows to encourage compliance, and in a light moment he jests that, "I once heard a dairy farmer in Ireland say the dairy industry is for the industrious in the world and not the intelligent, so I thought it was a perfect industry for

In fact, the entry into robotics is only the latest of Elliott's many ventures that have resulted in a truly vertical integration of his businesses, which he said has resulted in $20 million in gross annual revenues and a bank valuation of his overall operation at $40 million.

He grows feed for his cows on 1,200 acres of farmland, has part ownership of a large cow-breeding operation in Kansas that supplies him with milking stock, and recently sold a million pounds of gravel off

The long-range wish for land he bought that was not suitable for crop farming.

He took a step in a new direction last year with the purchase of the Alsville Crossing truck stop, convenience store and restaurant that sits on a busy intersection of U.S. 81 a couple of miles south of his farm. Elliott put his son and daughterin-law in charge of the modern facility that just happens to be a few miles from Lake Norden, where the Agropur cheese plant tripled capacity in 2019 and is now supporting hundreds of truck trips daily.

Elliott is committed to running a high-quality operation with a strong focus on proper treatment of animals and people, including his roughly 50 employees.

He pays for travel and housing for many of his immigrant laborers who are given training in dairying and farming techniques. He promotes employees from within and has helped several start their own operations. Two years ago, he ended the use of all antibiotics in his

He also takes great care in the cleanliness of his farm and how wastes are handled. Elliott said he considers his South Dakota Concentrated Animal Feeding Permit and water-use permit to be a privilege, not a right, that entrusts him with protecting the environment as much as possible. Upon reflection, Elliott said he sometimes worries that his expansions have brought him to "the point where the dairy farm is running you instead of you running the dairy farm." He hopes to buy a boat this summer to cruise nearby Lake

Poinsett and will try to play more golf and make more visits to see his children and growing gaggle of grandchildren. 'I'm a crazy person; that's the best way to describe it,"

Elliott said. "I enjoy the people part of the operation and the strategizing, but what you could say is that 'this guy just really loves cows.""

The "Marching Band of Band Directors" will be led by a custom-designed animated float, uniquely heralding their unprecedented entry in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Rose Parade.

Stary, a trombonist in his own right, said that, "I have a lot of work ahead of me to get in shape as a musician and to physically prepare to play and march the 7-mile parade

Capping his career as a music educator, Stary said that being selected to participate in the entry echoes his personal commitment to the thousands of students who have been in his bands the past 31 years.

"I am so honored and excited to join hundreds of others who reflect the entry's motto, 'We teach music. We teach life," Stary said.

Stary said the organizers have stayed in very close contact with him to ask if he would participate and to help others from South Dakota to

"This says a lot about the organization the way they keep in good communication with everyone and didn't lose focus on the vision when the pandemic hit a year ago," he said. Stary's goal is to have up to four or five band directors from South Dakota represent the state.

"It was kind of a quick turnaround, but I thought, 'This is a band director's dream, to march the Tournament of Roses Parade. This is a once-ina-lifetime opportunity and to be there with other colleagues from across the country promoting the profession for the next generation, it will truly be among my most memorable moments in music," Stary said.

Stary said the band will perform original music that is being composed and arranged for the event and is expected to be sent out to participants in the next few months.

"Just in time for me to start getting physically and musically ready for the most beautiful 7-mile march in a band director's career. I look forward to representing not just the school, but the town in an international event," he said, especially with other directors from around the U.S., Mexico and Canada.

While the opportunity comes with great honor, it also has expenses tied to it. The organization has a "Send your band director to march in the 2022 Rose Parade!" page. Friends, family and community members are invited and encouraged to help Stary represent Brookings and the many students who have participated in the Brookings Bobcat Bands. SDSU Extension to host online obituary writing workshop

BROOKINGS – "In this world, nothing is certain, except death and taxes." That famous line attributed to Founding Father Benjamin Franklin still rings true today. However, as most Americans prepare each year for spring tax season, few will sit down to put their affairs in order before death, and more specifically, to write their own obituary, says Leacey Brown, SDSU Extension gerontology fieldspecialist.

"It's a valuable process to write a basic obituary that you can add to over time," Brown says.

On April 10 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. CST, SDSU Extension will host an online workshop dedicated to obituary writing. Free and open to the public, "Heirlooms: Creative Life Writing," will help attendees examine significant life memories and events and then organize them into obituary form.

The class will be led by Molly Barari, who holds a Master of Fine Arts degree in creative writing from Wilkes University and is currently pursuing a doctorate in Adult Education at the University of South

She will provide writing prompts to help participants identify the important details of their lives.

Barari says crafting a written document ensures that it's available for family and loved ones when needed, and most importantly, writing your own obituary gives you the opportunity to preserve your life story in your own words.

"Obituaries should have personalities, just like the people they represent," says Barari. "This workshop helps you write down important life events in your own voice. It's never too soon to start preserving your legacy."

For the workshop, participants should have access to a notebook and pen or a Word program on their computer. All ages of adults are welcome to attend.

This program was made possible by the South Dakota Humanities Council, an affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities. Space is limited, so participants are encouraged to register soon.

Registration can be found on the Events

By actually governing, Biden is the un-Trump

■ The pres-So it turns out ident has reached across the aisle, but the GOP has not reached back.

that the whole time Sleepy Joe Biden was hiding in the basement, he was working on a plan to render congressional Republicans irrelevant. Which, for the foreseeable future, they certainly are.

If you don't remember - and why should you? - the GOP literally had no party platform in 2020. It was Trump, Trump. A cult of personality. What they didn't count on was a strong majority of Americans being all Trumped-out. And so now, they've got nothing to talk about.

Except, oh yes, the budget deficit. A deficit that increased by 36%, leading many to doubt that it was ever such a terrible threat to begin with. Washington Republicans who stood quiet as deficits soared over the past four years are donning green eyeshades and calling themselves "fiscal conservatives" again.

And the public response is, "Yeah,

Meanwhile, although President

Biden's crucial $1.9 trillion COVID relief package squeaked through Congress without a single Republican vote, it was unanimously endorsed by the GOP-majority National Governors Association. Unanimously, as in every single one. And don't look now, but the governors are also pushing hard for massive infrastructure investment, the next big item on Biden's agenda.

Something Trump yammered about for four years, but did nothing about. Exactly like his long-promised health care plan.

Hint: Neither plan ever existed.

Biden understood that congressional Republicans were stuck in Trump/ McConnell mode and had no intention of seriously negotiating on the COVID relief bill, so he went big. Polls showed that upwards of 77% of Americans supported the bill, but not one GOP senator or congress member.

People, it's hard to get 77% approval of March Madness or pepperoni pizza. And they all voted against it? Exactly what do they want to talk about, then? Oh yeah: Dr. Seuss and Mr. Potato

Neither of which Joe Biden has said a single word about, but I digress.

The Washington Post's Eugene Robinson got it exactly right: "If Biden can't get Republicans to vote for a bill that three-quarters of the public supports, he probably can't get them to vote for anything. He should keep reaching across the aisle, but shouldn't expect anyone to reach back."

True, 10 Republican senators offered a laughable compromise bill less than one-third the size of the administration's. Biden made nice with them, but when Lucy put down the football, he made no attempt to kick it.

As a result, by this time next year, God willing, the COVID pandemic could be a sad memory - thanks to Biden's use of FEMA and the National Guard to supercharge the vaccine rollout. And when people are going to ballgames and concerts, when the economy's growing and life feels normal again, any GOP plans to sandbag Democrats in midterm elections may not work out.

This bill will transform American

Then there's all the stuff President Biden's NOT doing. He won't help Trump acolytes stir the pot. He won't rise to the bait. He's not so much the anti-Trump as the un-Trump. If Biden has even mentioned his predecessor's name since moving into the White House, I can't recall it. Instead of being the embattled emcee of a reality TV program, he governs.

When there's a weather-related disaster in Texas, the president of the United States shows up. He doesn't pick fights with the governor or throw paper towels, he commiserates and offers practical assistance. When 97-year-old Sen. Bob Dole, the 1996 GOP presidential candidate - a World War II hero and the living embodiment of America's "Greatest Generation" - announced that he'd been diagnosed with Stage 4 lung cancer, Biden went to visit his old friend at his home. Common decency.

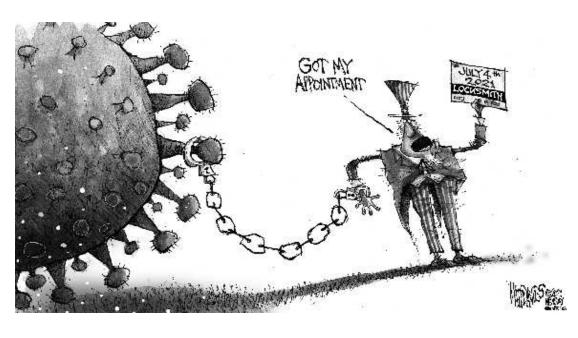

Trump did and said nothing, possibly because while Dole supported his 2020 reelection campaign, in mid-December he told The Kansas City Star, "The election is over and (Joe) Biden will be president on Jan. 20. I know the president has not conceded and he may never concede, but he will not be in the White House on Jan. 21."

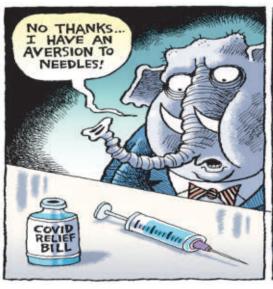

Meanwhile, if the former inhabitant expects the Biden White House to enlist in his constant public feuds, he'll be disappointed. This president appears to understand that the more conflict he engenders, the more fiercely people will oppose him. So he's dialed it down, emphasizing empathy and competence over repartee. Probably this behavior comes naturally to a 78-year-old back-patter and schmoozer.

So far it's definitely working. People don't wake up either titillated or dreading what their president has done overnight. And while a strong majority of Republicans think Biden somehow cheated his way into the White House, they no longer seem to feel very strongly about it. Along with strong support for his COVID relief bill, some 70% approve of how he's handling the pan-

But then, Biden never promised to unify Washington, he promised to unify the country.

legislative report

Historic session comes to an end

The main run of the 2021 legislative session is over. With the influx of an unheard-of amount of federal money, I am grateful for the opportunity to tackle some really big ideas that should help South Dakotans for many years.

We passed a $5.1 billion budget for the next fiscal year, capping a historic session that saw increases in funding for education, buying down debt, bolstering public safety and major onetime funding for infrastructure projects across the state.

Priorities included $50 million toward a 3:1 private-public match ($200 million total) to establish a needs-based college scholarship program, and $100 million to expand high-speed broadband to underserved areas of the state, connecting more than 130,000 South Dakotans who currently don't have access to high-speed Internet.

Money also went to establish the Bioprocessing Innovation Institute at the Research Park in Brookings, a new livestock complex at the state fairgrounds in Huron, a dairy research center at SDSU, and a National Guard readiness center in Sioux Falls.

Funding was also allocated to fix state-owned dams, improve statewide public safety radio coverage, upgrade the rail-line from Ft. Pierre to Rapid City. and repair bridges and culverts on township and county secondary roads.

The budget also included increases in ongoing spending, including 2.4 percent on average for teachers, Medicaid providers and state employees. The additional money will increase the average statewide teacher salary to $52,629 a year.

There were also bigger increases for nursing homes and mental health. Community service providers who care for the disabled saw the biggest increases, averaging about 14.8 percent. The average hourly salary for people who care for those with developmental disabilities will increase from around $13/ hour to around $16/hour. We also put money into reserves and paid down debt to further strengthen our state's financial base.

Like any legislative session, this session also had its controversy.

Medical marijuana had extensive hearings, but in the end finished exactly where it started. A bill introduced by the governor to address the many deficiencies in IM26 - the measure passed by the voters, had 15 amendments – a huge number – but all ultimately failed, including the final amendment by the Senate to add a provision to legalize recreational marijuana. I spoke against this amendment on the House Floor. Ultimately the governor's bill came to a final vote to kill the recreational amendment and leave IM26 in its original form as passed by the voters. I voted in favor, as did most of the legislature. It passed 67-3 in the House

Fred Deutsch is a and 31-4 in the Senate. It is now in the hands of the Department of Health to Republican repimplement, per the original IM26. resentative from The Fairness in Girls Sports bill also hotly debated but passed by large numbers. It awaits the governor's signature. The bill allows only girls to play on girls' teams. Twenty-eight states have introduced similar legislation.

Pro-life bills were also a part of the debate. My bill to treat babies bornalive after a botched abortion the same way a wanted baby would be treated was one of a half-dozen pro-life bills passed in South Dakota this year. Others included the governor's bill to ban abortions because of a Down syndrome diagnosis, Sen. Schoenbeck's bill to void contracts that require a woman have an abortion, such as commonly seen in commercial surrogacy contracts, and Sen. Castleberry's bill to require perinatal hospice information be provided parents when a lethal fetal condition is diagnosed.

Finally, my health bill to give doctors the freedom to practice in a community without non-compete contractual restrictions passed both chambers and is now on the governor's desk. The bill was a David versus Goliath battle from the beginning and the health systems continue to exert pressure for the governor to veto it. Its final disposition should be known shortly.

That's it for now. I remain deeply humbled for the opportunity to serve you. Please feel free to contact me at any time at fred.deutsch@sdlegislature. gov. Otherwise, assuming COVID continues to go away and life becomes more normal, I hope to see you this summer at a parade, coffee, or other

Have a great week.

Raising awareness about brain injuries

March is National Brain Injury Awareness Month. Brookings Área Brain Injury Support Group and Brain Injury Alliance of South Dakota (BIASD) would like you to be aware of the common occurrence of brain injuries and the need for national, state, and local action. Every 23 seconds a person sustains an injury to the brain in the US. The effects of brain injuries can include impaired thinking, memory, movement, vision, hearing, personality changes, and depression. Falls are the leading cause of Traumatic Brain Injuries (TBI). Males are almost two times as likely as women to sustain a TBI. Also, ninety percent of concussions (a brain injury) are not associated with a loss of conscious-

South Dakota is one of only two states that does not have either a TBI Grant or a Brain Injury waiver. it was cut. We also do not have a reporting system to identify the current number of individuals affected by brain injuries in our state. Many individuals and families suffer in silence. We need to provide hope and encouragement to the brain injury community.

We had this waiver until 2011 when

Major advancements are being made in brain science. Our understanding of the brain has the potential to alleviate needless suffering. For this to occur we need to provide support for people with brain injuries in South Dakota so that they may achieve their full potential as valued community members.

Three die when car hits nine people

SAN DIEGO (AP) – A driver plowed through a crowd on a sidewalk under an overpass with homeless tents on a rainy Monday morning in downtown San Diego, killing three people and injuring six others, including two who are hospitalized in critical condition, police said.

The driver – whom authorities identified only as a 71-year-old man – appeared to lose control of his Volvo station wagon shortly after 9 a.m. near a community college, said San Diego Police Chief David Nisleit. He was arrested on suspicion of driving while

'For whatever reason, (the driver) veered to the right, went up on the sidewalk, struck multiple pedestrians there and then came back on to the roadway," Nisleit said

Three people died at the scene. Five of the six others who were injured were taken to hospitals, authorities said.

Nisleit offered "my deepest condolences," to the families of

The sidewalk had tents on it. Nisleit said homeless people may have moved under the bridge to get out of the rain just before the car plowed through there.

"I don't know if people were sleeping or people were sitting there," he said, adding that authorities scrambling to get people medical help would then turn to finding the answers to those

The driver got out of his car and tried to help people before identifying himself to police, Nisleit said.

Two charged in assault of Capitol officer who died after riot

WASHINGTON (AP) – U.S. officials have arrested and charged two men with assaulting U.S. Capitol Police officer Brian Sicknick with bear spray during the Jan. 6 riot, but they do not know yet whether it caused the officer's death.

George Tanios, 39, of Morgantown, West Virginia, and Julian Khater, 32, of Pennsylvania, were arrested Sunday. They were expected to appear in federal court Monday. The idea that Sicknick died after being sprayed by a chemical irritant has emerged in recent weeks as a new theory in the case.

The arrests are the closest federal prosecutors have come to identifying and charging anyone associated with the deaths that happened during and after the riot. Five people died, including a woman who was shot by a police officer inside the Capitol. But many rioters are facing charges of injuring police officers, who were attacked with bats, sprayed with irritants, punched and kicked, and rammed with metal gates meant to keep the insurrectionists from the Capitol.

Investigators initially believed that Sicknick was hit in the head with a fire extinguisher, based on statements collected early in the investigation, according to two people familiar with the case. But as they've collected more evidence, the theory of the case has evolved and investigators now believe Sicknick may have ingested a chemical substance – possibly bear spray – that may have contributed to his death, officials have said.

Khater is the man in a video obtained by the FBI that showed him spraying Sicknick and others with bear spray, according to court papers.

After pandemic grounding, air travel numbers soar

(AP)) – Across the United States, air travel is recovering more quickly from the depths of the pandemic, and it is showing up in longer airport security lines and busier traffic on airline websites.

The Transportation Security Administration screened more than 1.3 million people both Friday and Sunday, setting a new high since the coronavirus outbreak devastated travel a year ago. Airlines believe the numbers are heading up, with more people booking flights for spring and summer.

"Our last three weeks have been the best three weeks since the pandemic hit, and each week has been better than the one prior," American Airlines CEO Doug Parker said Monday.

Travelers and the airlines still have far to go before again hitting the heights they saw in 2019.

While the number of people passing through airport checkpoints on Sunday finally eclipsed the number on the same day last year – a first for the pandemic era – it was still down 45.5% from the same day in 2019.

Parker said American's bookings are now running just 20% below 2019 levels. A factor appears to be traveler confidence now that more people are getting vaccinated against COVID-19. About 70 million Americans, or 21%, have received at least one dose, and 37 million have completed their vaccination, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Delta Air Lines CEO Ed Bastian said Monday that bookings began picking up five or six weeks ago.

8,000 gallons of milk spilled in North Dakota semi crash

WING, N.D. (AP) - Authorities say a semi-trailer hauling milk crashed in central North Dakota over the weekend and spilled nearly 8,000 gallons of milk.

The North Dakota Highway Patrol says the truck went in the ditch about 4 miles south of Wing about 10 a.m. Sunday. The cab overturned and came to rest on its wheels while the trailer came to rest on its side.

The semi driver, Orlando Nieves, 38, of Granville, was taken to a Bismarck hospital with serious injuries, the patrol said. Nieves was working for White Rock Express, of Towner. Nearly all in the tanker spilled. No cleanup was required on the roadway."

Defense in ex-cop's trial fears impact of $27M settlement

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) An attorney for a former Minneapolis police officer charged in George Floyd's death asked the judge Monday to delay the trial, saying the announcement of a $27 million settlement for Floyd's family could make a fair trial impossible.

Defense attorney Eric Nelson also raised the possibility of renewing his previously unsuccessful motion to move Derek Chauvin's trial to anoth-

"I am gravely concerned with the news that broke on Friday," Nelson said, adding that the announcement "has incredible potential to taint the jury pool.'

Nelson also noted that Minnesota Attorney General Keith Ellison's son, Jeremiah, sits on the City Council that unanimously approved the settlement, and questioned the timing, though he said he was not making accusations. Keith Ellison heads the prosecution team and often has been present in the courtroom.

During a break in jury selection, Keith Ellison stopped at Nelson's table and said: "Is there anything else anyone would like to not accuse me of?" Nelson looked at Ellison but did not reply.

Mayor Jacob Frey deferred questions about the timing of the settlement to City Attorney Jim Rowader, who declined to comment. Representatives for both said they were following the judge's guidance to not comment on the criminal proceedings.

Prosecutor Steve Schleicher said the state had no control over Frey and the City Council, who announced Friday that Minneapolis had agreed to the settlement that Floyd family attorney Ben Crump called the largest pretrial settlement ever for a civil rights claim.

Absent a delay or change of venue, Nelson urged Hennepin County District Judge Peter Cahill to consider giving both sides extra strikes to remove potential jurors for possible bias, and to recall the seven jurors seated last week to ask if the settlement affected their view of

But Schleicher said those jurors already promised they could decide the case based only on evidence presented at trial and urged the court to "take a step back" and determine whether there's an actual prob-

"It's certainly not my preference, your honor," Schleicher replied, adding that it was unclear whether the settlement news would "cut" in favor of the prosecution or the defense.

The problem is, it cuts," Cahill said.

Cahill agreed to consider the request for a delay, but didn't think it would be appropriate to grant additional strikes to either side. He said he likely would recall the seven previously seated jurors for further questioning though he already instructed members of the jury pool to avoid all news coverage of the case.

Camelot wins Hy-Vee sweepstakes

BROOKINGS The Brookings Hy-Vee recently presented Camelot Intermediate School in Brookings with $1,000 from Hy-Vee's Fuel Your School sweepstakes. Camelot Intermediate was one of 55 schools across Hy-Vee's eightstate region to receive cash prizes as part of the company's pledge to support local educa-

Fuel Your School, held in January, allowed customers to support schools simply by purchasing certain specific brands of products. Selected winners earned individual prizes in addition to choosing a school to win a cash donation. In all, 55 schools receive a total of $75,000 and 55 customers receive up to $12,500 in prizes.

"As COVID-19 continues, our local schools are working tirelessly to evolve and innovate teaching methods and engage with students and their families," said Tom Daschel, store director at Brookings Hy-Vee. "This sweepstakes is an opportunity for our Fuel Saver + Perks customers to join us in making a difference in our local communities."

The $75,000 donation to local schools throughout its eightstate region is just one of the many ways Hy-Vee is providing relief to its local communities throughout the pandemic. Learn more at hy-vee.com.

NorthWestern Energy ready to address concerns

SIOUX FALLS – The extreme weather that gripped the Midwest the week of Feb.15 resulted in temperatures that were far below normal. Record energy demand throughout the Midwest during this time caused natural gas prices to spike.

NorthWestern Energy and other South Dakota energy companies worked with the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission to address the impact on South Dakotans' natural gas bills.

Beginning in March, the higher cost of natural gas purchased during the energy emergency will apply over the next 12 months to customer bills. Customers will see the increase reflected within the item on their bill labeled "Purchase Gas Commodity." NorthWestern Energy's rate to deliver natural gas to customers is unchanged.

The company encourages anyone concerned about their ability to pay a higher energy bill to contact NorthWestern Energy's customer service department. More information is available, including information about payment arrangements and links to payment assistance programs in South Dakota, at Support South Dakota (northwesternenergy.com), https://www.northwesternenergy.com/save-energy-money/ save-energy-and-money/support-south-dakota

Natural gas is a commodity purchased from a competitive market. NorthWestern Energy uses historical use data and forecasts to purchase natural gas when prices are low for use by our customers when prices and demand are higher.

In mid-February extreme temperatures throughout the entire Midwest caused historical demand for energy. Freezing temperatures were recorded from Texas to Canada. Much of the natural gas that serves the Midwest is produced in Texas, Wyoming, and North Dakota. The extreme temperatures caused production losses in these states. As a result of the loss of supply and unprecedented demand, natural gas prices were at record highs.

NorthWestern Energy used the previously procured natural gas and storage withdrawals, however, in order to meet the extraordinary demand, additional purchases for our customers were made at very high prices. NorthWestern Energy's gas procurement plan has performed well historically, limiting the market exposure of customers when prices are high.

THIS MORNING!

NO-GOOD HUSBAND

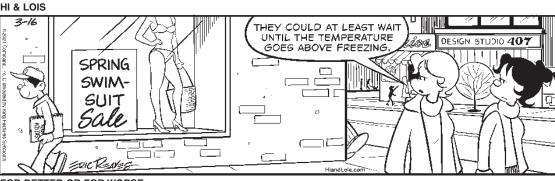

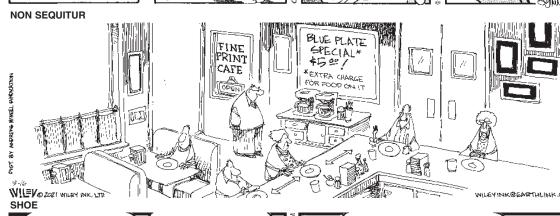

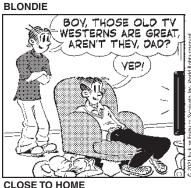

"Grandma didn't get anything to PLAY with."

Bridge

By PHILLIP ALDER

Wade Lnenicka of Smyrna, Georgia, sent in this senryu: Bridge is a tough game / Most who try it fail badly / Then why is it loved?

The robots at Bridge Base Online usually play reasonably truly inexplicable.

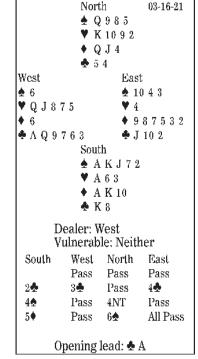

Look at today's deal. The final contract of six spades went down one after West led the club ace and continued with a second club. Which card won the setting trick? If you guess this correctly, you should go to Las Vegas as soon as it reopens; do not pass Go, do not collect $200.

In the auction, after South opened two clubs, West intervened with three clubs. (He did not have a way to show a heart-club twosuiter.) North passed, not having a five-card suit to bid or a club stopper for no-trump. But after East raised clubs, and South rebid four spades, North used Roman Key Card Blackwood. South showed four key cards (here, three aces and the spade king), and North signed off in six spades.

This contract should go down if West leads the club ace or either singleton six!

At this table, South took the second trick with the club king, drew trumps ending in hand and led the heart six. Now you would expect West to have split his honors, playing the jack or the queen. Then, sooner or later he would have taken the setting trick with his other heart honor.

We are lacking in imagination. West covered the heart six with his seven, and declarer played the two from the board! So the heart seven won the trick — down one!

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: I have been with the same man for almost 30 years. We are not married and have no children together. He is 15 years older than I am.

We have been living in his house for the past seven years. I feel more like a renter than a partner in this relationship. I give him money every month, and we sleep in separate rooms. He wants to control everything in his house, including how to clean, cook or what we eat. I bite my lip to avoid starting a confrontation.

He is a lifelong bachelor, while I have two adult children and a couple of grandkids. I'm not sure how much more of this I can take. I work all day; he doesn't. I want to leave, but at the same time, I care and worry about him. What should I do? — Disillusioned in Illinois

Dear Disillusioned: Quit biting your lip. Gather your courage and start an honest conversation with your housemate in which you tell him you have been unhappy with the status quo for a long time. Then outline the changes that would make you happy. If he isn't willing to compromise, then pack your bags and leave because you will know the feelings you have for DEAR ABBY ABIGAIL VAN BUREN WRITES A NATIONALLY SYNDICATED him are not mutual.

Dear Abby: I've been "friends" with a woman for 25 years. For a time, we were best friends and did everything together, but we couldn't be more different. It caused many fights and disagreements over the years. She has deeply hurt and embarrassed me countless times. She ruined birthdays, damaged other relationships — even ruined my bachelorette party. I don't know why I still bother with her. I think because of our deep roots, it's hard to let go.

At the moment, we haven't spoken in more than two months, and I know she's upset with me yet again. Should I reach out and mend the bond? Do I use this as a stepping stone to start moving on? I love her, but I know it really is a toxic relationship. — Off Again in New Jersey

Dear Off Again: Please reread the last sentence of your letter. Do not bother reaching out and trying to mend the breach in your relationship. You cannot fix what's wrong with this old friend, but you can move on. Her silence is giving you the opportunity. Take it!

Dear Abby: My son is getting married in a couple of weeks. Due to COVID-19, he and his fiancee are having to downsize the list of invitees. This includes asking those who have already RSVP'd "yes" and/or have already given them a wedding gift not to attend. Should they return the wedding gifts to those they are disinviting to the wedding? — Wondering in the South

Dear Wondering: Your son and his fiancee should at least OFFER to return the gifts. Considering the reason for the downsizing, some of the no-longer-invited guests may tell them to keep them along with their good wishes, while others

Motion sickness from virtual reality video games BY MEHMET OZ, M.D. AND MIKE ROIZEN, M.D.

Exergaming can be exergasmic distracting you from the discomforts of exercise and motivating you to repeat the workout day after day, because you're engaged in a virtual reality video game that thrills you. There are programs for strength-building and aerobics that get you into a jump-rope cycling. Entertaining. Highly motivating. And, oh yeah, potentially nauseating. VR sickness is a real phenomenon that can make you feel lousy after even a brief encounter with the fantasy world within your head-mounted VR device. It's a form of motion sickness that can trigger a headache, nausea, vomiting and disorientation.

A study in the Journal of Medical Internet Research reveals that exergames, like the wildly popular "Beat Saber," leave many people feeling slightly queasy and unsteady even 40 minutes after removing their VR device - and 14% of the study's participants who had exergamed for 50 minutes still felt extremely ill at that point. FYI: "Beat Saber" puts you in a fantastic neon environment where you slice up blocks in sync with musical rhythms using two sabers of contrasting colors.

There's not much you can do to dodge VR sickness until game designers create environments that aren't so disorienting. So allow yourself time to recover before going on about your day. Or, hey, here's an idea: Tune in to an exercise class on your computer or TV, or head outdoors for a 10,000step walk — no side effects except muscle tone, energy and a younger RealAge.

TAX TIPS

Common tools can save you time, money on taxes

By Liz Weston NerdWallet

Receipts, like memories, tend to fade with time. That's just one reason to digitize and track tax-related information. The right apps and habits can save space, time, money and hassle - but only if you use

"Apps should make things easier, not more complicated," says Clare Levison, a certified public accountant in Blacksburg, Virginia. "The definition of a good app is what works for you, not the one that's the trendiest."

Use tools you already

Apps don't have to be elaborate. The camera on your phone, for example, can capture receipts and other documentation. Levison recommends regularly transferring those images to a designated folder in your photo app to make them easier to find later.

"You don't want those photos mixed in with all your other selfies and whatever," Levison

Similarly, you can create folders in your email account to collect tax-related documents. If you're an active investor, for example, you can put your trade confirmations there (or set up a filter so the confirmations are routed there automatically). If you purchase supplies for your business online, a folder can collect emailed receipts.

Another commonplace tool that can be helpful, especially for anyone claiming business expenses or mileage, is a calendar app. These records can help document meetings with clients, business travel and other potentially deductible events.

"The IRS auditor always asks for a copy of my calendar," says Leonard Wright, a San Diego CPA who's been audited four times.

Calendar records should be kept for at least seven years, which is how long the IRS typically has to audit you. (There's no time limit if the agency suspects tax fraud, however, so be sure your choice of electronic calendar lets you retain enough history.)

You also need to regularly download monthly statements from your financial institutions, says Kelley C. Long, a CPA and personal finance specialist in Chicago.

If the IRS suspects you've underreported income, it may ask for bank and brokerage statements. If you use a credit card for business or other tax-related purposes, those statements can help support your deductions. While the institutions are required to keep your records for several years, you may have to pay fees to access older statements.

Be sure you're storing for the long term

Ideally, your computer and phone are already being backed up into the cloud so that you can access your data if the devices are lost, stolen or destroyed. If not, you want to make sure that at least your tax information is regularly transferred to a secure cloud storage system or other safe, off-site location.

The key is to keep information safe and accessible, which means choosing electronic over paper wherever possible. Paper is bulky, inefficient and vulnerable to all kinds of disasters, including fire and flood. Ink can fade, particularly on receipts needed to document expenses (credit card or bank statements typically aren't considered enough documentation without the accompanying receipts).

"I usually tell business owners, 'No receipt, then no deduction,'" says Bob Fay, a CPA in Canton, Ohio, who is also a consumer financial education advocate for the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. "This is a short message that sticks with them as they have so much on their plate every day."

But the time the IRS gets around to asking for those receipts, all you may have left is flimsy, unreadable paper if you haven't captured a digital version, Levison says.

Also, paper documents can cost you more.

"People still give their CPAs literally a shoebox," Long says. "What your CPA does then is pay one of their interns to scan all that stuff into their systems and they charge you for that."

Consider specialized apps to make it easy

Sometimes, specialized apps can make sense. Scanner apps can help you capture tax-related paperwork, and some have optical character recognition that allows you to turn images into editable - and searchable

If you have an iPhone or iPad and itemize your expenses, ItsDeductible and iDonatedIt can help you track charitable gifts throughout the year and find values for noncash donations, such as clothes and household goods. (These apps don't have Android versions.)

Apps that create expense reports, such as Expensify or Everlance, can help gig workers and other self-employed people track business-related

Wright, the much-audited CPA, swears by apps that help track mileage, such as MileIQ, IripLog or Everlance.

"Many of these apps are easy to maintain and allow you to track and distinguish between business or personal use," Wright says. "They're so simple you can do that while you're in line at the supermarket."

But it's crucial to develop the habit of using the apps and other processes you set up, says CPA Tim Todd of Lynchburg, Virginia. Otherwise, you're not creating the digital paper trail you'll need to survive an audit. Plus, you could be costing yourself money.

"Keeping records in real time can also help make sure you don't forget those items come tax time," Todd says.
