Iowa Supreme Court allows strict abortion law to go into effect BY HANNAH FINGERHUT

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The Iowa Supreme Court said Friday the state's strict abortion law is legal, telling a lower court to dissolve a temporary block on the law and allowing Iowa to ban most abortions after about six weeks of pregnancy — before many women know they are pregnant.

The 4-3 ruling is a win for Republican lawmakers, and Iowa joins more than a dozen other states with abortion restrictive laws following the U.S. Supreme Court's overturning of Roe v. Wade in 2022.

The instructions to the lower court will be formally sent in 21 days and, for now, abortion remains legal in Iowa up to 20 weeks of pregnancy. It is unclear how long the district court would take to act after that point.

Currently, 14 states have near-total bans at all stages of pregnancy and three ban abortions at about six weeks.

The Iowa Supreme Court's majority reiterated on Friday that there is no constitutional right to abortion. As the state requested, they instructed assess whether the government has a legitimate interest in restricting the procedure, rather than whether there is too heavy a burden for people seeking abortion access.

Thirteen states, including South Dakota, opt out of summer food program for kids

BY ROBBIE SEQUEIRA

STATES NEWSROOM

A new, permanent summer grocery program will help nearly 21 million kids across 37 states get enough to eat this year while school's out.

But 13 states with Republican governors have opted out of the federal program, citing their opposition to what they deride as "welfare" and their unwillingness to cover administrative costs.

Under the new $2.5 billion program created by Congress, eligible low-income households will receive a total of $120 per child over the three summer months when school-based free and reduced-price lunch programs aren't available.

Washington, D.C., several territories and tribal nations also are participating. Families making up to 185% of the federal poverty level, or $57,720 for a family of four, are eligible.

About 17 million households experienced food insecurity in 2022, compared with 13.5 million in 2021 and 13.8 million in 2020.

Funds have already been distributed to families in many states.

The money will be available on an electronic benefits transfer (EBT) card. Households enrolled in stateadministered programs can use their benefits at retail stores that participate in the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), commonly known as food stamps.

The states that chose not to participate in Summer EBT — Alabama, Alaska, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Mississippi, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and Wyoming — could decide to opt in next year.

While Oklahoma is not participating in the program, the Cherokee and Chickasaw tribes in the state are. Fourteen states with Republican governors are participating in the program.

The money put on the digital cards comes from the federal government, but states must cover half the cost of administering the program. Those costs include the salaries and benefits of the people running the program, office expenses and outreach efforts.

Iowa officials said the program would cost $2.2 million for the state

Theodore Roosevelt's pocket watch was stolen in 1987. It's finally back at his New York home

BY DAVE COLLINS

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The silver pocket watch was a prized possession of Theodore Roosevelt, a keepsake given to him by his sister and her husband in 1898 before he became president that would travel with him around the world and end up at Sagamore Hill — his home on Long Island, New York, and now a national historic site.

But in 1987, it went from museum piece to pilfered prize when someone stole it from an unlocked case at the Theodore Roosevelt Inaugural National Historic Site in Buffalo, New York, where it was on loan.

It was mystery that endured 36 years until it turned up at a Florida auction house last year and was seized by federal agents. On Thursday, it was returned to public display at Sagamore Hill as the National Park Service and the FBI triumphantly announced it was back home during a ceremony featuring Roosevelt's greatgrandson, Tweed Roosevelt.

"This was feel-good news," Tweed Roosevelt, 82, said Friday in a phone interview. "For me, it kind of felt like almost as if a piece of TR's spirit being returned to Sagamore Hill, like a little bit of him was coming back. And so I felt that was really cool."

Growing up, he said he didn't know about the watch and only learned about it vaguely after it was stolen. He called it "unremarkable" in appearance, but priceless to his great grandfather.

"As it turns out, this isn't just any old pocket watch," he said. "It was a watch that TR placed great sentimental value on.7

The mystery of the watch's disappearance, however, is not fully solved. It is still not clear who stole it and how. The Park Service and FBI only released details of its reappearance this week after an investigation. The agencies did not return messages seeking comment Friday.

Roosevelt, who was president from 1901 to 1909, apparently had the watch with him at the Battle of San Juan Hill in Cuba during the Spanish-American War and during future exploits, including wild game hunting in Africa and exploring the Amazon in South America, according to the Park Service.

The watch, made by the nowdefunct Waltham Watch Co. in Massachusetts, appears like many pocket watches of its day, with a plain silver exterior and no etchings. But the inside reveals its significance, with engraving that says "THEODORE ROO-SEVELT" and "FROM D.R. & C.R.R.," referring to Roosevelt's brother-in-law and sister, Douglas Robinson Jr. and Corinne Roosevelt Robinson.

When it showed up last year at Blackwell Auctions in Clearwater, Florida, owner Edwin Bailey was excited by the engraving but skeptical it was real. It had no supporting documents with it, and the general mindset among art dealers and collectors is to verify before getting your nopes up, he said.

Bailey said he did not know the watch was stolen, and the person who brought it to him didn't know where it came from. He declined to identify the person, saying he never divulges the identities of his consigners. He only would say the person was an art dealer and collector in Buffalo in the 1970s and 1980s.

The collector told Bailey that he received the watch from another man who used to borrow money from him to go "picking" for antiques and other collectibles in the late 1980s. The picker would leave the watch with the collector as collateral, Bailey said.

One day, the picker never showed up to retrieve the watch, and the collector found out that he had died, Bailey said.

"This dealer probably had that thing just squirreled away for 30 years thinking it was just another pocket watch," Bailey said Friday. "I don't think that my consigner had a clue about not only where it came from, but he probably didn't even suspect it was

Bailey said he researched the watch for weeks, pouring through Roosevelt's writings in online archives, trying to come up with definitive proof it was authentic. He said he found several bits of evidence that made him believe it was. The FBI, Park Service and Sagamore Hill officials would later confirm it was the real deal.

In a note to his sister in May 1898, Roosevelt wrote, "Darling Corinne, You could not have given me a more useful present than the watch; it was exactly what I wished. ... Thank old Douglas for the watch — and for his many, many kindnesses."

He also mentioned a watch in his 1914 book "Through the Brazilian Wilderness." Writing about a bayou crossing, he said "One result of the swim, by the way, was that my watch, a veteran of Cuba and Africa, came to an indignant halt." Bailey believes that was the same watch Roosevelt's sister

Flood resources from SDSU Extension

BROOKINGS — For those affected by the recent flooding in the southeastern part of South Dakota, SDSU Extension has a page dedicated to compiling our unbiased resources for flood preparation and recovery at https:// extension.sdstate.edu/

There are resources for communities, homeowners, business owners, and agriculture operations. For gardeners, Rhoda

Burrows, professor and SDSU Extension Horticulture Specialist, has compiled a list of reminders: If the harvestable portion of the crop has been directly touched by flood waters, the FDA states that you must not harvest that produce for consumption/sale. This includes root crops and crops that will be cooked.

Since flood waters often carry human pathogens such as E. coli and parasites, one should assume that these have been deposited anywhere that the flood waters have covered, and no produce where the harvestable portion is in direct contact with the ground (such as root crops, salad crops, melons, etc.) should be harvested for at least 90 days after the flood waters have receded. This includes anything that is replanted, since splashing of soil onto the plants can convey pathogens onto the plants. Crops that will be thoroughly cooked can be an exception – winter squash, pumpkins, etc. (but also consider the next point). Consider what may be carried in the floodwater in addition to pathogens – herbicides or insecticides recently applied on upstream fields, unknown chemicals from flooded sheds, buildings, parking lots,

The ruling previews the ending of a yearslong legal battle over abortion restrictions in Iowa that escalated in 2022 when the Iowa Supreme Court and then the U.S. Supreme Court both overturned decisions establishing a constitutional right to abortion.

Republican Gov. Kim Reynolds immediately released a celebratory statement Friday morning.

"I'm glad that the Iowa Supreme Court has upheld the will of the people of Iowa," she said.

The law was in effect for a few days before a district court judge put it on pause, a decision that Reynolds appealed.

On Friday, Iowa abortion providers said they will continue to operate within the confines of the law.

Fact checks were prevalent during and after the Biden-Trump debate — but not for real-time viewers

BY DAVID BAUDER AP MEDIA WRITER

NEW YORK (AP) — There were some exhaustive, independent fact checks of claims made during the CNN debate between Joe Biden and Donald Trump. Trouble was, none of them were available to the millions of people watching the two presidents

That was the result of CNN's decision ahead of Thursday's debate that moderators Dana Bash and Jake Tapper would be questioners, not arbiters.

Supporters of President Biden were frustrated, since Trump was later flagged for more misleading statements than his rival, and it served to put greater emphasis on the Democrat's tepid perfor-

At the same time, it emphasized a puzzle the media has yet to solve after nine years of Trump operating in the public arena as it relates to the presidency.

"I think that there is a very real question about whether it is possible to fact-check Donald Trump live on television," said Jane Hall, author of "Politics and the Media: Intersections and New Directions" and an American University journalism professor. "He has confounded many different formats."

False claims abounded

Just under 48 million people watched the unusual June debate, according to a preliminary estimate by the Nielsen company. The first time these candidates met onstage in 2020, there were 73 million viewers.

Bash and Tapper held firm to their intentions, which CNN stressed was its own call and not part of the debate rules negotiated with the campaign. The journalists avoided follow-ups, though they had to restate questions a number of times when candidates ignored them. CNN's Daniel Dale offered a report in which he said Trump had made at least 30 false claims, and Biden at least nine.

But it wasn't shown on the air until more than an hour after the debate ended — just shy of midnight on the East Coast.

"I wish the CNN moderators did more fact-checking, letting the audience know when things are said that are flatly false," columnist Nicholas Kristof of The New York Times wrote on X. "Not sure how it helps for a platform to transmit falsehoods disguised

Bill Adair, a professor of journalism and public policy at Óuke University who founded Politifact, said it's extraordinarily difficult to balance on-air corrections with the need to keep a conversation moving.

That said, "for them to be completely silent, I think, was going too far," said Adair, who is no longer affiliated with Politifact.

When Trump falsely claimed during an abortion discussion that Democrats supported killing live babies, one of the moderators should have stepped in, he said. CNN expressed no regrets and was pleased with Bash and Tapper's performances. "Like a big game, when no one is talking about the referees the day after, we did our jobs," one executive said privately.

What of the production itself?

The debate ran smoothly as a television production, particularly in comparison to the first 2020 debate that moderator Chris Wallace recalled Thursday as a "disaster," and a poorly conceived Trump town hall in 2023 that was a factor in then-CNN chief Chris Licht's ouster.

It's not that Biden did not dispute Trump's statements; he did at least 10 times, according to the debate transcript.

"You're lying," Biden told

Trump during an abortion discussion. "Every single thing he said is a lie, every single one," he said about veterans. "What he's telling you is simply not true," he said about the Capitol insur-"He has no idea what the hell he's talking about," he said when the topic was NATO. "It is simply a lie," he said about Trump on Ukraine.

And there was the familiar Biden phrase: "I've never heard so much malarkey in my life."

Yet the claims often lacked specificity, and a feeling of missed opportunity lingered. Biden "let every fastball hanging over the plate get by," MSNBC host Joe Scarborough said on Friday. Politifact pointed out 15 false statements made by Trump and another one — that Biden had allowed millions of people illegally into the country from jails and mental institutions — that it classified as a "pants on fire" lie. It cited three false statements by The New York Times chronicled 20 false statements by Trump, with another 21 it said were either misleading, lacked context or lacked evidence. Its fact check pointed out no false statements by Biden, with 11 meeting the other characterizations. The Associated Press corrected 11 Trump statements by Trump, four by Biden.

The Washington Post wrote that Trump "confidently relied on false assertions that have been debunked repeatedly" while Biden "stretched the truth occasionally." Some journalists, like Dale, fact-checked online during the debate, yet that required viewers to specifically pay attention to a second screen. Adair noted that at Duke, educators have experimented with ways to fact-check on television screens in real-time, yet automated efforts have largely failed and those led by humans require great speed.

Duke conducted one experiment with on-screen fact checks at a North Carolina television station in 2020, he said.

As yet, he said, he has seen little interest among television networks in doing anything similar this election cycle.

The office of Mississippi Republican Gov. Tate Reeves said the state opted out of the program as part of his rejection of "attempts to expand the welfare state," according to Mississippi Today.

Texas officials told The Texas Tribune that the federal government didn't give them enough time to get the program up and running.

Gov. Phil Scott's administration initially opted out, saying the state wouldn't be able to afford the administrative costs, according to Vermont Public. But state officials secured a waiver to participate after they said they worked with the federal government to get more flexibility in administering the program, VTDigger reported.

When Nebraska Republican Gov. Jim Pillen changed his mind about opting out of the U.S. Department of Agriculture program in February, it was a visit from schoolchildren that won him over.

"They talked about being hungry, and they talked about the summer USDA program and, depending upon access, when they'd get a sack of food," Pillen said at a news conference. "And from my seat, what I saw there, we have to do better in Nebraska.'

Alabama's legislature in May approved $10 million for the state to participate in 2025. Kelsey Boone, senior child nutrition policy analyst at Food Research & Action Center, which advocates for people struggling with poverty-related hunger, said she expects more states to commit to Summer EBT in 2025, if the program demonstrates success. "For most states, the trade-off ends up being that for all that's being spent on administrative costs, the benefits of the program far outweighs it," Boone said.

"I think there will be a lot of pushback and a lot of people reaching out to their state agencies and their state gova lion in the state budget ernors' offices to, you know, ask them to run the program in 2025, and that will be very powerful," she said.

Was the debate the beginning of the end of Joe Biden's presidency?

It didn't take long. From the very start of Thursday's ČNN debate between Donald Trump and Joe Biden, the question was not so much whether Biden was losing but exactly how much damage it would do to the President's reëlection campaign. His first shaky answers, it turned out, were no outlier: Biden, his voice raspy and often unclear, struggled for the entirety of the debate, an agonizing hour and a half that, amazingly enough, Biden's own campaign had sought out in an effort to make up ground against Trump, the defeated, criminally convicted ex-President who was nonetheless leading in the polls.

Let's stipulate to this: Trump was no champion, either. For much of the debate, he reiterated familiar lines, often out of context or wildly untrue, from his rallies and social-media feed. CNN's moderators, having announced in advance that they would not be doing any fact checking, stuck to their plan, did anyone care? The news of the debate was not Trump saying crazy, untrue things, though he did so in abundance. It was Biden. The President of the United States, eighty-one years old and asking to be returned to office until age eighty-six, looked and sounded old. Too old. His voice was muffled. He lost his train of thought. He raced through answers.

"God Only Knows" — For King & Country

Released in 2018, "God Only Knows" became the first song for For King & Country to reach the Billboard Hot 100, peaking at No. 94. It reached No. 2 on Christian music charts, but it's rare to get a religious-based song that crosses over to reach the general music list.

The song revolves around someone who is reaching out to people who are feeling downtrodden or hurt and encouraging them to find God for someone who truly understands the tough stuff of life without indement out judgment.

The Smallbone brothers, Luke and Joel, who began the group, chose to take the song across genres, pairing with Timbaland for a remix of the song before they struck gold by doing a collaboration with one of the all-time great musical artists, Dolly Parton

It was the version with Dolly that would eventually reach the top 100

While Dolly's voice and presence adds a lot to the video that the group produced for her collaboration with them, it's the genuine feel of a woman who has done so much for others being part of that video that really allowed it to go viral to many who would never consider the group's music otherwise. The YouTube video for the song has been viewed more than 15 million times.

Recently, Dolly has taken some heat after Federalist writer Ericka Andersen attempted to attract some clicks by attacking Dolly's general love and forgiveness for all people of all backgrounds and her inclusive work across gender, racial, and economic lines that often define so many others.

headline, Her "There's nothing loving about Dolly Parton's false gospel," uses Bible verses (often signifimisinterpreted and out of context, but popularly used in such ways by groups bent on utilizing the Bible to extend rhetoric of exclusion and difference) to question Dolly's willingness to be loving and inclusive to members of the LGBTQ+ community.

Of course, anyone who has followed Dolly over her nearly 70-year career as a performing artist would quickly realize two things about the musical icon; she likes things big (hair, voice, laugh, other things...) and she is one of the most genuine people on the planet.

As a recording art-

As a recording artist, she's had 25 singles reach the top spot on the Billboard country music chart, tied for the most of any female artist, and she's charted more than 100 singles in her illustrious career. She did most of that with songs that she composed, generously passing off many of those songs to other artists to find success even after she'd made her stamp on them.

She's starred in multiple movies, earning award nominations, owns theme parks and dinner theater venues, and she's arguably one of the most impactful philanthropists alive today.

So where did this controversy start?

Dolly has long been one of the most revered artists by drag performers, with potentially only Cher and Liza Minnelli being in the same realm as far as that community is concerned.

Her unabashed use of makeup, wigs, and plastic surgery to enhance her outward appearance

From the Mound

By: Benjamin Chase

has been an encouragement to many that you can use the tools of the world to improve what you see in the mirror if you're not seeing yourself when you look in the mirror.

More importantly, Dolly loves everyone. Full stop.

She first performed at the Grand Ole Opry at 13 years of age, and immediately bolted for Nashville upon graduating high school. She did, however, end up in a bad record deal that sent her career into multiple wrong turns before joining The Porter Wagoner Show and getting his record company to take her on.

Even then, she struggled with the box that Wagoner attempted to put her into alongside him, rather than letting her express herself.

Her mega-hit, "I Will Always Love You" was written about her feelings toward a person who was stifling her professional success.

Flood washes away Noem's false veneer of leadership Severe weather brought a deluge to southeast South Dakota recently and exposed Gov. Kristi Noem's faults. While the rain fell, she abandoned the state for a political conference and television interview.

When catastrophic

When catastrophic floodwaters surged toward McCook Lake, her cursory appearance there — along with her lackluster crisis communications and departure for an out-of-state political fundraiser — left people without adequate warning about the danger they faced.

danger they faced. And after declining to use the National Guard for the flood preparations or response, Noem said activating the Guard would be "extremely expensive" and asserted troops should only be used in a "very crisis situation." This from a governor who has ordered troops to the Texas-Mexico border three times, and paid for it with money from the state's Emergency and Disaster Fund.

According to Noem, none of that was a mistake, and she led a solid flood mitigation and response effort informed by her experience

"We learn with every flood that happens," she said during a Tuesday press conference.

That's true. And there's a lot to learn about her from this one.

The flooding began with three days of rain June 20-22 in southeast South Dakota, surpassing 17 inches in some locations.

The Big Sioux River swelled to a historic level and swamped several towns while flowing toward the Missouri. That's where McCook Lake and 230 homes around it stood in the bullseye.

Meanwhile, where was Noem? Her official calendar is protected by an egregious exemption in South Dakota's open-records laws. But some details of her travels are known, thanks to journalists such as the Argus Leader's Dominik Dausch, who reviewed social media posts from around the country to fill in the gaps of her whereabouts.

On Saturday, June 22, Noem delivered a speech at a Faith & Freedom Coalition conference in Washington, D.C.

On Sunday morning, June 23, she was on NBC's "Meet the Press," where she jousted with the host about politics and whether she's being vetted as a running mate for Donald Trump.

By that afternoon, Noem was back in South Dakota. She led a press conference with federal, state and local officials in North Sioux City, where she talked about a voluntary evacuation order in Dakota Dunes, the construction of a temporary levee, a closure on Interstate 29, and the status of Missouri River dams.

Nobody at the press conference expressed an urgent safety concern about McCook Lake. When somebody asked what lake residents should do, Noem said they should protect their personal property, "because we do anticipate that they will take in water."

"That's what we're preparing for," she said. "If we don't, then that's wonderful that they don't have an impact, but they could see water flowing into McCook Lake."

Nobody at the press conference clearly explained that the levee under construction was intended to di-

Not exactly what you hear when Dolly (or later Whitney Houston) belts out the memorable, "But above all this/I wish you love," is it?

Many want to point to her dress, her makeup and big hair, or her surgically-enhanced body as a ploy to bring in male fans and/or to attract men on the road. Yet, she's been married for nearly 60 years to Carl Dean, having wed in 1966, when Parton was 20.

While he's never been one to seek the spotlight, those who know Dolly beyond the professional stage rave about their genuine love and support for one another.

experienced poverty, as one of 12 children in her family, with her father working often three jobs just to attempt to support the family farm, which was eventually when Parton was in her teens. Many of the lyrics in her song "Fancy" are autobiographical, discussing how her mother used money to purchase a fancy dress for her to perform in, hoping Dolly could find success and potentially earn income to support the family.

Because of her background, Dolly has always sided with loving people. Not a political position, not a religious position, just genuine love and care for all.

That's led to her starting one of the most impactful literacy programs of any philanthropist, Imagination Library. Children can sign up and receive one new book per month from birth until entering Kindergarten. Through the charity, she has donated more than 100 million

She's avoided entering the political sphere, but she's also not backed away when her partnership with someone has turned controversial. Many recall earlier this year that Parton was one of the first country artists to come out in support of the album that Beyonce made, exploring country music. Of course, Dolly has recorded pop and rock albums in her years, so she certainly was going to encourage an artist exploring other genres and not being confined to any particular "box."

When asked about her faith, she has said that she is Christian at her core, but rather than weaponize her faith, she goes the other direction.

In a 2023 interview, she quipped, "I ain't that good a Christian to think that I am so good that I can judge people. That's God's job, not mine. So as far as politics, I hate politics."

...and frankly, that's not changed in her 78 years on the planet, which is why people adore her in a world that is increasingly divided and finding reasons to differ from one another, Dolly finds reasons to

For what it's worth, Andersen has stepped back from her article, stating, "I regret using Dolly as the example for the point I was making in the article. Dolly is one of the few people who is beloved by all and who loves all. The world is lucky to have

In the midst of the initial controversy, one Twitter/X user posted, "They came for Dolly. We ride at dawn."

Certainly a funny joke, but if someone whose genuine care and love for all can come into question as Dolly has, is there really anyone among us who can claim being truly "good?"

Primary upsets could cause a hard right turn in the Legislature

It has been known for some time that there are two Republican parties in the South Dakota Legislature.

Now one of them is getting bigger.

The Republican primary earlier this month saw 14 legislators defeated. Add to that 21 Republican legislators who chose not to seek reelection or were termlimited in their chamber and did not try to switch chambers, and that's quite a bit of institutional memory that has been shown the door.

The two Republican parties consist of one group of traditional conservatives and another group that's even more conservative and not at all traditional. One group is interested in steering the ship of state while the other would rather run it aground.

The primary election losses by traditional Republicans were due partially to a backlash against carbon pipeline legislation that many of them supported. The legislation calls for counties to be paid for allowing the pipelines access, and includes other new protections for local governments and landowners.

There is an effort now to get that law referred to a vote of the people in November. Detractors fault the bill for the power it gives to the state's Public Utilities Commission. The PUC already had the power to overrule restrictive local pipeline siting laws, but had declined to use it; the legislation makes that power automatic when the PUC issues a pipeline permit, unless the PUC decides to require compliance with local laws.

Crucially for pipeline opponents, the legislation does not ban carbon pipeline companies from using the legal process of eminent domain to obtain access to privately owned land.

Just as pipeline opponents crowded the primary ballot, leading to 44 GOP contests, many of the people who went to the polls in the lightly attended primary were pipeline opponents, too.

There's no telling yet what, exactly, the next Legislature will look like. While the primary set the Republican field, Democrats will get their turn in November. Democrats have done a better than usual job this year of attracting candidates.

However, they are still leaving plenty of legislative openings un-contested. Republicans will get 18 of 35 Senate seats without a fight as well as 36 of 70 House Perhaps this new batch of Republicans will have more on their minds than pipeline legislation. There is a chance that they care about more of the issues facing South Dakota. Maybe, even now, they're busy studying education standards, familiarizing selves with tax policy and looking for inventive ways for the state to take care of the people who can't take care of themselves. Here's hoping they approach their work in Pierre in a statesmanlike, workmanlike manner.

If, however, Shakespeare said, the past is prologue, there's a chance their approach to governance will reflect the work for the ultra-conservatives who have gone before them.

This could include an emphasis on personal freedom and social hot-button issues. If they behave as their predecessors have, we can expect symbolic commemorations designed to split the party

Down in the Trenches

By: Dana Hess

and votes on bills with topics that don't solve problems but are designed to make incumbents vulnerable in the next primary. If this year's primary marked a trend, and more candidates like these ultra-conservatives keep getting elected, we may not recognize our state when they're done with it: • Eminent domain will not be nearly so eminent.

 Vaccinations will go from mandatory to voluntary before they are banned outright. Guns will be free.

• LGBTQ laws will be so strict that grocery stores will no longer be allowed to sell rainbow

Once they figure out a Landowners' Bill of Rights that's more to their liking, these oneissue wonders will discover that they have two-year terms that come with the expectation that they do the hard work of governing

They may think they have a mandate to fix the pipeline laws when they ride into Pierre, but the expectations for all lawmakers are greater than that.

Legislators are supposed to serve the people on all the issues, not just the one that helped get them elected.

rect floodwaters away from North Sioux City through a slough toward McCook Lake, where overflow would hopefully drain toward the Missouri River while causing minimal damage. Granted, it was tough to imagine how thoroughly the lake would be overwhelmed, because nobody's ever seen so much water in the Big Sioux.

But that's precisely why Noem and her advisers should have sounded alarms. She said during the Sunday press conference that the river would reach a record level the following afternoon. She knew an unprecedented situation was unfolding.

Shortly after she finished speaking, forecasters were already predicting an earlier and higher river crest. The water was rising so fast, it went up more than a foot during the press conference.

But Noem wasn't watching the river. She slipped away Sunday evening to Tennessee, where she headlined the Shelby County Republican Party's Lincoln Day Gala in a Hilton billed as the tallest hotel in Memphis. Tickets ranged from $200 to $2,750 for the "legacy circle table."

Back at McCook Lake that night, all hell broke loose. The Big Sioux surged over Interstate 29 and slammed into houses on the lake's north shore. Local authorities scrambled to alert residents, and rescue teams spent the night and the next morning hauling stunned people to safety.

Noem returned to South Dakota for press conferences Monday and Tuesday, where she described the carnage: "We have whole homes that have fallen into the lake. We've got hundred-foot drop-offs from washouts, we've got live power lines laying across the roads, we've got boats stuck in trees, we've got trees that are half-falling over."

"That mitigation plan would've worked in a lesser event," she said, "but there was so much water that flowed through there."

Well, yes, just like she knew it would. She said Sunday afternoon that the Big Sioux would crest at an all-time high, and she knew the excess water would be diverted to McCook Lake. That's why people living around the lake needed the clear and loud warning they didn't receive until it was too late — the kind of warning Noem's predecessor, Gov. Dennis Daugaard, provided be-fore a 2014 flood in the same area when he said, "I am very concerned for residents near Mc-Cook Lake."

As Noem said, there's something to learn from every flood, and the people of McCook Lake learned a painful lesson: Neither hell nor high water will stop Kristi Noem from pursuing her own ambition at the expense of the people she serves.

GLASSER:

When Trump talked, the split screen showed Biden staring, wide-eyed and open-mouthed, in a way that made him look even older.

Biden struggled so much that even several scathing preplanned lines failed to land with any force, as when he brought up Trump's hush-money conviction and said, "You have the morals of an alley cat," or when he fumbled over himself saying that Trump was the first President since Herbert Hoover to lose as many American jobs. Sure, Trump was also rambling and incoherent, but at a much louder decibel level. He looked and sounded healthier; Biden was literally painful to watch.

Within minutes, Democrats were panicking; would they seek to replace Biden at the top of the ticket? And how would that work anyway? Even before the first commercial break, Biden's fortunes tanked in the online prediction markets. On social media, jubilant Republicans were convinced that the election was all but won. Finally, Americans of different political persuasions found something they could agree on. The White House spent the last two years denying that Biden's age was a legitimate subject in this campaign. What will they say after this? Late in the evening, Vice-President Kamala Harris appeared on CNN, where she conceded that Biden had a "slow start," but insisted that she was there to talk about the last three years, not the previous ninety minutes. Oof. She then went on to warn about Trump as a would-be dictator "on Day One" of his Presidency and the continuing threat to women's reproductive freedom.

She was a million times more coherent making the argument for Biden than Biden was himself.

Four years ago, in Cleveland, Ohio, Trump and Biden had a shouting match that made a strong case for the worst Presidential debate ever. On Thursday night in Atlanta, their rematch easily stole that title. Between Trump's lies and Biden's weak performance, it was not even close.

The pre-game theatrics from Trump and his team had relied heavily on the usual cocktail of pre-made excuses and preëmptive attacks: the CNN moderators were biased against him; Biden was going to be pumped full of performance-enhancing drugs; and what about that suspicious tape-to-air delay? In the hours leading up to the debate, Trump complained on social media about Fox News putting a Biden spokesperson on air. As for Biden, well, he "IS A THREAT TO DEMOCRACY, AND TO THE SURVIVAL AND EXISTENCE OF OUR COUN-TRY ITSELF!!!" Such a windup suggested that a rerun of their infamous 2020 debate was coming, with Trump casting himself in the role, once again, of rogue

The difference this time was not, then, because of any suspense surrounding the two well-known principals but in the surround-sound of palpable dread with which the event was suffused. Two angry old men shouting at each other was bad enough four years ago; would this rerun serve merely to underscore the unappealing choice America has in 2024?

In that 2020 debate, Trump had interrupted Biden and the debate's beleaguered moderator, Chris Wallace, constantly a hundred and forty-five times, according to one count. This time, the rules agreed to by both campaigns in advance did not permit it, and CNN installed a kill switch on their microphones. But in the end, Trump did not need to interrupt Biden much; the President was doing all the damage to himself. The only time the two really rode roughshod over the mikes was in an extended dispute toward the end of the debate over their golf handicaps. The wrangling went on so long—with gripes about whether Trump could carry his own golf bag or just how far Biden could hit a drive—that

At the end of a grim night, this might have been the comic relief we all needed. But it did not seem funny so much as very, very sad. Is this how democracy dies, in a shouting match between two seniors about their golf game?

even Trump got tired of it. "Let's not act like children," he said to

There will be much shouting (and not about golf) over the next few days and weeks, as Democrats attempt to sort through the wreckage from this ill-advised debate. History suggests that the winner of a Presidential debate can expect a bounce—a slight one, averaging seven-tenths of a point—in the two weeks afterward. Perhaps that's why both Biden and Trump readily agreed to have one so early in the election cycle, before either man has even been formally nominated by his party: plenty of time to clean up the mess.

But if that assumption was what drove the decision to debate, it looks potentially catastrophic for Biden. The question now is not so much about what kind of bounce Trump might get from Thursday's debate but an even bigger one that we can't quite answer yet: Was this the beginning of the end of the Biden Presidency?

NYC migrant families face uncertain summer

BY PHILIP MARCELO ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP) — When Damien Carchipulla started his first school year in New York City in September, the first grader's family was living in a Manhattan hotel for migrant families.

In the 10 months since, the family of four from Ecuador has moved shelters three times under a policy Mayor Eric Adams imposed in the fall that limits the number of days migrants can stay in a single place. Every 60 days they must give up their shelter beds and reapply for housing or leave the system.

With a fourth move expected in a matter of weeks, Damien's mother Kimberly Carchipulla hopes the family isn't pulled too far from the 6-year-old's school in Harlem this summer. Her son is set to attend a summer program starting in July.

"A lot has changed because new laws were put in place," Carchipulla said in Spanish while picking up Damien after school one day. "They get stressed. They get upset. Every 60 days, it's a new home."

The New York City school year ended Wednesday, but for thousands of migrant families the shuffle from shelter to shelter continues. With it come the concerns about how they'll navigate their children's education needs, both this summer and into the next school year.

"These families were already coming in with a great deal of trauma, which was impacting their children's attendance at school and their ability to engage once they're there," said Sarah Jonas, a vice president at Children's Aid, a nonprofit that provides mentoring, health services and after-school programs at city schools. "With that added burden of the 60-day rule, we've seen even more disruption for our families getting these eviction notices and all of the anxiety that comes with that." Like the Carchipullas, most families chose to stick with the

The tradeoff for many was longer and more complex commutes, leading to children who were exhausted before the school day even started. Absenteeism spiked too, as parents struggled to get their children to school on Carchipulla, who is 23, counts her family among the lucky ones: the three moves they made during the school year were all to other midtown Manhattan hotels, so her son's daily commute remained relatively the same. For the grandchildren of Rosie

Arias, the moves were more dis-The 55-year-old from Ecuaried. The children don't want to go to school. They're not adjusting because of the language and because they don't have friends.," Arias said in Spanish. "They cry."

School officials didn't have a final tally for how many migrant students were affected by the shelter time limits.

As of the first week of May, 44% of migrant students had remained in the same shelter and same school since Feb. 14, according to Tamara Mair, a senior director with Project Open Arms, the district's program supporting asylum seekers and other new students in temporary housing.

Another 40% of migrant students moved shelters but remained enrolled at the same

Harmless asteroid to whiz past Earth Saturday

(AP) — An asteroid will whiz harmlessly past Earth this weekend. With the right equipment and timing, you just might spot it. Called 2024 MK, the space rock will make its closest approach to Earth Saturday morning, passing by at about three-quarters the distance from Earth to the moon. It was first spotted two weeks ago by a South African observatory and is about 393 feet to 853 feet wide. Smaller objects shoot past Earth all the time, according to asteroid expert Davide Farnocchia with NASA's Center for Near-Earth Object Studies. Asteroids the size of this latest one fly by about every 25 years or so.

"We're going to see a few of those during our lifetimes, but it's not something that happens every other day," he said.

A 7,579-foot asteroid flew safely past Earth Thursday, but it was farther away and was only visible to professional telescopes.

For Saturday, skywatchers will need to grab a small telescope since the asteroid isn't bright enough to be seen with the naked eye. And it'll be moving quickly across the southern sky, making it difficult to spot.

"The asteroid will be plowing through that field of stars," said Nick Moskovitz, an astronomer at Lowell Observatory.

Viewers in the Southern Hemisphere will have the best chance of seeing it since the asteroid will appear higher overhead. Those in the U.S. may want to wait until Saturday night, when the asteroid may appear less bright but will be easier to spot without interference from the sun's blinding light.

If you miss out, mark your calendar for April 13, 2029, when an asteroid called Apophis will fly by Earth and will be visible to the naked eye from parts of Europe, Africa and Asia.

NASA astronauts will stay at the space station longer for more troubleshooting

(AP) — Two NASA astronauts will stay longer at the International Space Station as engineers troubleshoot problems on Boeing's new space capsule that cropped up on the trip there.

NASA on Friday did not set a return date until testing on the ground was complete and said the astronauts were safe.

"We're not in any rush to come home," said NASA's commercial crew program manager Steve Stich.

Veteran NASA test pilots Butch Wilmore and Suni Williams blasted off aboard Boeing's Starliner capsule for the orbiting laboratory on June 5. It was the first astronaut launch for Boeing after years of delays and setbacks. The test flight was expected to last a week or so, enough time for Wilmore and Williams to check out the capsule while docked at the station. But problems with the capsule's propulsion system, used to maneuver the spacecraft, prompted NASA and Boeing to delay the flight home several times while they analyzed the trouble.

They also wanted to avoid conflicting with spacewalks by station astronauts. But a spacewalk this week was canceled after water leaked from an astronaut's spacesuit. The issue hasn't been resolved and the planned spacewalk next week was postponed.

JASON WICKERSTY/NATIONAL PARK SERVICE VIA AF

As Starliner closed in on the space station a day after launch, last-minute thruster failures almost derailed the docking. Five of the capsule's 28 thrusters went down during docking; all but one thruster was restarted. Starliner already had one small helium leak when it rocketed into orbit and several more leaks sprung up during the flight. Helium is used to pressurize fuel for the thrusters. Boeing said this week that the two problems aren't a concern for the return trip.

In delaying the astronauts' return, NASA and Boeing said they needed more time to collect information about the thruster trouble and leaks while the capsule was docked. Both are in the service module, a unit attached to the capsule that burns up during reentry.

NASA initially said the Starliner could stay docked at the space station for up to 45 days due to battery limits. But in-flight tests have shown that limit can be extended, Stich said.

Officials said they won't set a return date while they do ground tests of capsule thrusters in the New Mexico desert, which were expected to last a couple of weeks. They want to try to replicate the situation that occurred during

"I want to make it very clear that Butch and Suni are not stranded in space," said Stich, adding that Starliner is designed for a mission of up to 210 days.

Stich said the astronauts could return to Earth in Starliner in the case of a space station emergency.

MIGRANT:

school, while 4% moved both schools and shelters, she said. Roughly 10% left the school system entirely, with the "vast majority" of those dropping out because they left the city.

District officials will be keeping tabs on migrant families in the shelters through the summer, Mair said.

"The one thing we want to remain constant for our kids is school," she said. "But we also want to support our families with their choices, because the families have the right to remain in their school, or they may choose to go to a new school closer to their new residence."

Adams, a Democrat, instituted shelter limits to encourage migrant families to leave the city's emergency shelter system, which includes huge tent shelters and converted hotels that have swollen with thousands of newcomers to the U.S. Over the summer, more needs to be done to prepare newly arriving families for the next school year, immigrant advocates say. That includes better outreach to migrant parents and more investment in translation services, said Liza Schwartzwald, a director at the New York Immigration Coalition.

Schools also need more specialists to assess and help get migrant students up to grade level in their studies, said Natasha Quiroga, director of education policy at the New School's Center for New York City Affairs.

Damien Carchipulla's mother remains optimistic about her son's future. Eventually, she said, the family hopes to save up enough money for their own place, perhaps in Queens, where her husband recently found steady work. "He is learning more and more every day," Kim Carchipulla said of her son. "Even if he misses school, his teacher tells me, he catches up quickly."

NEW YORK — Stocks on Wall Street gave up early gains and finished lower Friday, ending a three-week winning streak for the S&P 500.

A flurry of selling late in the day left the benchmark index 0.4% lower and in the red for the week. The Nasdaq composite fell 0.7%, while the Dow Jones Industrial Average ended 0.1% lower.

Despite the downbeat finish, the S&P 500 and the Nasdaq remain near their all-time highs.

A pullback in big technology stocks, which have been big winners in the market's record-breaking runup, weighed on the market. Apple fell 1.6%, Microsoft lost 1.3% and Meta Platforms ended lower.

The late-afternoon burst of selling may reflect traders taking profits, with the market near all-time highs, or rebalancing their portfolios as the second quarter comes to a close, said Ross Mayfield, investment strategy analyst at Baird.

"It wouldn't surprise me at all if there was some profit-taking today, especially out of the names that have really run up," Mayfield said.

The market headed higher in the early going following a closely watched report that showed inflation continues easing. Investors are hoping that cooling inflation will prompt the Federal Reserve to start cutting interest rates, which remain at their highest level in more than 20 years.

Consumer prices rose 2.6% in May compared with a year ago, according to the latest personal consumption expenditures index, or PCE. That signaled continued easing from a 2.7% reading in April and is sharply lower than the peak reading of 7.1% two years ago.

Sheep producers invited to apply to SDSU Extension Elevate Ewe cohort program

BROOKINGS South Dakota State University Extension is inviting beginning sheep producers to apply to the 2024-2025 Elevate Ewe program.

Elevate Ewe is a year-long cohort program for up to 20 people that combines workshops, webinars, hands-on training, industry tours, networking and mentoring opportunities to educate sheep producers.

It is designed for producers with 10 years or fewer of experience who want to develop or improve their full or part-time sheep operation. If not already involved in sheep production, applicants must show a strong desire to manage a sheep operation in the future.

The cohort will meet from September 2024 through August 2025. Applications are due by Aug. 30, 2024. For full program details and to apply, visit extension.sdstate.edu/ events and search "elevate."

Applicants must be at least 18 years old. Couples and members of the same operation are welcome to apply together. If accepted, registration is $200 per person or $300 per Participants couple.

will also be expected to cover travel and hotel costs for in-person workshops.

Throughout year, participants will have the opportunity to work with sheep, meet experts, and develop a personalized business management plan. Classroom training will be paired with interactive elements, like tours of successful sheep operations and animal, wool, and meat product markets, to expose participants to multiple facets of the industry.

They will also receive one-on-one consultations and site visits to their own operations. Thanks to its mix of educational and hands-on opportunities, Whaley said the course can help producers from all operations, large and small.

"I've seen this program give new producers the opportunity to network, not only with other beginning producers but experienced producers as well, and to gain knowledge from successful individuals," Whaley said.

For more information, contact Jaelyn Whaley, SDSU Extension Sheep Field Specialist, at 605-374-4177 or Jaelyn.Whaley@sdstate.edu.

Harper, Schwarber placed on injured list by the Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies placed All-Star first baseman Bryce Harper and designated hitter Kyle Schwarber on the 10-day injured list after both were hurt in Thursday night's 7-4 loss to Miami.

Harper strained his left hamstring running the bases in the ninth inning, and Schwarber strained his left groin making a throw from left field in the eighth.

"Bummed to go on the IL," Harper said before Friday's game against the Marlins. "Never wanted that to happen, obviously. But it was the best decision for our team. Hopefully get back in the smartest way possible and quickest way as well."

Harper wouldn't specify a timetable for his return, only saying he hopes to be back as soon as possible.

"I really don't like putting timetables on myself," he said. "I'm going to try to get back and get my body intact the best way I can and the best way I know how and quickest way possible. Everybody's bodies are different. I'm going to do my thing to get myself back.

"I don't want to put timelines on anything. I'm

Bensel makes back-to-back holes-in-one at the U.S. Senior Open

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) The next round in Newport is on Frank Bensel — and make it a double.

The 56-year-old club pro from New York made back-to-back holes-in-one at the U.S. Senior Open on Friday — a first in the 1,001-tournament history of the USGA and believed to be the only time it's happened on any major golf tour.

'It was like an outof-body experience," Bensel said before posing for pictures with the ball, 6-iron and pin flags from the fourth and fifth holes at Newport Country Club.

to see a hole-in-one in a tournament is pretty rare," he said. "The first one was great; that got me under par for the day. And then the second one, I just couldn't believe it. To even think that that could happen was amazing."

It was just the second time a golfer has made two holes-in-one in the same round in any USGA event since the inaugural U.S. Amateur was held in Newport in 1895. Donald Bliss aced the eighth and 10th holes in the 1987 U.S. Mid-Amateur at Brook Hollow in Dallas; because he started on the back nine, Bliss made a hole-in-one on his first and his 17th holes of the day. According to the National Hole-in-One Registry, the odds for one player making two aces in the same round are 67 million to 1. Mavericks trading Hardaway to Pistons

(AP) — The Dallas Mavericks are trading Tim Hardaway Jr. and three second-round draft picks to the Detroit Pistons for Quentin Grimes, a person familiar with the deal told The Associated Press.

The person spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity Friday because the exchange of shooting guards can't take effect until after the new league year begins July 6.

Trading Hardaway provides some financial flexibility in free agency for general manager Nico Harrison. The 32-year-old Hardaway is owed $16.2 million next season, while the 24-year-old Grimes is due $4.3 million for the final season of his rookie contract.

Hardaway averaged 14.4 points and 1.8 assists per game in 79 regular-season games for the Mavs this season.

Wimbledon 2024: Djokovic, Murray in the draw after recent operations

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Novak Djokovic and Andy both Murray were placed in the Wimbledon bracket during Friday's draw despite coming off recent opera-

That's no guarantee either 37-year-old past champion at the All England Club will actually compete at the event that begins Monday. But Djokovic, at least, has looked in practice sessions this week as though he is ready to go, less than a month after having surgery for a torn meniscus in his right knee. He has won seven of his men'srecord 24 Grand Slam titles at Wimbledon.

Murray, a two-time trophy winner at the grass-court tournament, made clear on Thursday that he would wait until the last moment to decide whether or not to play and was likelier to do so in doubles where he and his older brother, Jamie, were awarded a wild-card entry — than in singles.

The unseeded Murray's first-round singles match against Tomas Machac of the Czech Republic will be scheduled for Tuesday, giving the Scot an extra day to try to be ready. It was in a match against Machac at the Miami Open in March that Murray tore ligaments in his left ankle, one of a series of injuries he's dealt with in the latter stages of his career. Murray says he plans to retire after, he hopes, participating in Wimbledon and the Paris Olympics, which begin next month.

Djokovic is also slated to begin on Tuesday, going up against qualifier Vit Kopriva of the Czech Republic.

The men's quarterfinals could be No. 1 seed Jannik Sinner vs. No. 5 Daniil Medvedev, and defending champion Carlos Alcaraz vs. No. 8 Casper Ruud on the top half of the bracket, with No. 2 Djokovic vs. No. 7 Hubert Hurkacz, and No. 4 Alexander Zverev vs. No. 6 Andrey Rublev on the bottom half.

That sets up a possible semifinal between Sinner, who is 22, and Alcaraz, 21. They are already developing quite a rivalry; Alcaraz beat Sinner in the semifinals at the French Open this month en route to the title there.

There was a bit of confusion during the women's draw — overseen by new tournament referee Denise Parnell — when several names were placed on the wrong lines and needed to be reshuffled.

Top-seeded Iga Swiatek has never been past the quarterfinals at the All England Club and was given a path that could be filled with past Grand Slam champions.

In the men's bracket, Alcaraz will open his title defense against Mark Lajal, who will be making his Grand Slam main-draw debut after earning a spot through qualifying. Sinner starts against Yannick Hanfmann, who is 0-2 in Slam matches, and could meet 2021 Wimbledon runner-up Matteo Berrettini in the second round.

Drug addiction, violence are tearing family apart

ABIGAIL VANBUREN

Dear

Abby

DEAR ABBY: My elderly father died recently. Although he had a variety of ailments, including heart disease, his death was unexpected. He spent many years of his life trying to save my drug-addicted, criminal sister from herself. Despite occasional periods of sobriety, she has invariably returned to her evil ways.

Three days before Dad passed, he was again trying to bail her out of a situation involving people she knew who stole her car. While Dad was driving her, she lost her temper (again) and struck him multiple times as my mother (on the phone) begged her to stop. Dad died a few days later, perhaps not from the assault, but his body just said, "Enough!" My sister is now sinking her teeth into my mother like she did my dad, and I don't know what to do. I want Mom to cut her out of her life before this happens again, but Mom says, "She's still my daughter." Please advise. -- BET-TER SIBLING IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR BETTER SIBLING: Your sister IS still your mother's daughter as she was her father's. Point out to Mom that in spite of all the years your father spent bailing your sister out, her behavior never improved. Often when we love someone, our instinct is to try to rescue them. Unfortunately, as your sister's addiction problem has proven, that rarely works.

Please find where the chapters of Nar-Anon are located in your vicinity and invite your mother to go with you to some of the meetings. It is a 12-step program for family and friends of addicts. You can find the information at nar-anon. org. If you do, it could save not only your sister's life but also your mother's. DEAR ABBY: I was married for 25 years before

I got divorced. We had three children. I begged my ex to be a better dad, although I knew it probably would not happen. Currently, he has no contact with any of them. He alienated them for different reasons, and his new wife has caused some issues.

Recently, my youngest daughter (who is 36) gave birth for the first time to my new granddaughter. She had a very difficult pregnancy and almost died. Four or five weeks after the delivery, she had a major blood clot in her leg and again almost died.

I think her dad should be notified by letter. However, all of the kids insist they want nothing to do with him. He has my daughters' phone numbers but not my son's, so he could call them. At one time, he stated that HE doesn't have any kids, they are MINE. What do you think? -- LET DOWN IN MINNESOTA

DEAR LET DOWN: I think you should stay out of this! If your ex had wanted anything to do with his children, he would have been present for them. Your children are adults now, and they are able to decide on their own with no help from you how they want to conduct their lives. Frankly, I have a strong hunch that trying to involve their father now would only bring more pain than he has already caused.

to the value of my home is the hood. relative value of other homes in the neighborhood?

ANSWER: Very! It is generally best - in terms of long-term values - if all homes in a given neighborhood are in the same price range. Professional real estate appraisers have this theory on the neighborhood's influence on home prices: a home will tend to go up in value if other homes around it are more expensive. It will

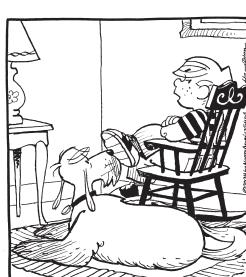

Jim Tharp tend to go down in market value if other homes in the area are in a lower price range. I should also note that this is a good selling point if your home is for sale and is priced below the average for your neighbor-can enjoy. Sourdoughs and friendship breads may go in and out of fashion, but you can make them a staple of your inner circle with recipes that are easier than they appear. Consider this Sourdough Starter, a 7-day process that may seem lengthy at first glance but requires just a few minutes in the kitchen each day. Without breaking the bank, this made-fromscratch solution includes just two ingredients - unbleached flower and warm water - so you can whip up favorites like Plain Sourdough, Everything Loaf, Cinnamon Brown Sugar Loaf and Chocolate Loaf.

Some are tempted to give up on a weeklong recipe, but if you can keep a houseplant alive, you can finish this simple starter and reap its delicious rewards. Find more homemade favorites at Culinary.net.

and brother-in-law gave him.

Bailey also wrote letters and sent pictures of the watch to various museums, the Sagamore Hill historic site and others, asking if they had any information about it.

Last year, shortly before he was set to put the watch up for auction, Bailey got a visit from several people he thought were interested buyers. Then they pulled out their badges and a warrant. It was the FBI coming to investigate the watch and take possession of it, he said.

The federal agents were courteous in asking questions, and he told them the story. He said he was glad that the watch is now where it belongs.

"It was exciting," Bailey said. "I've had a small handful of items that I say 'these are the best things I've ever handled.' I got to hold something that was personally treasured by a prominent American president. ... This was Teddy Roosevelt's watch. This was a Mount Rushmore guy's personal pocket watch."

Shares of Trump Media fall 10% after first presidential debate BY MICHELLE CHAPMAN

AP BUSINESS WRITER

Trump Media fell more than 10% Friday after the first U.S. presidential debate, demonstrating another of the wild swings that have made its stock one of the more volatile on Wall Street.

Shares in the owner of social networking site Truth Social jumped 5% at the opening bell and then sank through much of the day. The shares still finished the week with a gain of over 18%.

President Joe Biden and former President Donald Trump clashed Thursday evening on topics including abortion, immigration and the Jan. 6, 2021 attack on the U.S. Capitol.

Biden's performance largely seen as uneven, particularly early on. He tried repeatedly to confront Trump, who countered Biden's criticism by leaning into falsehoods about the economy, illegal immigration and his role in the Jan. 6 insurrection.

In political futures markets, where investors can put money on the political fates of candidates, Biden's odds of remaining the Democratic party's nominee slid 29% after the debate.

Citi analysts said Friday there may be increased interest in Trump Media & Technology based on news headlines following the debate. Shares of Trump Media & Technology have been buffeted during Trump's run for president and swung wildly a day after

Trump's conviction in his hush money trial.

A New York jury found Trump guilty of falsifying business records in a scheme to illegally influence the 2016 election through hush money payments to a porn actor who said the two had sex. The stock, which trades under the ticker symbol "DJT," has been extraordinarily volatile since its debut in late March, joining the group of meme stocks that are prone to ricochet from highs to lows as small-pocketed investors attempt to catch an upward momentum swing at the right time.

Trump Media reported in May that it lost more than $300 million last quarter, according to its first earnings report as a publicly traded company.
