Pickleball courts planned for late summer

Project boosted by private donation should be done by end of August.

The Brookings Register

BROOKINGS — A nearly $397,000 bid for pickleball courts at Hillcrest Park was approved on a 7-0 vote by the City Council on Tuesday night. Now all that’s left is to, well, build them.

Parks, Recreation and Forestry Director Kristen Zimmerman told councilors that work should wrap up by late summer, with an official opening afterward.

“As soon as it warms up — which could be any day now — they’re going to start and the contract is supposed to be completed at the end of August at the absolute latest,” Zimmerman said. “We’ll have our ribbon-cutting in the fall.”

The city has budgeted $775,000 for the project, which will be built by Brookings-based Timmons Construction and constructed to meet USA Pickleball standards. Broken down, the dollars add up to:

With McConnell leaving, Thune could take top job

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky will step down as the Senate Republican leader in November, he said on the Senate floor Wednesday, announcing the end of a run as party leader that broke records for its length and shaped American politics over nearly two decades.

“One of life’s most underappreciated talents is to know when it’s time to move on to life’s next chapter,” McConnell said. “It’s time for the next generation of leadership.”

McConnell, who turned 82 last week, cited the death of his wife’s sister several weeks ago, as an event that prompted him to think about his future.

“When you lose a loved one, particularly at a young age, there’s a certain introspection that accompanies the grieving process,” he said.

President Joe Biden, who spent decades in the Senate before he was elected vice president in 2008, said in impromptu remarks Wednesday that he highly respected McConnell.

“He and I have trust,” he said, according to a White

Tornadoes batter Great Lakes

(AP) — Severe storms that appear to have spawned a rare February tornado outbreak sent sleeping Midwesterners scrambling for safety and left a trail of damage and power outages across four Great Lakes states, including the Chicago suburbs, ending a spell of summer-like, sometimes record temperatures.

At least seven suspected or confirmed tornadoes in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Ohio littered roads with fallen trees and branches, shredded homes and barns, and scattered debris across city and countryside alike. No injuries were reported, despite the storm’s timing at night.

In Michigan’s Grand Blanc Township, near Flint, a confirmed tornado — only the second on record for February in that part of the state — damaged subdivisions, uprooted trees and broke gas lines in Wednesday’s wee hours. Its strength was rated at EF-2, with peak winds of 115 mph.

Police and firefighters moved residents in an area of gas leaks to a firehouse, and they were allowed to return when a utility made repairs, authorities said.

Smooth landing for TJ’s Flight fundraiser

By JOHN KUBAL
The Brookings Register

BROOKINGS — In 2009, Angie Schmitz-Thompson’s 12-year-old son TJ died in the crash of a small, private airplane. About six years ago, the fitness instructor at Synergy Strength Studio in Brookings organized the first TJ’s Flight to the Finish Challenge to raise funds for charitable causes and to establish a legacy for her son. Now the challenge is an annual event each February. This year would have marked TJ’s 27th birthday.

“It started quite small,” Schmitz said, of the annual and now expanded event. “It was just the TJ’s Flight to Finish scholarships. ... It’s just been growing every year.” Now it’s a fundraiser where teams “do workouts (at Synergy) to raise money for their chosen local charity. This year we did partners; we had teams of two and they would pick a charity that they would do this challenge for. At the end of it, we would gather points and whoever had the most points would earn the money it had cost to enter the challenge.” This year 45 two-member teams paid $50 each to take on the month-long challenge. Additionally, Schmitz noted: “Every time we have this challenge, people give free-will donations. Last year I had 10% of the winnings and donations from my friends, my family go into the TJ’s Flight scholarship fund as well.” This year a total of $3,250 was raised from all these funding sources. This year’s challenge workout exercises were “core-based.” “That means there was a workout for your core every day,” Schmitz explained. “That was the physical challenge; but also we implemented core meaning core values. ... Show random acts of kindness. Not only just a workout.” Finishing the challenge in first place was the team of Kim Koch and Danielle Witt. They will be donating $1,000 the GoFundMe account for Zander Ulvestad, a 5-year-old boy battling Wilms tumor, a rare form of cancer. Four other top-finishing teams will also be making donations to their charities of choice. “I am very proud of how hard they worked for little Zander Ulvestad,” Schmitz said, referring to winners Koch and Witt. “This year we’re going to give five different charities some of the donations.” The donations will be divided with staggered funding in descending order, from first through fifth place. The winners of two scholarships, worth about $1,000 each, were Kaedyn Sapp and Paige Kuchel, both members of Synergy. Contact John Kubal at jkubal@brookingsregister.com.

The winners of this year’s TJ’s Flight to the Finish Challenge are the team of Kim Koch and Danielle Witt. They are donating $1,000 to the GoFundMe account for Zander Ulvestad, a 5-year-old boy battling Wilms tumor, a rare form of cancer.

STORMS: Followed summer-like weather across the Upper Midwest

“There are still numerous reports of wires down in the area,” police said. “While there is significant damage to houses in the area, no one was hurt.” More than 100 miles to the southwest, a confirmed tornado damaged homes and barns and knocked down trees and power lines in Calhoun County, near the city of Marshall, sheriff’s and weather authorities said. Warning sirens jolted residents of central Ohio awake as a possible tornado hit near Columbus. Carole Essex’s family — husband Andy, their infant and a 2-year-old — were asleep at their home in Columbus as the storm approached. When they became aware of the threat, they ran for cover. “We woke up and went down to the basement. We grabbed the kids and went down,” Essex, 29, told The Columbus Dispatch. “It sounded like our house collapsed. I looked at Andy and said, ‘Oh, my god, we were hit by a tornado.’” Storms destroyed a hangar and damaged planes at a small airport in Madison County, between Dayton and Columbus. Toppled trees closed roads in the area until the debris could be cleared. At least three other storms in Ohio were confirmed as tornadoes — in Montgomery and Greene counties in southwestern Ohio, east of Columbus in Franklin and Licking counties, and near Springfield in Clark County, the National Weather Service said. The latter was rated at EF-2 strength. At one point, more than 50,000 customers in Ohio and Michigan lacked power Wednesday, according to PowerOutage.us. In Geneva, in Chicago’s western suburbs, storms uprooted trees and left some homes with broken windows and shorn-off doors Tuesday evening, said Fire Chief Mike Antenore. Geneva resident Rebecca Harrington said the storm “cycloned” into her home and collapsed its foyer area. “The back of my house is sort of hanging off,” Harrington told WGN-TV, which reported no injuries. The storms followed unusual warmth across much of the region in recent days. They were followed Wednesday by a return to winter weather, with snow and temperatures in the 20s in some areas. Weather service teams throughout the region were trying to confirm tornado reports. One suspected tornado traveled across Chicago’s southern suburbs — from Calumet City, Illinois, into East Chicago and Gary in northwestern Indiana — before heading out to Lake Michigan as a waterspout, said weather service meteorologist Kevin Doom. The Grand Blanc Township tornado is only the second February tornado for the section of Michigan covered by Detroit’s National Weather Service office since recordkeeping began in 1950, following one in Wayne County on Feb. 28, 1974, the service said. The warm weather and severe storms, including hail up to an inch in diameter, on Tuesday and Wednesday are unusual for the area this time of the year, Kook said. “This is not typical of late February by any means,” he said. “Basically, it’s kind of a month ahead of schedule for southeast Michigan.” The weather service office that covers southwestern and central Ohio has now recorded winter tornadoes almost every year since 2012.

THUNE: GOP leader election slated for November

House pool report. “We’ve got a great relationship. We fight like hell but he never, never, never misrepresented anything. I’m sorry to hear he’s stepping down.” Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer said in a statement that while he didn’t see “eye to eye,” with McConnell on various policies and politics, the New York Democrat said he was proud of what they were able to accomplish, despite their differences. “I am very proud that we both came together in the last few years to lead the Senate forward at critical moments when our country needed us, like passing the CARES Act in the early days of the COVID pandemic, finishing our work to certify the election on January 6th, and more recently working together to fund the fight for Ukraine,” Schumer said. McConnell has faced increasing pressure to endorse the GOP presidential front-runner, Donald Trump. The two have a tense relationship that reached a breaking point following the Jan. 6, 2021, insurrection at the U.S. Capitol after then-President Trump encouraged supporters to disrupt the certification of electoral votes in the 2020 election. Former South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley, who is the last remaining Republican challenging Trump for the party’s presidential nomination, said in a campaign stop in Utah that McConnell has had an amazing career. “We obviously thank him for his leadership and his service,” Haley said at an appearance in Orem, Utah. “But I applaud him for realizing that it is time for new generational change. I think what’s more important is we need to understand we don’t just need new generational change in Congress. We also need new general generational change in the White House.” Kentucky’s longest-serving senator has shaped the federal judiciary system, including by leading Senate confirmation of 234 lifetime appointments to the federal bench. He played an important role in establishing a conservative U.S. Supreme Court by blocking Democratic then-President Barack Obama from appointing a justice before the 2016 presidential election. That conservative Supreme Court has handed down decisions in the past few years with major impacts on American society. The court ended the constitutional right to access abortion care, struck down the Biden administration’s student loan forgiveness plan and expanded gun rights by limiting states’ power to enact gun safety laws. McConnell, who first arrived in the Senate in 1984 and became Republican leader in 2007, said he is “not going anywhere” until a new Republican leader is tapped. His Senate term is set to end January 2027. “I love the Senate,” McConnell said. “It’s been my life.” Senate Republicans will select a new leader in November. Possible McConnell successors include Minority Whip John Thune of South Dakota, Republican Conference Chairman John Barrasso of Wyoming and former Republican Whip John Cornyn of Texas. “As the longest serving Senate leader in American history, Mitch McConnell has made an indelible mark on this institution and the Republican Party,” Cornyn said in a post to X. “For more than 17 years, he has been the steady hand at the helm, guiding us through some of the most consequential debates and decisions in recent history.”

Cornyn also thanked McConnell for protecting “the Senate’s essential role under the Constitution,” and called him “pragmatic, knowledgeable, humble, and effective.” Thune said it “will be hard to imagine a Senate in which Sen. McConnell isn’t serving as Republican leader” but hinted he would try to succeed the Kentuckian. “For decades, he’s been a fierce defender of the Senate, our conference, and our party, and we’re all better for his service,” Thune said in a statement. “Mitch leaves enormous shoes to fill, and it’s with humility that I look forward to having a discussion with my colleagues about what the future holds for the Senate Republican Conference and a new generation of leadership. Until then, thank you, Mitch.” Barrasso praised McConnell’s career as the GOP leader and said that Republicans are focused on the November presidential election and flipping the Senate control. “That’s what my focus is,” he told reporters Wednesday. Thune recently endorsed Trump, following earlier endorsements by Barrasso and Cornyn. More allies among McConnell’s Senate Republican colleagues rushed Wednesday to sing his praises. North Carolina’s Thom Tillis praised McConnell’s achievements in shaping the judiciary and in enacting conservative policy goals in domestic and foreign policy. “Leader McConnell is a true legend of the U.S. Senate,” Tillis said in a statement. “Under his historic leadership, the Senate secured a conservative majority on the Supreme Court, passed historic tax reform, and enacted bipartisan legislation to save our economy from the brink at the start of the pandemic.”

Montana’s Steve Daines, who also chairs the GOP’s Senate campaign arm, also touted McConnell’s role in passing the 2017 tax bill that made sweeping changes to the U.S. tax code. “He will be remembered not only as the longest-serving party leader in the history of the Senate but a consummate gentleman and committed public servant,” Daines said in a statement. Shelley Moore Capito of West Virginia thanked McConnell for his “steadfast leadership and commitment to conservative principles.” South Carolina’s Lindsey Graham wrote on X that McConnell will be “remembered as one of the most effective leaders in U.S. history.” “No one in the Republican Party has echoed the themes of peace through strength — the Reagan model of national security — better than Senator Mitch McConnell,” he said.

COUNCIL: Annexation approved

- $125,000 in city funds
- $200,000 in grant funds
- $450,000 in private donation funds

Basic math shows there’s a gap of roughly $378,000 between the contract amount and the budgeted amount. There are plans afoot, though, to use at least some of those funds to further improve the incoming post-tension concrete courts, of which there will be eight, at Hillcrest Park. “We will be coming back for an adjustment to increase the playing size around the courts to allow for more competitive play,” Zimmerman noted. “And then, also, (an) alleyway down the middle, so if you have a big tournament going on you can have entries at each court, not necessarily (just) one entry for all the courts.” In approving the main construction contract, councilors at the same time rejected lesser contract proposals that were related to lighting equipment for the pickleball courts. Zimmerman said the reason for the “Base Bid B” rejections is because the city can get the lighting — including greater functionality aspects such as an auto-off function, an increased warranty and more lumens, which benefits competitive pickleball play — using a Sourcewell contract, which is a government purchasing cooperative.

“We’ll be utilizing that to purchase the lights for the pickleball courts,” she said. Annexation In other business at Tuesday night’s meeting, a 7-0 vote by the City Council approved the voluntary annexation of a little more than 30 acres of land into the city limits. The annexation request was submitted by TH Companies LLC and involves acres at 1115 West 20th Street South. This is but the first step in what could eventually become a new residential development once zoning and other issues are cleared. — Contact Mondell Keck at mkeck@brookingsregister.com.

BATH — Educators devote limitless time, and often their own resources, to helping students pursue their passions. To recognize the contributions of South Dakota’s leading agricultural teachers, the South Dakota FFA Foundation and Nationwide are honoring eight exceptional teachers as finalists for the Golden Owl Award.

From October through December, 2023, the nominations were collected for the state’s top agricultural teachers from local students, parents, fellow teachers and community members across South Dakota.

South Dakota’s 2023-2024 Golden Owl Award finalists are:

District 1: Fred Zenk, Webster
District 2: Josh Johnson, Brookings
District 3: Clayton Sorum, Tea Area
District 4: Terry Rieckman, McCook Central District 5: Austin Bishop, Belle Fourche
District 6: Brady Duxbury, Wessington Springs
District 7: Tara Fastert, Harrisburg
District 8: Renae Gebhart, Lemmon

Each finalist was presented with an individualized plaque in front of fellow teachers and students and received a $500 check to support future educational efforts. Next, they’ll be entered into a final selection stage for the chance to be crowned as South Dakota’s Ag Educator of the Year, earning an additional $3,000 Nationwide-funded check and the coveted Golden Owl Award trophy.

“Our teachers are the foundation of the FFA. They inspire our members every day, providing them encouragement and motivation to try new things. They coordinate early morning practices, dedicate weekends to FFA events, model a passion for serving others, and endlessly help students grow their passion for agriculture. We are so thankful Nationwide recognizes the valuable work our teachers do and provides this award,” shares Sandy Osterday, SD FFA Foundation Board President.

Nationwide established the Golden Owl Award to honor the contributions of teachers and support their programs with additional resources to assist their continued educational efforts. This year, the award program honors outstanding ag educators in 11 states: California, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and South Dakota.

“As the need grows for more ag educators across the nation, we are proud to thank and honor these hardworking agricultural teachers for their dedication,” said Brad Liggett, president of Agribusiness at Nationwide. “These educators play a crucial role in preparing students for successful careers in the industry.”

In conjunction with the Golden Owl Award, Nationwide is also donating $5,000 to the South Dakota FFA Foundation to further support the personal and professional growth of students, teachers and advisors alike.

CHURCH

All things denote there is a God

A few days ago my family and I were up very early in the morning to go to a meeting. As we pulled out of our driveway, we looked to the west and as usual saw the moon. However, the moon that morning was extraordinary: large, white and bright, hovering just above the horizon. It was breathtaking. We collectively took a breath and expressed our gratitude for being witness to such a phenomenon.

One of my favorite things is learning about the physical world. The more I learn, the more I see an underlying order and rhythm to how life works on Earth. Likewise, as I continue to learn about the human body and how we function as people, the more I see evidence of an order that shapes and governs it. To me, all that I learn is evidence that God exists.

As I become more aware of God's influence on Earth, I also appreciate more his love for the people here. I see his love in sunrises and sunsets, on bitterly cold February days that I know are helping to limit how many flies and mosquitos I will have to put up with in June, in frost patterns on a window, and in a beautiful moonset on an early winter morning. I feel his love in the fierce northwest wind that helps me appreciate the southern breeze that comes in a few days or weeks later. And I recognize his sense of aesthetics in the variety of life and organization of ecosystems and topography that covers the Earth, from rugged mountains to wide open plains, and from sandy beaches to mighty rivers.

I find joy in seeing evidence of God's existence. To me it brings a greater sense of appreciation and purpose. It helps me be more mindful in my interactions with everything around me, because I recognize that everything around me has purpose and meaning and is deserving of my respect. And in that, too, I see evidence that God exists.

Coffeehouse tips go to Sleep in Heavenly Peace

BROOKINGS — The Mission of the Month for March at the Mission Coffeehouse at First Lutheran Church is Sleep In Heavenly Peace.

Sleep in Heavenly Peace is a registered 501c3 non-profit serving children in need. It was founded in Kimberly, Idaho in 2012. SHP is the only charity providing hand-made bunk beds to children who don't have beds of their own. Not only does the organization deliver these beds to kids in need but it partners with organizations, churches, businesses and individuals to build them at events called "Build Days."

With so many great charities providing clothing meals and toys, little help goes to something as permanent as providing suitable beds and bedding. SHP is a group of volunteers dedicated to finding those young children living without the luxury of sleeping on a bed or even laying their heads on a pillow. Through the wonderful efforts of volunteers and generous donations, bunk beds are built, assembled and delivered to those children who are otherwise sleeping on couches, blankets or even floors. Visit www.shpbeds.org/chapter/sd-brookings.

Lenten lunches announced

BROOKINGS — Mid-day Lenten lunches are being held Wednesdays through March 27 in the First Lutheran Church activity center.

Soup, sandwiches, cookies and a beverage are served fro 11:30 a.m. to 12:10 p.m. for $10. A brief community worship service is then held from 12:10 p.m. to 12:45 p.m. with a message from a different pastor each week.

Proceeds benefit the Brookings Ministerial Association. Participants are asked to park on the west side of the church to allow room for pick up/drop off at the church's preschool

Catholic worshippers killed in attack in Burkina Faso

ABUJA, Nigeria (AP) — At least 15 Catholic worshippers were killed in a Burkina Faso village on Sunday when gunmen attacked a community as they gathered for prayers in the country's conflict-hit northern region, church officials said.

The violence in the village of Essakane was a "terrorist attack" that left 12 of the Catholic faithful dead at the scene, while three others died later as they were being treated for their wounds, according to a statement issued by Abbot Jean-Pierre Sawadogo, vicar-general of the Catholic Diocese of Dori, where the attack happened.

No further details were provided about the attack, which no group claimed responsibility for. But suspicion fell on jihadis who have frequently attacked remote communities and security forces, especially in the northern region.

"In this painful circumstance, we invite you to pray for the rest in God for those who have died in faith, for the healing of the wounded and ... for the conversion of those who continue to sow death and desolation in our country," Sawadogo said in a statement.

About half of Burkina Faso is outside government control as jihadi groups have ravaged the country for years. Fighters have killed thousands and displaced more than 2 million people, further threatening the stability of the country that had two coups in 2022.

The country's junta has struggled to restore peace in violence hot spots since the first coup in January 2022, the number of people killed by jihadis has nearly tripled compared with the 18 previous months, according to a report by the Africa Center for Strategic Studies in August.

In addition to the junta's limited capacity, the security situation also has been worsened by the country's porous borders with Mali and Niger, both of which are also run by juntas and which also struggle with security crises.

Jeffries, Johnson leadership shaped by deep-rooted faith

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Mike Johnson and House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries stood together at the annual National Prayer Breakfast — an opportunity, in the words of one introductory speaker, to "put our political differences aside."

Such differences are vast between Johnson, a staunchly conservative Republican, and Jeffries, a hero to liberal Democrats. But at the prayer breakfast earlier this month, they collegially took turns reading Scripture — evoking how their shared Christianity confronts evil.

It was a fleeting moment of unity for the two Baptist leaders who work side-by-side in the House but are miles apart politically and theologically. Jeffries, whose faith is rooted in the Black social gospel, has not been shy — just not as outspoken as Johnson regarding the role faith plays in his political duties.

Jeffries spoke in depth with The Associated Press about his religious upbringing, which was centered at Cornerstone Baptist Church in the New York City borough of Brooklyn. He declined several invitations to comment on present-day dynamics in the House, including the lingering cross-party tensions brought on by Donald Trump's presidency and his efforts to contest the 2020 election.

However, Jeffries' religious commitment while in office has been noticed by his political peers.

"There's nothing that the public can detect more clearly than sincerity, especially young people — they know when you're real. In terms of being a person of faith and justice, Hakeem Jeffries is real," said former Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi.

Jeffries, a New York Democrat who became minority leader in November 2022, handed the speaker's gavel to Johnson, a Louisiana Republican, on Oct. 25.

Outside of that ceremonial moment, the two hardly interact in public. When pressed at a recent news conference to characterize their relationship, Jeffries said it was "functional."

Johnson, 52, is a Southern Baptist — one of the white conservative evangelicals who are the majority in America's largest Protestant denomination. While celebrated by many on the Christian right, Johnson's expressions of faith and past legal advocacy have faced extensive scrutiny, including his positions against abortion and LGBTQ+ rights.

If anyone was curious about his views, Johnson told Fox News host Sean Hannity, "Go pick up a Bible off your shelf and read it — that's my worldview."

Jeffries also is deeply familiar with the Bible. For example, he has shared on social media a passage from the New Testament's Book of Ephesians evoking the need to "wrestle ... against spiritual wickedness in high places."

For Jeffries, 53, his leadership in the House traces back to his formative days growing up and serving at Cornerstone, a historically Black congregation which he still attends.

"It certainly was an important part of my mother's life, and therefore my younger brother's and myself," he told the AP.

Cornerstone in its heyday was the spiritual home for many grandchildren and great-grandchildren of enslaved African Americans who fled to Brooklyn from the South for better opportunities, including war-industry jobs. The church has long been part of the National Baptist Convention, the largest Black denomination in the U.S.

Cornerstone — and the Black Church more broadly — taught Jeffries how to build consensus, said the Rev. Al Sharpton, the civil rights leader who met Jeffries as a young lawyer. Navigating competing in-house constituencies and varied personalities gave him the temperament needed to lead a diverse, complex body of people, Sharpton said.

"He became committed to doing what he thought was right, rather than doing what was politically advantageous for his own benefit," Sharpton added.

In his youth, Jeffries became one of Cornerstone's white-gloved, dues-paying ushers, tending to crying babies and handling neighborhood traffic issues during worship services. Hakeem said that being an usher "taught me how to count, engage and serve."

Jeffries said his maternal grandmother, a longtime Cornerstone member, often shared a prediction: "I think one day you're going to be a preacher."

Her grandson took another path of service, but Jeffries did make certain to get the blessing of two Brooklyn pastors, including Cornerstone's, before entering his first New York legislative race.

Over the decades, Jeffries has been inspired by numerous Black leaders whose civil rights advocacy was fueled by their interpretation of the Gospel. Among them was the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. — a friend of Hakeem's childhood pastor, the Rev. Sandy F. Ray.

Harry S. Wright, Cornerstone's pastor after Ray's death in 1979, said Jeffries' upbringing at the church shaped him for a life of service.

"The emphasis was on being a wonderful person ... with an idea that you make your life count for something with your commitment to make the world better," Wright said. "With his drive, training and genius, he just got into the right lanes, and we see the fruit of it in the kind of person that he is today."

Jeffries came of age during an uptick in police brutality cases in New York and elsewhere. He says his decision to attend law school, and dedicate himself to the fight for racial justice, was motivated by the 1992 acquittal of four white policemen in Los Angeles after they had been shown on video brutally beating an African American man, Rodney King.

After getting his law degree, Jeffries spent 10 years in private practice before winning a seat in the New York State Assembly in 2007.

Since entering Congress in 2013, Jeffries has been true to his roots.

For instance, he was lead sponsor of a 2015 measure outlawing police use of the chokehold and other tactics hindering a person's breathing.

Early in his congressional career, when Jeffries needed help injecting theology into one of his speeches, he asked for the advice of Rep. Emmanuel Cleaver II, D-Mo.

Cleaver, an ordained United Methodist minister, said that kind of deference to himself and toward late former colleagues like John Lewis, John Conyers and Elijah Cummings endeared Jeffries to the Congressional Black Caucus.

Bridge

By PHILLIP ALDER

When you look at all 52 cards of some bridge deals, it is not clear how either the bidding or the play will go. This layout arose during a social game with strong players. What was the outcome in six clubs after West led the heart king?

The auction was involved. North's negative double showed his four-card spade suit. Then, when South indicated extra values by jumping to three no-trump, North bid his long diamond suit. South control-bid (cue-bid) four hearts to suggest a slam. West's double was futile. And, finally, South chose six clubs.

Both six clubs and six diamonds can be made, but each requires double-dummy play.

(Declarer must know where all of the cards lie.)

The expert in six clubs adopted a sensible line. After winning with his heart ace, South ran his diamond queen to East's king.

East, thinking his partner would have led a singleton if he had one, returned a heart. But declarer ruffed in the dummy, cashed the club king, crossed to the spade king, and drew trumps, squeezing East in spades and diamonds (not that it mattered, because South could have established dummy's diamond suit).

East should have returned a diamond. If South had had a singleton queen, he was unlikely to have rebid three no-trump. Also, even if he had, the diamond lead prob-

Dr. Roizen

Three things can help prevent a fractured hip

By MIKE ROIZEN, M.D. AND MEHMET OZ, M.D.

There are around 350,000 hip fractures in the U.S. annually — most to folks over age 50. Only 25% of folks fully recover and 40% can't walk independently a year later. No matter your age, you want to protect yourself from a fall that fractures your hip and upends your life:

Exercise. Maintain balance by improving your core strength. Practice planks, bridges, crunches and bent-over back rows explained in Dr. Mike's book "The RealAge Workout." Do balancing exercises: For two minutes a day, stand on one leg, then the other, facing tight into a corner (so you'll fall against a corner wall if you lose balance) or do the "tightrope walk," along a straight line on the floor.

Eat right. Protect bone health with a diet that provides plenty of calcium, vitamin K and vitamin D. For calcium and vitamin K, enjoy low- or non-fat dairy, kale, broccoli, and collard, turnip, dandelion, and mustard greens, and for vitamin D, opt for fatty fish like salmon and mushrooms.

Take vitamin D supplements. A 2012 study found that taking 2,000 IU of D daily reduced the risk of hip fracture by 30% and a 2019 study found that combined supplementation with vitamin D (daily doses of 400-800 IU) and calcium (daily doses of 1,000-1,200 milligrams) reduced hip fractures by 16%. Ask your doc for a blood test to check your D levels and take the recommended dose. (We suggest taking it with vitamin K2.) For more info check out iHerb.com's blog "Vitamin D: 6 Researched Health Benefits."

Dear Abby

Dear Abby: My niece, who is engaged, is blossoming into a full-fledged bridezilla. She has upset her mother so deeply that she may not attend the wedding. The bride is dictating what her guests are to wear, in addition to telling her mother what she is to wear that day. She has also ordered my sister to get hair extensions and have her makeup professionally done.

The list goes on and on. She brought her girlfriends to a bridal shop and, without asking about a budget, tried on gown after gown with no regard to cost. She fell in love with one that is beyond her mother's budget and demanded, "This is my dress!" My sister, wanting to avoid a scene, paid for it.

My sister has been excluded from all the wedding planning. The bride is deferring to her father and stepmother, who are paying for most of the wedding. If anyone offers a suggestion or asks a question, it is met with hostility. How do we handle this? My sister feels defeated and is deeply hurt by her daughter's actions. — Aunt Of A Monster

Dear Aunt: This production (I hesitate to call it a wedding) has gone so far out of control that there is nothing

ing you or your sister can do about it. Her chance to intervene and inject some sobriety vanished the moment she paid for the bridal gown she couldn't afford.

If your sister can't afford hair extensions and a professional makeup job (and possibly a new dress) for her daughter's special day, she should consider coming just as she is and forgo being part of the wedding. She should also thank her higher power that she isn't being ordered to fly to Bermuda or Bali in order to participate.

Dear Abby: My wife has been neglectful and hateful toward me ever since I was verbally abusive more than four years ago. I had fallen into a serious substance addiction around the same time, but I have been clean for more than a year. The addiction was another reason she is hateful toward me and holds a grudge.

I understand how addiction affects loved ones and that our relationship is probably over. My problem is, we have two very young children and split the mortgage and all other bills 50-50. I can't afford to live on my own. She can't afford to live alone, either. I can't imagine trying to pay child support as well as rent somewhere else, even if I got another full-time job.

I have done everything I can to make amends, but there is no hope. We tried counseling. It didn't help. I don't want to abandon the kids, but I don't know what to do. Is there any hope at all? — Low In Ohio

Dear Low: So the abused has become the abuser. Unless your wife is willing to bury the hatchet (somewhere other than in you) and agree to marriage counseling with a different therapist, I don't think there is hope for the two of you. Ask her if, for the sake of the kids, she is willing to TRY. But if she refuses, consult an attorney about separating as amicably as possible.

First reading of sports classifications, alignments endorsed

By DANA HESS
For the S.D. NewsMedia Association

PIERRE—The first reading of sports classifications and alignments for the next two school years received the endorsement of the South Dakota High School Activities Association board of directors at its meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 28.

Despite some suggestions for changes from activities directors, the board accepted the alignments as offered by the SDHSAA staff. A second reading will be held at the board's April meeting.

The board typically has a "public forum" at the top of its agenda. Often unused, at Wednesday's meeting the board listened for 40 minutes as school representatives offered alternatives to the plan laid out by the SDHSAA staff in basketball, volleyball, wrestling and golf.

One suggestion was that more emphasis should be placed on enrollment when making regional assignments. SDHSAA Assistant Executive Director Jo Auch explained that the schools are assigned to regions based on geography first to cut down on travel. The second consideration is making the least amount of change.

Considering enrollment within regions, Auch said, was "different than we've ever looked at before." If that would be considered, it would be "back to the drawing board."

SDHSAA Executive Director Dan Swartos said that enrollment is considered in the classification system that seeks to have schools of similar sizes compete against each other.

Swartos explained to the board that the staff uses a system of circles to try to find teams in each classification that are within the same geographical area. "It's all about perspective," Swartos said. "You could draw these things a million different ways."

Swartos said that if extensive changes are made to the classifications or alignments at the second reading, there could be a third reading.

The first reading of the classifications and alignments approved for the 2024-25 and 2025-26 school years include:

Activities association takes another swing at name, image, likeness rules

By DANA HESS
For the S.D. NewsMedia Association

PIERRE—An amendment to the constitution of the South Dakota High School Activities Association had its first reading Wednesday, Feb. 28, at an SDHSAA board meeting. The amendment would clarify the standards governing name, image and likeness rules for student athletes.

NIL refers to the right of a student to control and profit from their name, image and likeness. In the past NIL rules applied to college athletes, but those opportunities have worked their way down to the high school level.

The association is trying to discern the rules for students who have monetized their social media accounts so they are not benefiting from their status as high school athletes. For the current rules to apply to student-athletes "It would have to be pretty blatant," according to SDHSAA Executive Director Dan Swartos. "We're trying to put some guardrail around it."

Swartos explained that students could make money off of social media as long as they didn't identify themselves as an athlete. "It's completely separating you from the school," Swartos said.

The amendment clarifies the rules for student-athletes who seek to be paid for the use of their name, image, likeness.

According to the amendment, the activity must not interfere with academic obligations; remuneration must not be tied to athletic performance such as pay to play; the remuneration must not be used to induce an athlete to attend a particular school; the remuneration must not be provided by the school or agents of the school like booster clubs or foundations; SDHSAA or a member school's marks or logos must not be used nor the school's name or mascot; member school uniforms must not be worn or displayed; member school facilities must not be used; SDHSAA or member school awards or trophies must not be displayed; and students must not promote or endorse activities associated with alcohol, tobacco, vaping, controlled substances, gambling, banned athletic substances or other illegal substances or activities.

The amendment goes on to advise international students to consult U.S. visa and immigration laws as well as the laws of their home country before entering an NIL agreement. It also advises parents and students to seek legal counsel and tax advice.

Swartos said the NIL rules would apply to a "small number of kids across our state. It could be a decent amount of funding." Over the past two years, Swartos said only three or four parents have contacted him about NIL rules.

Students in violation of the NIL rules could lose their athletic amateur standing for a year. The NIL rules apply to students in taking part in sports, not those in activities like band or chorus.

The second reading of the amendment will be held at the board's April meeting. If the second reading is approved, the amendment would go out to a vote of the association's member schools.

In other action, after an hourlong executive session the board appointed Trent Osborne of Ipswich to join the board as its East River At Large member. Osborne, the Ipswich superintendent, will fill out the term of former board member Tom Culver of Avon who resigned. Osborne's term will last until June 30, 2025.
