A 'Good' return: Carrie Preston is back as lawyer 'Elsbeth'

Two shows on which she was featured are over now, but you can't keep Elsbeth Tascioni down.

The quirky, high-spirited lawyer portrayed by Carrie Preston — who won a Primetime Emmy for the role as a guest star in "The Good Wife," then reprised it in the spinoff "The Good Fight" — now has a show of her own as the character. Premiering Thursday, Feb. 29, on CBS and Paramount+ with Showtime, "Elsbeth" transfers Tascioni from Chicago to New York, where she has a secret agenda as she works with the city's police department in a special investigative job. Wendell Pierce ("The Wire") plays the stern police chief, Capt. C.W. Wagner, while Carra Patterson ("Straight Outta Compton," 2015) is Kaya Blanke, the officer partnered with Elsbeth.

"I could not be more thrilled," the friendly Preston says of giving Elsbeth her own showcase now. "It's been such a wonderful and interesting journey with this character. I started to play her 14 years ago, at the end of the first season of 'The Good Wife,' and you do these guest spots and don't ever think they're going to repeat. You hope you do it well and then you move on to your next job, but I knew there was something special about that character even back then.

"I felt so lucky and privileged that they would entrust me with it, because she was so unique," Preston continues. "She seemed to resonate with audiences, and then a [TV] season went by and I was like, 'Well, OK. I guess that's that.' Then they brought me back for more, and the audiences again seemed to respond to her and her unconventional way of doing things. And as the seasons [of 'The Good Wife'] went by, I would hear, 'Why don't you do a spinoff that centres around her?' [Executive producers] Robert and Michelle King and I would touch base about that, but it wasn't the right time."

Instead, "The Good Fight" happened as the first spinoff, with Christine Baranski's ("Mamma Mia!," 2008) Diane Lockhart character front and center. "They would bring me back periodically [on that drama]," Preston notes, "and I even got to direct on that. Then at the end of 'The Good Fight,' we started talking a little more in earnest [about what has become 'Elsbeth'], and COVID-19 happened."

After the resulting delay, the Kings remain among the executive producers of "Elsbeth," which starts each story by showing the perpetrator committing the given week's crime. Elsbeth then matches wits with the felon — in the series premiere, a homicidal stage director played by guest star Stephen Moyer ("True Blood") — with her homespun manner cloaking her keen method of interrogation. If that sounds like the approach of a certain other television series and character, that's not a coincidence.

Preston says that at the peak of the coronavirus pandemic, the Kings "found that they were going back and watching reruns of 'Columbo,' and they just kept getting drawn to the structure of that show. Coincidentally, out of nowhere, a reporter wrote a piece about how she also was watching 'Columbo' ... and at the end of it, she wrote, 'We don't need a reboot of "Columbo." Just give Elsbeth Tascioni her own show.' [The Kings] already had the idea of Elsbeth doing something like that, then they called me and said, 'Let's come up with a pitch.'"

For someone who got a late start on the current television season, John Goodman

Before his "Roseanne"-spinoff sitcom "The Conners" began its current sixth round Wednesdays on ABC, The CW made a deal for repeats of the show, which it's showing on Sundays and Thursdays. Goodman, a Primetime Emmy winner (for "Studio 60 on the Sunset Strip") is continuing his portrayal of Dan Conner, the patriarch who's keeping his family united in the aftermath of his wife Roseanne's death.

In a sense, "The Conners" — which will soon air its 100th episode — has brought the often gregarious Goodman full circle. Though he had some credits in movies — "Raising Arizona" (1987), "The Big Easy," (1986), etc. — and on stage (including "Big River") before "Roseanne," playing Dan made him a true household name, opening him up to many more career opportunities, many of which he used his "Roseanne" hiatus time for. "Sea of Love" (1989), "Arachnophobia" (1990), "Barton Fink" (1991), "The Hudsucker Proxy" (1994) and "The Babe" (1992) were among the notable films he made during the show's original 1988-97 run.

"Roseanne" wasn't revived until 2018 (although briefly, since circumstances led to its eventual conversion into "The Conners"), but in the interim, Goodman remained a familiar TV face. He starred in the series "Normal, Ohio," "Center of the Universe" and "Alpha House," but he also made impressions in recurring roles on other shows. Among those were "The West Wing," "Extreme," "Damages" and "Community."

Still, movie work remained a big part of Goodman's career during that period. "The Big Lebowski" (1998), "Argo" (2012), "Flight" (2012) and "10 Cloverfield Lane" (2016) are among other films that have benefited in particular from his presence — all of which strongly suggests that when his revival of Dan Conner ends, there still will be a lot for Goodman to do, and for his fans to see.
