South Dakota sets new daily coronavirus record

By Stephen Groves Associated Press

SIOUX FALLS (AP) – South Dakota on Wednesday broke its record for COVID-19 hospitalizations and new cases, and the state has already had more deaths from the disease less than halfway through October than it had in any other month.

Despite the grim prognosis - South Dakota had the nation's highest rate of positive tests over the last 14 days, according to the COVID Tracking Project - Republican Gov. Kristi Noem has resisted pressure to step up the state's response to the disease, explaining Tuesday that the surge in case numbers was "expected" because the state was conducting more tests.

Secretary of Health Kim Malsam-Rysdon said she thinks the state is doing a good job conducting enough tests to detect outbreaks.

However, South Dakota's 14-day average positivity rate of nearly 24% is more than four times the national average of 5.1%, according to the COVID Tracking Project.

State Epidemiologist Josh Clayton said that the increase in testing led to more positive cases being identified. But he also acknowledged that infections are spreading in communities across the state.

"If you take all of that put together, we are seeing a fair bit of COVID-19 transmis-

Brookings County on Oct. 2 held a groundbreaking for the jail expansion project that is now underway. Current and former county commissioners, local law enforcement, along with staff and citizens attended the event, with comments from Commission Chairperson Michael Bartley, Sheriff Marty Stanwick and architect Bruce Schwartzman from BKV Group. ## Settlement agreement complete

By Jodelle Greiner The Brookings Register

BROOKINGS - With work now underway on project, City Attorney Steve Britzman gave the Brookings City Council an update on the settlement agreement for the Brookings County jail expansion during the council meeting Tuesday.

The council voted 5-2 in August

Supreme Court regarding the detention center remodel and expansion, after a circuit judge in March ruled the project could move forward.

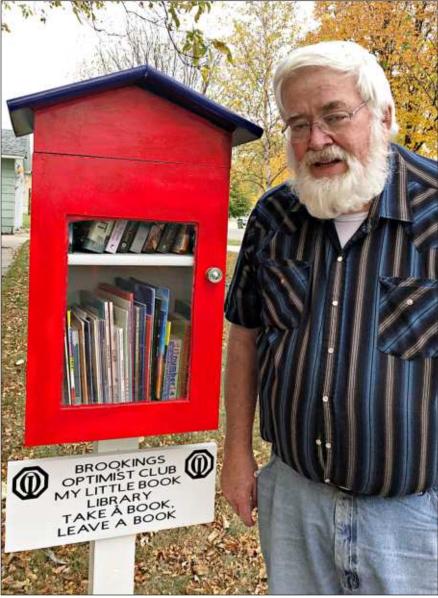

The city has completed all of the steps of its settlement agreement with the county, Britzman said.

"The primary objective of the settlement agreement was to establish some understandings with the county with to withdraw its appeal to the state respect to withdrawal of the appeal to the (state) Supreme Court. The appeal has been withdrawn," Britzman said.

Another point of consideration in the agreement is the issuance of the building permit, which was issued in mid-September, and the construction project is moving forward, Britzman

City's new little library

BROOKINGS - Optimist Club of Brookings President Bob Hurd's and Optimist member Janet Brubakken's love of reading moved them to create a new Little Free Library in the community.

They got some help from Optimist member Roger Jenner, and now the library is open for business at 1133 12th St. S. in Brookings.

The idea behind a Little Free Library is simple: Build a small structure and fill it with books. People come by and take the books they want and bring them back when they're done reading them, or if they want to keep those books, they replace them with others. That way there's a constant, changing supply of reading material.

Optimist International's mission is "Bringing the best out in youth, in ourselves and in our community." What better way to exceed the mission by providing books?

Member Chance Littau provided the first books for the Optimists' library with the help of the Hurd and Brubakken families. The shelves are full, and there has been activity at the new library. It is on a main walkway to and from Mickelson Middle, Camelot Intermediate and Medary Elementary schools in the Brookings School District.

"No age group should be shy about using it. It's self-serve. Reading opens doors, imaginations and opportunities to lifelong learning. The Optimist little library will be kept well-stocked," Hurd said.

SDSU now allowing open COVID-19 testing for students

BROOKINGS - South Dakota State University is now allowing open COVID-19 testing for its students. The testing, which is free for students, runs from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays.

The open testing started Oct. 14. Previously, students needed a referral by the SDSU Student Health Clinic and Counseling Services.

Students can get tested at the drive-thru/walk-thru testing site located near Frost Arena. Enter the parking lot at the southeast corner of Frost Arena.

Students should consider getting tested even if they currently have no symptoms of COVID-19 and no known contact with an individual who has tested positive for COVID-19. Results will be available within approximately 24-36 hours.

arrests in domestic assault cases

BROOKINGS - Two people have been arrested in recent alleged domestic assaults cases, and Brookings Police want to call attention to the fact that October is Domestic Abuse Awareness Month. 'We had two more domestic arrests here and I know that we had a couple last week, too," Lt. Marci Gebers said.

One was reported about 7:06 p.m. Saturday and occurred in the 500 block of 12th Street South, Gebers said.

Curtis Borstad, 26, of Sioux Falls, was arrested and charged with aggravated assault domestic and transported to the Brookings County Detention Center, she said.

"Officers spoke with the female victim who stated that she had been attempting to leave (in a vehicle) and Curtis stopped her from leaving," Gebers said.

"He punched her in the back and then grabbed her by her sweatshirt and strangled her multiple times with her sweatshirt," Gebers said.

"Then he bit her on her arm. She did have visible injuries

The state's hospitals are feeling the effects, reporting that they are caring for 303 COVID-19 patients. As hospitals see patient increases from COVID-19 and other medical issues, some have experienced backups. Roughly 34% of general care beds and 39% of intensive care units statewide remain available, according to the Department of Health.

The state reported 876 new COVID-19 cases and three new deaths in South Dakota Wednesday.

Twenty-six of the new cases are in Brookings County.

A total of 5,473 people (nine new) have tested negative in Brookings County as of Wednesday, and 21 people in the county (one new) have been hospitalized at some point, the state reported.

A total of 105 faculty, staff and students were quarantined and isolated as of Wednesday, with seven of those in campus facilities.

Bobcat Marching Band among region's best

BROOKINGS - The Bobcat mer drum major and alumni Marching Band has a rich history in a four-state region full of the area's best bands.

Since 1988, Festival of Bands USA has brought these bands together, including the Brookings Bobcats every year since its inception, to Howard Wood Stadium, where marching bands have fought for the finalist sweepstakes title, the top score of all bands no matter class or size.

This year's Bobcat Band took the top Sweepstakes Award Oct. 3, for the first time in 32 years.

According to Festival of Bands program records, the Bobcats earned finalist status off and on throughout the '80s and '90s, including the People's Choice Award in 1995 and the Spirit of the Festival Award in 2014.

The record book will show the Bobcat Band's grand finish in 2020 as part as a climb since 2011, when after a 12-year absence, they made finals in 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017 2018 and 2019.

Bobcats took first place in Class AA, best drumline, best hornline, best color guard and best drum majors.

Since 2018, the best drum major award has been dominated by the Brookings program due to the work of for-

Tyler Hartmann, along with Hunter Winghart, who developed a program that instilled passion and ownership in these young leaders.

"Anyone watching our rehearsals notices our drum majors and their leadership," Band Director Ron Stary said. "Senior Cherish Stern, along with juniors Ainsley Shelsta and Kyra Stoel, is one of the biggest reasons why this group reached its level of achievement."

"There's so much tradition and pride in this accomplishment. All alumni have all been a part of the climb, making Brookings a great 'band' town," Stary added.

"The heart and soul of the program through all those years was our assistant director and color guard adviser Penny Robinson. Anyone involved, from student to parents, knows this to be true and loved her."

Being named the top band in the region at Festival of Bands was especially gratifying because so much was taken away from students this spring due to the shutdown.

"The 2019 season was one of our strongest musical groups ever with a show we called 'El Barrio,'" Stary said. "So just imagining we could climb back from that makes it that much better."

"Assistant director Robert Escamilla has been critical in our success by bringing the energy we all needed to put together a great production for these students. He touched every part of the program this year, especially the color guard. We could not have done this without him and our marching band staff."

Stary says all the challenges add to the life lessons students learn in the course of the marching band season.

"All this success after so many challenges would make this season special to any coach or director," he said. "Back in June, there were those who doubted we could rise above COVID, and across the nation band programs seeing fewer participants due to the virtual challenges for a 'handson activity.' Add to that the transition of replacing an incredibly strong graduating class. The student leadership team showed amazing perseverance. All credit goes to them, and as one of the judges on Saturday told them, 'All that preparation and training showed up when it counted in October!"

Jail: City, county cooperating

Councilor Nick Wendell said he appreciated Britzman bringing the settlement agreement back to the council.

And just a number of days later, then the county commission had to come to the same conclusion that they had an agreement before them, that

'Fair Warning': This is a good read

By Jodelle Greiner The Brookings Register

Wow. Just WOW.

I've been a fan of Michael Connelly's for a long time, but I think he just ramped it up a few notches with his latest book, the very aptly named "Fair Warning."

Review

Reporter Jack McEvoy is back on the beat - he's working for FairWarning, a watchdog website that covers consumer fraud to alert the public to dangers. But Jack is, at heart, a murder reporter, and when he hears about a woman whose cause of death is unusual, to say the least, he jumps into the case wholeheartedly.

What he finds is this woman is just one who's been killed in the same way over a period of time; all the deaths cleverly disguised so not even the authorities are aware there could very well be a serial killer out there.

Jack's dealt with killers before, but even he's shocked when he discovers the women's deaths weren't random - the killer hunted them by their DNA.

Jack teams up with a fellow reporter at FairWarning and contacts Rachel Walling for her profiling skills, even though they haven't seen each other in years.

They need every advantage they can get to track a killer whose name and face - and next target – they don't know. A killer who is still on the hunt and could be onto them.

If you want to read a story with up-to-theminute implications and a plotline permeated with urgency and a race-against-time vibe that makes you turn pages, pick up "Fair Warning."

Connelly is best known for his Harry Bosch stories and Lincoln Lawyer stories, and to be honest, I've always liked the Bosch novels best, but Connelly has used current events to make Jack a front runner as a lead character.

This novel grabbed me on two fronts: DNA and journalism. The first one should scare the crap out of people; the second I hope will educate them.

Connelly took a topic that's all over the news, DNA, and brought out a side that most people would never think about: what happens when someone has your DNA - your very specific, personally identifying DNA that is supposed to be anonymous – and uses it for a purpose you had no idea was possible, let alone gave your What's even more terrifying is folks are voluntarily turning in their DNA and signing over their rights; it's not being stolen for these purposes. The implications are horrifying. This is something everyone should read before submitting their DNA for testing.

Telling this story from the point of view of a reporter gave Connelly the opportunity to explain the profession. Connelly is a former crime reporter and I've always admired the way he's used that knowledge to give nuanced details to reporters and news in his novels. A lot of novelists, you can tell they don't have the first clue of how a reporter does their job; Connelly lived it. His passion for the profession and how reporters serve the public comes through very clearly in the voice of Jack McEvoy.

There's a reason a free press is guaranteed in the Constitution, and Connelly - through Jack – makes the case for why reporters have to have a free rein to do their jobs with no outside influence or interference from anyone. Others might have an agenda, but a reporter's duty is to keep the public informed so they can protect

Although Connelly has been a best-selling novelist for years, he's still active in the journalism world, so his viewpoints on the profession are up-to-the-minute. FairWarning is not just a plot point in the book, it's a real news site for watchdog reporting on consumer issues and Connelly serves on the board of directors, according to the Author's Note. For more information, visit FairWarning.org online.

If you want to start at the beginning of Jack's journey, read "The Poet" (1996) and "The Scarecrow" (2009). Jack's popped up in a couple other Connelly books, too. You might as well start at the beginning of Connelly's books with "The Black Echo" (1992), which is the first Harry Bosch book.

Connelly's latest book "The Law of Innocence" is due out Nov. 10 and it's the latest in the Mickey Haller series which starts with "The Lincoln Lawyer" (2005). For more information, visit michaelconnelly.com or your local RAPID CITY (AP) – A man has died of smoke inhalation in a brush fire in Rapid City, authorities said.

The victim was discovered when police and firefighters responded to the fire Saturday night, police said Tuesday. The man has not been identified.

The fire broke out in a wooded area just southwest of a commercial building and near the north bank of Rapid Creek. Police say the area is occupied by many homeless people.

Several people were in the area when the fire spread. A witness told police the man didn't make it out of the fire.

Forensic testing is needed to identify the man due to his serious injuries, officials said.

Brookings County Museum reorganizes

BROOKINGS - Partly due to the pandemic, the governing board of the Brookings County Historical Society/Museum voted at its annual meeting earlier this month to try an experimental co-leadership concept.

Society members also elected two new board members, Lynette Nelson of Volga and Janet Gritzner of Brookings. Re-elected to the board were incumbents Larry Ust, Floyd Havrevold and Bob Buchheim, all of Volga, and Patty Kratochvil of Brookings.

Other officers re-elected were Darla Strande of Brookings, treasurer, and Buchheim, secretary.

Two long-time museum leaders, former president Harold Christianson and vice-president Jerry Leslie, both of Volga, are retiring from the board. They were given emeritus status.

For the first time since the society was organized in Brookings in 1939, its leadership will operate through the next 12 months under a co-presidency model.

This will reduce the growing work load for which the society's president is responsible, including the numerous public contacts necessary. With six buildings in the museum complex and assets in excess of $800,000, a co-presidency can better direct the maintenance and improvements necessary for the museum campus during this unusual period.

Elected co-presidents were incumbent Phil Wagner of Brookings and board member Shirley Deethhardt of Aurora. Among other leadership duties, Deethhardt will work with volunteers in the task of filling out and staging the newly refurbished 1894 James Hauxhurst house with period furnishings and accoutrements of the age.

James Hauxhurst was clerk for the Brookings County Commissioners during the selection of Brookings as the county seat that was then moved from now-defunct Medary to Brookings.

Some years later Hauxhurst built his home on Third Street, across the street south from what became the location of the Brookings Library.

The Hauxhurst home was also located where more than a century later the new County-City governmental services building was constructed on Third Street. Rather than raze the historic old home, a group of interested Brookings citizens about ten years ago provided funds to move it to the museum site in Volga's City Park.

Since then the museum has raised about $75,000 to refurbish it because it had been converted into apartments. Under the leadership of museum board members Floyd Havrevold and Larry Ust of Volga, the home's first floor has now been converted back to near its original footprint.

It is hoped the home can be ready for visitors for the 2021 summer season should the COVID19 pandemic abate by then.

OPINION

As Maine goes, so goes Electoral College reform – maybe

Maine has rejected the "winner take all" method for determining Electoral College votes.

– The Maine other night, the moon rose over the lake, creating a stream of light that illuminated the passage of two loons. The tiny library at the bend of the road is open only on Wednesdays and Thursdays. The nearby orchard is selling a McIntosh blend of apple cider, as cool and crisp as the mornings here. There's hardly a soul along Echo Lake Road.

Here in these pine groves and birches – in this most peculiar political battleground, with combat across the second-most-rural congressional district in the country, 14 times the size of former Vice President Joe Biden's home state of Delaware – some of the most unusual civic combat in the country is being

It's all over a single electoral vote in the November election.

But it is more than that. It is also a testing ground for any overhaul of the Electoral College that might be contemplated after the 2020 election.

At least that is how this situation – the awarding of single electoral votes to the winner of each of Maine's two congressional districts, along with two to the winner of the state's popular votes – started out: as a reform movement that this state, with its independent streak

(and its history of governors and, now, a senator, who declared themselves Independents) undertook as a first step 48 years ago.

But with the possibility of a close presidential election and with new pressures on the Electoral College, the rest of the country suddenly is paying attention to a broad swath of remote America resting on the Canadian border – 27,236 square miles of mostly forest and scattered settlements, with vast stretches of land owned by the government and paper companies, with roads that will be officially closed in a few weeks because of heavy snowfalls, and with wild rivers that once carried the trees felled by angular men from the logger camps that remain a vivid remnant of Maine folklore.

Four years ago, Trump lost Maine to former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, who took three of the state's electoral votes. But Trump won the second congressional district and harvested its single electoral vote. His team is working hard this fall to repeat the trick, but polls show Biden, who will win statewide, could sweep this district

Not that it will be easy. Drive along these remote parts, and you'll see rural byways clogged with signs and flags for Trump. The other day I took a long walk along a dirt road and saw a Trump sign two houses after the electrical lines ended; the chances of a traveler seeing that message is about as great as the chances a lobster has for a long, fulfilling life after the water in the pot has boiled for three minutes.

"I took a drive through rural Maine, and I never saw so many lawn signs in all my life," said Harold Pachios, a lawyer active in the state's politics since the days of its legendary Democratic governor, senator and secretary of state, Edmund S. Muskie. "I never saw anything like this even for Muskie. It's a movement, a cult."

And yet the congressional district that gave Trump a 10-point victory in 2016 defeated a Republican incumbent House member, Rep. Bruce Poliquin, two years later by the slender margin of 3,509 votes. Now the new incumbent, Democratic Rep. Jared Golden, a Marine veteran of Iraq and Afghanistan, is poised to win a second term in the district covering four-fifths of the entire state.

"There's a lot of split tickets here," Golden, 38, said in an interview. "We take our own path in thought and personal lifestyle here. Voters here aren't committed to individuals or parties but look at every election separately."

Even so, the latest New York Times/ Siena College poll shows Biden has a slender lead in the district, which once had a workforce heavily tilted toward labor unions in the long-ago days when nonfarm employment was concentrated in the textile, shoe and paper industries, which were in steep decline beginning in the late 1960s. "This is a case where the congressman may be pulling Biden's number up a bit," said Amy Fried, a University of Maine political scientist.

It was shortly after the eclipse of those industries - all of them beneficiaries of Maine's raging rivers – that the first modern qualms about the Electoral College emerged, prompted in part by the distress of Muskie, the 1968 Democratic vice-presidential nominee, over the decision by Lloyd Bailey, a Richard Nixon elector, to vote instead for former Gov. George C. Wallace of

But the determination to take on the Electoral College's power was a bipartisan movement.

"This was a rarity: purity in politics," said Severin Beliveau, who was state Democratic chair at the time. "There was mass popular support. It wasn't a partisan issue, and it didn't seem to help any particular politician."

But there also was the hope that the movement would affirm a political maxim that had been popular since 1820: As Maine goes, so goes the nation.

"The idea was that if we did this, others would follow," said John Martin of Eagle Lake (population 805, half of whom speak French), who was House speaker at the time and now is the longest serving lawmaker in Maine history. "We wanted to do something the public wanted rather than what the parties wanted."

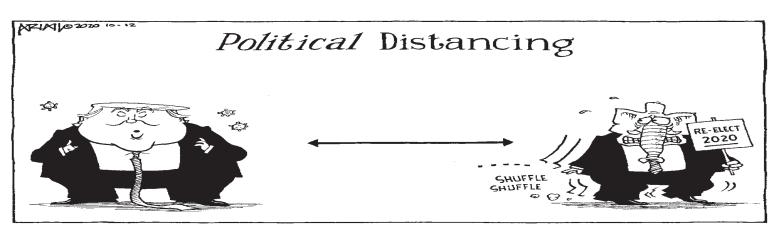

The legislation went into effect after Democratic Gov. Kenneth Curtis, who preferred total elimination of the Electoral College, allowed it to become law without his signature. He permitted its enactment because the Maine statute "may well aid our national decision."

Though many states used the district system until 1836 - they abandoned it because they believed they held greater power in a winner-take-all arrangement - only Nebraska has followed Maine in modern times, doing so in 1991.

Nebraska's action was not part of the reform impulse that once was personified by its legendary senator, George W. Norris, a onetime advocate for overhauling the Electoral College, who died in 1944. The state instead was motivated by what James P. Melcher, the University of Maine (Farmington) scholar who is the leading authority on congressional-district electoral votes, characterized as "a desire for more attention from presidential candidates."

As Maine goes, so goes Nebraska. And maybe, someday, 48 other states.

Families helping families

Every year, as a member of the Congressional Coalition on Adoption, I have the privilege of nominating a person or a family for the Angels in Adoption Award. It recognizes the outstanding contributions of the men and women - moms and dads – across the country who have chosen to adopt or foster children who are in need.

In normal times, the award winners and their families would travel to Washington to accept this recognition, and I typically have the opportunity to meet with them to hear their stories in person. I am always inspired by their journey and selflessness, often having to make big sacrifices in order to give adopted or fostered children a better future.

Although this year's event will look a bit different as we continue to adapt to life during the coronavirus pandemic, I was nonetheless honored to nominate the Prins family, of Sioux Falls, for this year's award. I'm looking forward to meeting with them so I can to pass along my congratulations and present their award.

Like most adoption and foster stories, the Prins family story is unique. Although they have no adopted children, Tami and Jason's journey is just as important to the children they've helped throughout the years. This now-family-of-eight answered God's call and has been a foster family for multiple children through Bethany Christian Services in Sioux Falls.

Tami and Jason are also involved with Safe Families for Children, a program that helps support parents who are experiencing a difficult time, such as homelessness or incarceration, and can even help prevent children from entering the foster care program altogether. Through Safe Families for Children, the Prinses have obtained legal guardianship of a young child in need, Cam'raya, and they have worked to maintain a relationship with her birth mother, whom they now consider family, throughout their host family experience. "I love how the mission of Safe Families is connected to the greatest commandment, 'Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind," Tami Prins said. "'This is the first and greatest commandment. And the second is like it: Love your neighbor as yourself.' Matthew 22:37-39. Our family has been forever changed by this sweet little girl and her mom. Thank you to Safe

Families for bringing us on this adventure, opening our eyes wide to the need and the hurt in our own community. Thanks to our church, friends, family, and grandparents who came along side us and supported us. To God be the Glory! God has great things in store for [Cam'raya], and we are excited to get a front seat to watching His plan unfold in her life."

It's an understatement to say that the Prins family's dedication to serve and provide care has had a positive and life-changing effect, both on Cam'raya and the rest of their family. The Prinses remain involved with Safe Families for Children today, making every-day sacrifices to ensure children in transition, like Cam'raya, have a place to call home.

While 2020 has been an especially hard year, families like this one have made lives better during these tough times. I congratulate them on receiving this year's well-deserved Angels in Adoption Award, and I appreciate everything that they, and everyone else throughout our state, do to give children a more promising tomorrow.

Recalling a trip to Chicken, Alaska

A little speck on the map has an interesting history.

Chickens have forever had a place in our hearts and on our tables. Why is that? Well ... why not? And so I'd like vou to come with me back to the summer of 1970, 'way up north of Fairbanks, Alaska, to what was once the thriving gold mining village of Chicken, Alaska. I was on my way, hitchhiking with a 17-foot canoe, to paddle down a stretch of the Yukon River and to see the cabin where Jack London spent the winter once upon a time. Just as an aside here, hitchhiking with a canoe, or with a sled and 11 dogs, would make a lengthy how-to book all by themselves. It doesn't sound easy, does it? It isn't.

So what I would do on these "adventures" of mine, (my boss, Larry Fanning, referred to them as Slim's tin-cup trips because of all the scrounging I had to do) is go to neat places and interview great people, and write stuff.

My column in the Anchorage Daily News was called ... brace yourself ... "Slim's Column."

Truth in advertising.

So I arrived in Chicken, Alaska, only to find I'd nearly doubled the local population. In the far-distant past, Chicken was a ghost town. When the gold gave out, so did Chicken. So what was left was "the business" consisting of a gas pump, a coffee pot, some postage stamps and a couple of nice folks. But there was something else, too.

There was not only an outhouse there, but it was electrically lighted. So where should I write my column? In an electrically lighted outhouse in Chicken, Alaska.

The raising of poultry this far north is uncommon; too many local varmints, including any resident sled dogs, eat them. So how did this gold camp get its name? Ahh ... the very reason for that column typed on the wooden "desk" beneath that 20-watt bulb.

Chicken, Alaska, got its name because none of the miners there knew how to spell ptarmigan.

Across the Nation

Fire crews deploy to Northern California

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Fire crews from across the state were being deployed to Northern California, where hot, windy conditions Wednesday renewed fire threats in the region where massive blazes already have destroyed hundreds of homes and killed or injured dozens of people this year.

Most of the huge fires that erupted over the past eight weeks are now fully or significantly contained and skies once stained orange by heavy smoke are blue again. Containment means that firefighters have lines holding in a fire, though it doesn't mean a fire has stopped

But the gains made by thousands of firefighters assigned to the blazes that have scorched more than 4.1 million acres this year could be hampered if new fires ignite, said Daniel Berlant, assistant deputy director with the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection, known as Cal Fire.

"If a new fire breaks out, that fire will be able to grow very quickly under these conditions,' Berlant said.

The National Weather Service issued a red-flag warning for extreme fire danger from 5 a.m. through Friday morning. With bone-dry humidity and wind gusts possibly hitting 55 mph, Pacific Gas & Electric, the largest utility in the nation, warned that it may cut power starting Wednesday evening to as many as 54,000 customers in 24 coun-

Preemptive electricity cuts are a strategy aimed at preventing fires from being started by power lines that have been damaged or knocked down amid high winds. PG&E equipment sparked several massive blazes that destroyed tens of thousands of homes and killed more than 100 people since 2017.

"We really view it as a last resort option," said Mark Quinlan, the company's incident commander.

The utility also has deployed generators and other measures to keep electricity flowing in some areas that might lose power during the outages, Ouinlan said.

Mom on trial for deaths says she blacked out

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - A South Carolina mother on trial for placing two of her newborns in trash bags and throwing them away about a year apart told investigators she blacked out from the pain of delivering the second child alone, waking up 15 minutes later and finding the boy's face blue.

Alyssa Dayvault did not show up for her trial this week on two counts of homicide by child abuse, but the case is moving forward at the Horry County courthouse with her lawyers putting on a defense.

Prosecutors on Wednesday played a recording of Dayvault's interview with police who were called after Dayvault showed up at the hospital with an infection caused when she did not deliver the placenta along with the baby boy in December 2018.

Dayvault told investigators in the recording she hid the pregnancy from both her longtime boyfriend and her mother. She said she delivered the baby alone in her North Myrtle Beach home. And after passing out from the pain and discovering the unconscious baby, she put him in a trash bag and threw him away, the recording showed.

Cells at zoo lead to cloning of endangered horse

SAN DIEGO (AP) - Little Kurt looks like any other baby horse as he frolics playfully in his pen. He isn't afraid to kick or head-butt an intruder who gets in his way and, when he's hungry, dashes over to his mother for milk.

But 2-month-old Kurt differs from every other baby horse of his kind in one distinct way: He's a clone.

The rare, endangered Przewalski's horse was created from cells taken from a stallion that had sat frozen at the San Diego Zoo for 40 years before they were fused with an egg from a domestic horse.

With the egg's nucleus removed, ensuring Kurt would be basically all Przewalski's horse, they were implanted in the mare who would become his mom on Aug. 6.

The result, officials say, was the world's first cloned Przewalski's horse.

The zoo sees his birth as a milestone in efforts to restore the population of the horse also known as the Asiatic Wild Horse or Mongolian Wild Horse. The small, stocky animals (they stand only about 4 to 5 feet tall at the withers) are believed extinct in the wild and number only about 2,000 in zoos and wildlife habitats. Their limited gene pool puts them at a reproductive disad-

"This colt is expected to be one of the most genetically important individuals of his species," Bob Wiese, chief life sciences officer at San Diego Zoo Global, which operates the zoo, said in a statement. "We are hopeful that he will bring back genetic variation important for the future of the Przewalski's horse population."

Although only 2 months old, Kurt's birth was made possible in 1980 when cells were taken from a 5-year-old stallion and put in deep freeze at San Diego's Frozen Zoo facility. His father died in 1998.

Kurt was named for Kurt Benirschke, who played a key role in founding the Frozen Zoo with its extensive research program and cell cultures.

"A central tenet of the Frozen Zoo, when it was established by Dr. Benirschke, was that it would be used for purposes not possible at the time," said Oliver Ryder, director of genetics at San Diego Zoo Global.

The zoo worked in collaboration with the California conservation group Revive & Restore and the Texas-based company ViaGen Equine in creating Kurt.

Render unto Caesar what is Caesar's

A good friend of mine recently sent me a link to an article titled "Are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness Christian?"

Rod Martin, the author, ultimately states, "In short, these self-evident unalienable rights, endowed unto all men equally by the Triune Creator God, guaranteed that no man might take a life created in His image, that all men be free of the sinful oppression of modern-day Cains and Nimrods, and that each might pursue the calling God gave him to its fullest reasonable extent" (https:// rodmartin.org/life-liberty-pursuit-happiness-christian/). I can endorse that.

Martin makes many good points, but I think he might have overlooked some important considerations. I do not see him wrestling sufficiently with the question of how we choose to use, life, liberty, or the pursuit of happiness. If I choose to squander my life in profligate ways, to use my talents solely for my own benefit, is that acting in a Christ-like manner? If I choose to use my liberty in ways which harm others or in ways which deny others the necessities required to sustain a reasonable life, is that acting in a Christ-like manner? If I choose to pursue my own happiness over and above consideration for the happiness of others, or at the expense of othREFLECTIONS ers' happiness, is that acting in a Christ-like manner?

Case in point: Many argue non-payment of taxes is only good business sense – that doing so enables their own pursuit of happiness. Many take a pro-life stance while refusing to concern themselves with whether the naked are clothed and the hungry are fed. The pursuit of happiness involves far more than being fat, dumb, and happy!

Martin cites Aristotle's use of eudaimonia, which is generally translated as happiness. This translation is unfortunate in that it captures only a small part of what eudaimonia entails (living properly and well in accordance with the rule by which the practically wise man would do so). One may suffer adverse circumstances, e.g., Nelson Mandela's extended imprisonment. I would not say that he was happy, but I could mount a very reasonable argument that he was living well (making his life count for the greater good), for his life and imprisonment ultimately served to bring greater justice to millions.

The Scripture lesson for next Sunday quotes Jesus as saying, "Render unto Caesar what is Caesar's but render unto God what is God's." Many go to extremes to avoid paying taxes, or begrudging give what is rightfully Caesar's unto Caesar – that is pure, unadulterated greed and selfishness.

I wish Martin had wrestled with these questions: Would we pursue life, liberty, and happiness as Jesus pursued them in service and love to others or would we pursue them merely for our own benefit? Would we pursue life, liberty, and happiness for the good of our social order which would encompass all members of our society or would we pursue them merely for our own benefit? When we pursue them in ways which emulate Jesus' life, I would say we are pursuing them in a Christian manner, but I would not say that in and of themselves they are Christian.

I find many pieces such as Martin's to be attempts to dress elements of greed and selfishness in fine clothing. All too often they fail to consider the way Jesus lived and loved.

Bipartisan Christian group forms super PAC to oppose President Trump

WASHINGTON (AP) – A group of prominent Christians from both sides of the aisle, including a past faith adviser to former President Barack Obama, is forming a political action committee designed to chip away at Christian support for President Donald Trump in the final weeks of the 2020 campaign.

Dubbed Not Our Faith, the new super PAC plans to roll out six-figure TV and digital ads focused on Christian voters – particularly the evangelical and Catholic voters who helped power Trump to victory in 2016. Its first digital ad, set to run in Michigan and Pennsylvania, takes sharp aim at Trump's claim to a foothold with Christians.

The ad, shared with The Associated Press in advance of its release, says Trump "has used Christianity for his own purposes," invoking imagery of the Republican president's photo op outside a historic Washington church amid this summer's racial justice demonstrations. Urging Christians to break from Trump, the ad states that they "don't need Trump to save them. The truth is that Trump needs Christians to save his flailing campaign."

That sharp critique of Trump's standing with Christian voters comes as the president looks to evangelicals in particular to help him muscle to reelection over Democratic nominee Joe Biden.

While Biden's campaign is mounting a well-organized faith outreach effort, that work largely focuses on an affirmative case for the former vice president rather than the overtly anti-Trump case that the new PAC is making.

Among the PAC's advisory council members are Michael Wear, a former faith adviser in Obama's administration and reelection campaign, and Autumn Vandehei, a former aide to onetime Republican Rep. Tom DeLay of Texas. Wear said in an interview that Trump has "in a predatory way attached himself to Christians," asserting that the faith would be "better off" without the president.

"Trump eked out 2016 with unprecedented support from white evangelicals and, important to note, a really strong showing among Catholics. We're going after all of it," Wear said. "We think Christian support is on the table in this election."

Trump and his reelection campaign continue to lean heavily on pitches to Christian voters, with the president asserting the baseless claim that Biden and Democrats are hostile to religion.

Republicans are also appealing to voters of faith by claiming that Democrats have unfairly criticized Supreme Court nominee Amy Coney Barrett for her Catholicism, although no Democratic senator has yet raised the issue during Barrett's confirmation hearings.

Trump's faith adviser and personal pastor, Paula White, is set to appear Tuesday in the battleground state of Ohio at an event for the campaign's evangelical outreach project.

Whether Biden backers' bid to peel away evangelical support from Trump is making headway remains to be seen. A survey from the nonpartisan Pew Research Center taken after Trump's contentious church photo op found that 72% of white evangelicals approved of his handling of the job, a level that has remained largely consistent over his presidency.

But the new PAC sees room for a wide-ranging connection with Christian voters beyond Trump's white evangelical base. Wear said the project hopes "to reach and appeal to a diverse coalition of Christians ... just as we anticipate a diverse coalition of Christians will oppose Donald Trump's re-election."

Black churches mobilizing voters

NEW YORK (AP) – For the Rev. Jimmy Gates Sr., the 2008 presidential election year was one to remember – and not just because it yielded a historic result as the nation elected its first Black president.

The pastor of Zion Hill Baptist Church in Cleveland recalls how, on the last Sunday of early voting before the general election, he and his congregation traveled in a caravan of packed buses, vans and cars to the city's Board of Elections office and joined a line of voters that seemed to stretch a mile.

"What a sight to see," Gates said. "Seniors, middle-aged people, young people."

In recent election cycles, Black church congregations across the country have launched get-out-the-vote campaigns commonly referred to as "souls to the polls." To counteract racist voter suppression tactics that date back to the Jim Crow era, early voting in the Black community is stressed from pulpits nearly as much as it is by the candidates seeking their support.

But voter mobilization in Black church communities will look much different in 2020. Churches have organized socially distant caravans with greatly reduced transportation capacity for early voting and Election Day ballot-casting. Church volunteers are phone-banking and canvasing the homes of their members to ensure mail-in and absentee ballots are requested and hand-delivered to election board offices or drop boxes before the deadlines.

Mark Twain wrote, "Fiction is obliged to stick to possibilities. Truth isn't.'

In truth, today's deal contained several possibilities. South was in three no-trump. West led the heart four: six, queen, eight. East returned the heart two: jack, king, seven. West played a third heart. Declarer led a diamond to her queen, then played a diamond to the king. East won with the ace and led her last heart, after which South claimed the balance for plus

What do you think of the bidding, declarer play and defense?

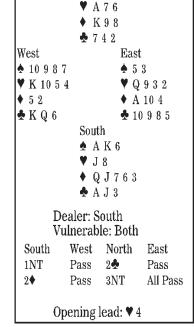

North should have raised straight to three no-trump. Don't use Stayman with 4-3-3-3 distri-

West guessed well to lead a heart. I would have chosen the ineffective spade 10.

East knew that her partner had only four hearts. (South wouldn't have opened one no-trump with a singleton.) So, there was a strong case for East's shifting to the club 10 at trick two, which would have worked beautifully here. Also, West knew that the hearts were 4-4. So, after winning the second trick, she should have switched to the club king. This defense would have defeated the contract also.

Bridge

Declarer knew that to get home she had to drive out the diamond ace. But she was worried that she might lose one diamond and four hearts. So, declarer held up the heart ace until the third round. But when East returned the heart two at trick two, it announced that she had started with four hearts. If hearts were 4-4, holding up couldn't help. Declarer should have taken the second trick and played on diamonds.

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: My husband and I have been together for 11 years, married for eight. We have been through a lot together, which has served to strengthen our marriage. My husband is my Prince Charming and my happily forever

Recently, he has discovered that he likes wearing women's clothes. It started with him wearing women's underwear under his clothes, which didn't bother me. I even bought him a few pair I liked. It has progressed quickly.

He assures me that he isn't gay, he does not want to become a woman or want to dress in women's clothes full time. However, some of his behaviors have changed, and his wearing women's clothing has increased. When I tried discussing my concerns with him, he said I was being irrational. We fought, and I thought we had worked some things out, but he still has an attitude.

I'm terrified that this is the beginning of the end of my marriage, and I don't want to lose him. But I also don't know just how much of this I can accept or how far he wants to go. He says if I can't accept it, he will stop doing it. But we will both know that he has that desire, and I don't want to stifle something that seems to mean so much to him. I have no one I can talk to about this.

Abby. Please help. — Struggling in Florida

Dear Struggling: Take the opportunity to learn all you can about cross-dressing. More men than you may think engage in it, and the majority are heterosexual. An excellent support group for crossdressers and wives of men who need (not "LIKE") to cross-dress is the Society for the Second Self (Tri Ess). Its website is tri-ess.org. Go there and you will find the support and answers you're looking for.

Keep the lines of communication with your husband open and honest. Only the two of you can determine how to navigate through this. For many couples, it's not necessarily a deal-breaker.

Dear Abby: When I was 21, I got pregnant with "Earl," a guy who had nothing to his name but a bicycle. It was three weeks after we met. Earl was 24. Two years later we split. I was working and he was a stay-at-home dad, and I couldn't stand it.

Expat in Nevada

Five years later, I married a very wealthy man, moved to another country and lived a life of luxury. Thirteen years later we split. I left our small island and moved back, still well off on my

Earl was my rock and is a totally different man now. Sixteen years later, I have fallen head over heels for him. He has become everything I've always wanted. Our son wasn't crazy about it at first (he's 18), but now loves it. Earl's mother said she knew it would end up this way. My parents have reservations. Do you think we have a fighting chance? — New

Dear New Expat: Earl is not the person he was and, frankly, neither are you. Do the two of you have a fighting chance? Absolutely. However, before marrying anyone again, it is important that you discuss this with an attorney and have in place a signed prenuptial agreement. While it may not seem romantic, it's the intelligent thing

Drs. Oz and Roizen

Reversing the trend of rising blood pressure

BY MEHMET OZ, M.D. AND MIKE ROIZEN, M.D.

Barry White was known for his bass-baritone that delivered such low-n-slow ballads as "Can't Get Enough of Your Love, Babe." Unfortunately, his easygoing style didn't prevent him from dying from complications of high blood pressure. It's a risk more and more Americans face every year, despite the push for regular screening and the availability of effective antihypertension medications.

According to a study presented at the American Heart Association's Hypertension 2020 Scientific Sessions with the pessimistic title "Hypertension Control in the U.S. 2009-2018: Rapidly Reversing Years of Progress," between 1999-2000, around 32% of Americans were able to maintain a healthy blood pressure of 140/90mmHg or less (the guidelines that year). By 2013-2014, the number had risen to more than half (54.5%). Bravo! But by 2015-2016, there was a 6% drop to 48%. And, as of 2017-2018, fewer than 44% of U.S. adults had a heart-healthy blood pressure.

In 2017, the measure of a healthy blood pressure was lowered from 140/90mmHg to 130/80mmHg, because research shows earlier interventions prevent heart attack and strokes. But we suggest you go lower and aim for 115/75.

So, sign on to reverse the national trend by adopting three triedand-true interventions: 1) get 300 minutes of exercise weekly; 2) maintain a healthy weight through a plant-based diet that eliminates highly-processed foods and red meats; and 3) know your numbers and talk to your doc about medication if lifestyle intervention doesn't help enough.

Mehmet Oz, M.D. is host of "The Dr. Oz Show," and Mike Roizen, M.D. is Chief Wellness Officer and Chair of Wellness Institute at Cleveland Clinic. To live your healthiest, tune into "The Dr. Oz Show" or visit www. share care.com.

and gutter, and a sidewalk. Berreth said they were on the agenda to discuss it more with the county commission back in March, but because of the pandemic they were unable to. Highway Superintendent

Brian Gustad said there was mention of lowering the grade of the road and said they are not in favor of doing that. Bartley asked Berreth why they want to lower the road and for what distance. Berreth said the priority for the city in the project is to ensure better safety for pedestrians and traffic by adding the sidewalk and curb and gutter. Berreth said there's a

'Cats make long journey to face winless Spartans

BY SEAN WELSH The Register

This week's journey covers 434 miles – one way – as the undefeated Bobcats face the winless Spartans in Spearfish. Kickoff is set for 7 p.m. at Lyle Hare Stadium Brookings is outscoring its opponents an average of 39.71-13.57 through seven games.

Spearfish is getting outscored an average of 46-9.14.

"They are 0-6 but we have to be prepared for every team we play, which is what we're making sure we're doing this week," said BHS coach Brady Clark, who played collegiately at Black Hills State University in Spearfish. "You know, they have a new head coach (Dalton Wademan) – he's actually a buddy of mine; I played college football with him. I know he's doing a great job there and working on turning around that program and his guys are going to be ready to play. They're a team that is danger-

The Bobcats are putting up 273 rushing yards per contest averaging 7.8 per carry.

Defensively, Wes Koenig has 44 tackles, Parker Theobald 42, John Noordsy 37, Max Struck 36 and Jaxton Eck 31.

A Bobcat win would likely set up a matchup of 8-0 teams in the regular-season finale as Brookings is playing host to Yankton on Thursday, Oct. 22. The Bucks (7-0) welcome Douglas (1-5) this week.

"I'd like to see us try to play Jaxon Bowes is 38-of-68 for a perfect game," added Clark of the Spearfish matchup. "Be consistent.

EAGAN, Minn. (AP) — When Dalvin Cook hurt his groin and left for the locker room Sunday night in Seattle, the Minnesota Vikings didn't alter their game plan. Despite the absence of the NFL's leading rusher, Minnesota maintained its run-heavy approach with second-year back Alexander Mattison. In Wildcats, Knights win Region 1B the Vikings' eyes, the strategy didn't need to change. After all, Mattison — nicknamed Madison Zirberl of Dako-"Deuce" — is nearly a clone of Cook.

"He sees the field how I see the field, and it's crazy when we come off the field how we see things so similar," Cook said Wednesday. "He's just a bigger version. When he comes in, he's trying to break the home run, too. But he knows what's ahead of him. I do think Deuce is a similar version of me."

Cook hobbled off after catching a short pass on the first offensive play of the back for one more play, before determining he couldn't go full speed and was done for the rest of the game.

Mattison had 12 carries for 80 yards in the fourth quarter alone. He finished with 112 yards rushing, the first 100yard game of his career, on 20

"We're both that two-headed monster," Mattison said.

Cook, who leads the NFL with 489 rushing yards and is tied with New Orleans' Alvin Kamara with a league-best seven touchdowns, didn't practice on Wednesday. His status is in question for Minnesota's game on Sunday against Atlanta. "I feel better," Cook said.

"Still taking this thing day by day. As far as my Atlanta status, we're going to take this thing day by day. Just see how it feels after treatment and everything.

Cook has dealt with injuries throughout his career, missing 21 games over his first three seasons. The Vikings have thus made it a priority to have a steady backup. When Latavius Murray left in free agency following the 2018 season, Minnesota selected Mattison in the third round of the 2019 draft out of Boise second half in the 27-26 loss State. The similarities to Cook to the Seahawks. Cook came weren't the reason Mattison was chosen. Call it a fortunate consequence.

> "Alexander is a good back, a really conscientious kid," Vikings coach Mike Zimmer said. "He works real hard and tries to learn from Dalvin as much as he can."

Mattison grew up in San Bernardino, an often dangerous and poverty-stricken city in Southern California. His family was left homeless at times while struggling financially and his father, Darrell, was diagnosed with a rare form of leukemia.

Despite the challenges, Mattison excelled athletically and academically. He had a 4.7 grade-point average and became fluent in Spanish through a dual immersion program before earning a scholarship to Boise State.

Mattison earned his nickname while wearing No. 2 as a youth football star in San Bernardino. He wore No. 22 at Boise State. Although safety Harrison Smith owned that number in Minnesota, forcing a change to No. 25, the nickname stuck with the Vikings.

Deuce would be No. 1 on Sunday if Cook isn't cleared. The Vikings have a bye the following week.

"Alex is a great back," Vikings quarterback Kirk Cousins said. "I don't feel there's a lot of limitation there in terms of an area of the offense. He can obviously run the ball, he can pass protect, he can catch the football, he can run all the routes. He knows the game plans inside and out, so you are able to run your offense."

Dodgers blow out Braves, cut series lead to 2-1

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Baby Braves were the Battered Braves in their first loss of these playoffs.

Now the young pitchers who had been so poised and effective in the postseason will have to try to get Atlanta back on track.

Rookie starter Kyle Wright and the Braves gave up a postseason-record 11 runs in the first inning of a 15-3 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers in Game 3 of the NL Championship Series on Wednesday night.

The 15 runs allowed in the first three innings were more than the Braves permitted in their first seven postseason games combined. And those 13 previous runs included seven scored by Los Angeles in the final three innings of Atlanta's 8-7 win in Game 2.

The Braves will have to remind themselves they still lead the series 2-1, with Game 4 on Thursday night in the first NLCS with no days off since 1978, and the first ever at a neutral site, the home of the Texas Rangers.

Wright gave up seven runs while getting just two outs after Atlanta starters allowed only five runs over 38 2/3 innings in the first seven playoff games.

The 25-year-old right-hander had one of the five scoreless starts for the Braves, who fell one win short of Kansas City's record eight straight victories to start the 2014 postseason.

Left-hander Grant Dayton replaced Wright and yielded eight runs in two innings, making them the second pair of teammates in postseason history to allow at least seven runs in the same game. Bartolo Colon (seven runs) and Steve Reed (eight) did it with Cleveland in a 23-7 loss to Boston in Game 4 of the mix, and Atlanta was just the 1999 ALDS. Before this meltdown, Wright and 22-year-old Ian Anderson had given the Braves a pair of impressive rookie pitchers to go with young offensive stars Ronald Acuña Jr. and Ozzie Albies.

Wright pitched six scoreless innings in his postseason debut, a 7-0 win over Miami to clinch the NLDS, while Anderson hasn't allowed a run in 15 2/3 innings covering the first three playoff starts of his career.

Add lefty Max Fried to the second team to throw shutouts in four of its first five games in a postseason. The other was the 1905 New York Giants. Now it's up to another 22-year-old making his postseason debut, Bryse Wilson, to try to get the Dodgers' dangerous offense back under control. The right-hander most likely will face the LA's career leader in postseason victories, Clayton Kershaw, pitching down the road from his Dallas home.

Kershaw was scratched from Game 2 because of back spasms, but manager Dave Roberts said the lefty was on track for Game 4 if his condition continued to improve as it had over the past few days.

"We had the mindset of we've just got to stay on the gas pedal," Wilson said before Game 3. "They can come alive anytime. They're a great team, great lineup.

The Dodgers showed it in Game 3 by becoming the first team to score 15 runs and hit five homers in the first three innings of a playoff game, according to the Elias Sports Bureau.
