he Barnwell County Sheriff's Office is lending a helping hand to those struggling with mental health.

On Nov. 7, 2021, the BCSO and community members participated in the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention's Out of the Darkness Walk in Aiken. The BCSO's team, LESSP (Law Enforcement Supports Suicide Prevention), won third place after raising more than $1,100. These funds along with those raised by other teams will support training and research needed to combat suicide.

"By bringing it out into the public eye more, we might be able to help someone and pre-vent something," said Barnwell County Sheriff Steve Griffith.

The BCSO thanks the citizens, organizations, and businesses who contributed to their team.

"This award belongs to each of you and signifies how much our community cares about issues such as suicide. We thank each of you for your generosity towards this event and wanted you to celebrate in what we did together," said 1st Sgt. Eric Kirkland, community relations deputy.

Families in Allendale got a chance to enjoy fresh fruit and vegetables through the cooperation of local and state organizations.

On Thursday, Feb. 10, volunteers with Emma's House and Petals & Stars handed out 320 boxes of food.

The food was purchased from Food Share in Bamberg with a grant awarded to Allendale Enterprise (Emma's House) from the Central Carolina Community Foundation.

February 2022 Barnwell County Fishing Report

William Shipes Fishing Correspondent

Edisto River

February fishing conditions haven't improved much from January. The bite is still tough for most anglers. The river is still high, and the water is cold and flowing fast.

You can expect the bite to be sporadic and tough for the rest of February but should improve in March. You will still find that most species of fish will be found in the deeper still eddies of the river. You will need to be willing to present baits as slowly as possible to them to entice a bite. Something I've found lately is throwing a Texas-rigged worm but adding a small spinner blade to the tail of the worm. It can be fished slowly but still has the spin and flash that river fish love.

Savannah River

Fishing on the Savannah River still appears slow but should begin heating up fast next month. You may be able to find fish in transition towards the end of this month as they move up towards deep creek mouths to feed. They are feeding up heavy for the ensuing spawn but can still prove difficult to catch most times.

I still encourage using a flat-sided shad colored crankbait and jerkbaits. These lurks will mimic the baitfish that the bass are feeding on. If you do get a bite from a fish don't be afraid to stick around that area as this is the time of year that the fish tend to group up in certain areas. If you find a fish, its almost guaranteed that there are more fish in its general proximity. Sometimes they will bite on the next cast while other times you have to slow down and finesse them with a different tactic like a shakeyhead worm. You can't go wrong with a green-pumpkin trickworm on a shakeyhead anytime of year.

Lake Edgar Brown

Lake Edgar Brown is still producing quality bites this month for those anglers brave end fish will begin tranenough to endure the sitioning to shallower

Barnwell Country resident Tres Rimes caught these saltwater fish on a recent trip off the South Carolina coast. He caught them fishing 90 feet deep on squid.

Lures from January are continuing to be successful as the bait continue to target schools of shad around the lake. As the month nears its crazy weather and cold. areas of the lake to begin setting up for the spawn. Lake Brown's upper section is known for its shallowness and mix of tree stumps and brush. If the jerkbait and Alabama rig bite slows in the deeper water don't be afraid to venture to the shallower areas of the lake and try a square bill crankbait or even a rattletrap around the stumps.

> Red is a very popular colored rattletrap in the

to be very effective in a second, when it falls in Lake Brown.

Featured Bait

This month's featured bait is the rattletrap. There are now many different types of rattletraps or lipless crankbaits available on the market.

It seems that every brand now has it own version, but I am still particularly partial to the original Bill Lewis Rattletrap. Its design and array of rattles provides great castability and plenty of fish catching noise as it is worked through the water column.

While a seemingly simple bait, this bait can be notoriously hard to work. Most people just cast it out and reel it back in, and while you can get bit on it that way, if you employ some different techniques you can usually improve your success. The location you are fishing the lure can help determine the best way to work it back to the boat.

If I am fishing it in a grassy area I usu-ally like to work it back to the boat in pumps. Meaning I start with the rod horizontal and pointed at the lure af-ter the cast them pump the rod up vertically to cause the lure to jump to late winter and early its next location. Then I spring, and it can prove let it rest in the grass for getting bites from giants then I pump the rod up again. Doing this will not only generate a reaction strike from bass, it will generally help clear any residual grass from the lures treble hooks on each pump.

The other style location I'll fish with it will be around stumps and rocks. If I'm fishing in a location like this I'll slow reel the lure to the boat, grinding it against the bottom until I hit a rock or stump. When I feel the lure coming up to or hitting an obstruction I'll be sure to give the line a slight pop to pop the lure over or around the obstruction. This pop will generally cause a reaction strike from any bass sitting in the vicinity of the obstruction. The only time I generally cast the rattletrap out and burn it back to the boat with a straight retrieve is when I see fish schooling and chasing shad. In this instance your rattletrap will look like an enticing fleeing shad.

I typically stick with two color patterns depending on what I'm trying to mimic or what the fish appear to be eating. I usually fish either a red crawfish or a shad colored pattern.

Good luck trying it out this spring!

HOMEMAKER'S COLUMN: FOOD SAFETY DURING A POWER OUTAGE

 Christine
 Storms and heavy winds can arise and create perfect conditions for power outages. Losing power is a hassle and one of the things we need to immediately consider is the safety of stored food.

One of the fundamentals of food safety is temperature. For many perishable foods, freezing and refrigeration prolong the length of time that they will retain acceptable quality and safety. We rely on our refrigerators and freezers for safe storage and when power is lost, we are reminded of how much we depend on them.

When power outages occur it is best to have a food safety plan in place. Being proactive can help you reduce waste and give you confidence when deciding whether foods are safe to eat. An appliance thermometer in your refrigerator and freezer is a great way to be sure that foods remain at safe temperatures. Keep it in the refrigerator and freezer at all times to verify that food is being stored at safe temperatures (34°F to 40 °F for the refrigerator; 0 °F or below for the freezer). Fill freezer bags with ice packs or purchase freezerpack inserts. Have coolers available and easily accessible; Styrofoam ones work great. Have a calibrated food thermometer for checking the temperature of your potentially hazardous food. Before an emergency occurs, find out where to buy blocks of ice or dry ice and turn refrigerators and freezers to the coldest settings.

When the power goes out, unplug the freezer, refrigerator, and other appliances to protect them from power surges when the power returns. Make sure everyone in your household knows not to open the refrigerator or freezer doors. Keeping the doors closed will keep the food cold for a longer time. Wrap the refrigerator or freezer in blankets to create extra insulation. Make sure blankets don't touch the compressor. If power possibly will be off for more than 2 to 4 hours, re-pack refrigerated items into coolers with plenty of ice.

Depending on the size of the freezer, how full it is, and how well insulated it is, items in it potentially can stay frozen for 2 to 4 days. A full freezer (operating at 0 °F) will keep foods frozen for about 48 hours if the doors are closed. A half-full freezer can only be expected to keep food frozen for a maximum of 24 hours. For extended power outages use blocks of dry ice in the freezer. A fifty-pound block of dry ice will keep the contents of a full 18 cubic foot freezer frozen for 2 days. Remember to wear gloves or use tongs when handling dry ice. Wrap the ice in brown paper for longer storage, and separate it with a piece of cardboard from direct food contact. If the freezer is partially empty, fill it with crumpled newspaper to cut down on air currents, which cause the dry ice to dissipate. When power returns, check the internal temperature of all perishable foods with a calibrated food thermometer. Discard any perishable food that has been above 40 °F for 2 hours or more and any food with an unusual odor, color, or texture. Refrigerated food should be safe as long as the power is out no more than four to six hours. If the power will be off for more than six hours, transfer refrigerated perishable foods to an insulated cooler filled with ice or frozen gel packs. Keep a thermometer in the cooler to be sure the food stays at 40°F or below. Some foods may look and smell fine. However, if they have been at room temperature longer than two hours, bacteria that cause foodborne illness can begin to multiply very rapidly. Some bacteria produce toxins that are not destroyed by cooking and can cause illness. For more detailed information on food safety during a power outage visit Clemson Home and Garden Information website at http://hgic.clemson.edu and search for HGIC 3760, Food Safety in Power Outages and HGIC 3780, Food Safety in Freezer Failure, HGIC 3800 Food Safety in Hurricanes & Floods, HGIC 3820 Food Safety After a Tornado, and HGIC 3840 Food Safety after a Fire

Natural Affections Winter's Thaw

Donna-Maria Conzalina Columnist

"....Lebruary we notice the beginning of thaw.

With each day that passes our hearts warm a bit more.

Woolen coats, gloves and hats, now part of a winter past.

February you'll be taking Northern winds with you alas..."

And here we are, already waking up to February days. The second month of this new year, akin to the second verse from the 1993 referenced poem above that I composed and introduced you to last month, "A Year of Hope". For those of you following this column, you'll notice each month for the remainder of this year I'll continue to focus on that inspiration.

So, yes February, a month that reminds us, our hearts naturally seek the warmth of companionship. Like winter's thaw revealing what lies beneath the frozen surface; we'll find some folks blessed with lasting, loving relationships like a perennial garden, never faint to flourish. What a treasure to have such a mate by your side. Someone you can count on, someone who's love and faithfulness only grows stronger as the years go by, Me? Well, comparatively I was planted amongst a garden of annuals in love's field of dreams. Marriages and infatuations that seed, root up, blossom for a season then before you know it, become a colorful memory. Canine companionship on the other hand proved to be, as its reputation implies, the most faithful, one on one relationship this gaks heart has known.

Last liebruary for example marked a year and a half since I bid farewell to the Shepherd mix who'd been by my side for more than a decade. Protecting and entertaining me as the two of us remote gypsies traveled through life, searching for where we belonged. He was my beautiful sidekick. Blaze. A guardian sent to me by The Lord. But in the end, a brain tumor changed his protective demeanor to an unpredictable threat. And so, with the most broken of broken hearts, I gave him back to Heaven. where he once again belonged. 'It's you, me and Jesus' I used to tell him. And I trust it's so, True Love never leaves or forsakes us. If you can relate, you likewise may understand when my heart declared, letting another take his place wasn't going to happen.

But, God had different plans for my life. As previously mentioned, February was a year and half since Blaze and I were together. During that time I relocated across the state. By the Grace of God I purchased an old farmhouse that my daughter appropriately named The Gypsy Ranch because I finally found a place to settle down. As I walked along the property last February with a dear friend, I told her, I suddenly had a strong sense The Lord was going to bring me a new pet. She agreeably said, "If He wants to, He will." Not five minutes later a muddy, skinny, flea covered, forgotten hound dog with ears swollen from infection stood in the road in front of my house. I called out, 'be careful, buddy.' With that, he ran swiftly to greet me and never left my side from that moment on. I called him, Mo'sArt, and that's another story for another time, but the vet told me he was about a year and half old. Meaning, God gave him life the same time He called Blaze back to Heaven. People said he'd been wandering the streets within a 20 mile radius for over a month beforehand. Online pictures showed he even escaped from a shelter to find The Gypsy Ranch. When he saw me, it was as if he said, "There you are!" So, of course I took him in, cared for him, and fell in love again. He had serious health issues however and his life with me only lasted a couple of months. But during that time, he knew he was worthy of being loved along with the best of them. And yes, again, my heart broke to let go, but, I'd do it again just for him to feel loved.

That brings us to this February as 1 wandered the flea market with a friend. Someone offered me a 6 week old puppy. I hesitated. Her breed and trademark behaviors made her a bigger responsibility than I felt comfortable raising. But my friend and the intoxication of puppy breath weakened my defenses and reluctantly I brought her home.

I kept getting a Holy Spirit nudge to call another friend about rehoming the puppy though. Dreamer, the Spotted Bear dog as I called her, was precious. She had a serious case of worms so I took her to the vet which inclined me to get even more attached. Still, at just six weeks she was already able to outrun me. Realistically I knew my budget wouldn't allow for the additional fencing she'd require. Alas, I acted on the promptings and called this particular friend. She was excited. Told me a friend of hers with 25 country acres was looking for such a puppy!

Well, that's how recent February's thawed and warmed my heart and you won't hear a complaint from me. Love's not always what we think it will be, but it's always beautiful in it's own way. I hope you're likewise finding the warmth of love in your days, dear reader. Blessings, In Joy.

About the sorority - Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Incorporated was organized on November 12, 1922, in Indianapolis, Indiana, by seven young educators: Mary Lou Allison Gardner Little, Dorothy Hanley Whiteside, Vivian White Marbury, Nannie Mae Gahn Johnson, Hattie Mae Annette Dulin Redford, Bessie Mae Downey Rhoades Martin, and Cubena Mc-Clure. From these seven young educators, Sigma Gamma Rho has become an international service organization comprised of women from every profession. Sigma Gamma Rho offers its members opportunities to develop their unique talents through leadership training and involvement in sorority activities. Sorority activities provide an atmosphere where friendships and professional contacts are developed which often lead to bonds that last a lifetime. Soaring To Greater Heights of Attainment Around the World, Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority, Incorporated, is a leading national service organization that has met the challenges of the day and continues to grow through Sisterhood, Scholarship, and Service. This year the sorority celebrates its Centennial (1922-2022), one hundred years of providing community service.

crisis, she unfortunately took her own life," said Kirkland. "I hope we will continue our stringent effort to do everything we can to promote suicide prevention."

Former Barnwell resident Tim Britt was a friend and co-worker of Polly Best.

"She had a real love and compassion for her community and the children she worked with," said Britt.

Best was always "bubbling with enthusiasm" and straightforward about how she felt. However, on the day she died, Best did not seem her normal self.

"You never know what's on a person's heart. You never know what's going on," said Britt.

While he remains somewhat haunted by her death and wonders if there was something he could have done to help her, Britt said it has helped him.

'It's made me always try to be more aware of the needs and feelings of others around me," said Britt. "Mental health is important."

Britt also said it's important to take the proper attitude toward mental health, including not looking at it as a weakness or curse.

"We need to be compassionate and caring. That's what she was about," he said.

Providing the necessary mental health services is also a vital component. That's why the Polly Best Center is so important, said Britt.

Deputy Carlisle Filyaw with the BCSO said law enforcement officers see the hurt caused by suicide, particularly among the loved ones left behind. He said everyone has struggles in life and that it's okay to seek help Sheriff Griffith said his agency is committed to working with the Polly Best Center and other partners to provide help to those in need. This includes regular meetings on the topic of mental health and holding a suicide prevention walk in Barnwell County one day.

"We all have hearts and a passion to help those struggling. It takes many to help," said Jeremy

YOU'RE INVITED Rita Rhodus to celebrate 90th birthday

Bill and Rita Rhodus, and their family, was a staple presence in Williston for over 50 years, as many of you remember. Though they moved away 9 years ago, Rita still has many friends that she misses dearly and would like to see again.

To make that possible, the family plans to have a 90th birthday drop-in on March 12, 2022, from 2 until 4 p.m. at Williston First Baptist Church (CAB Building). She would love for you to drop by for a visit and enjoy some cake and punch with her.

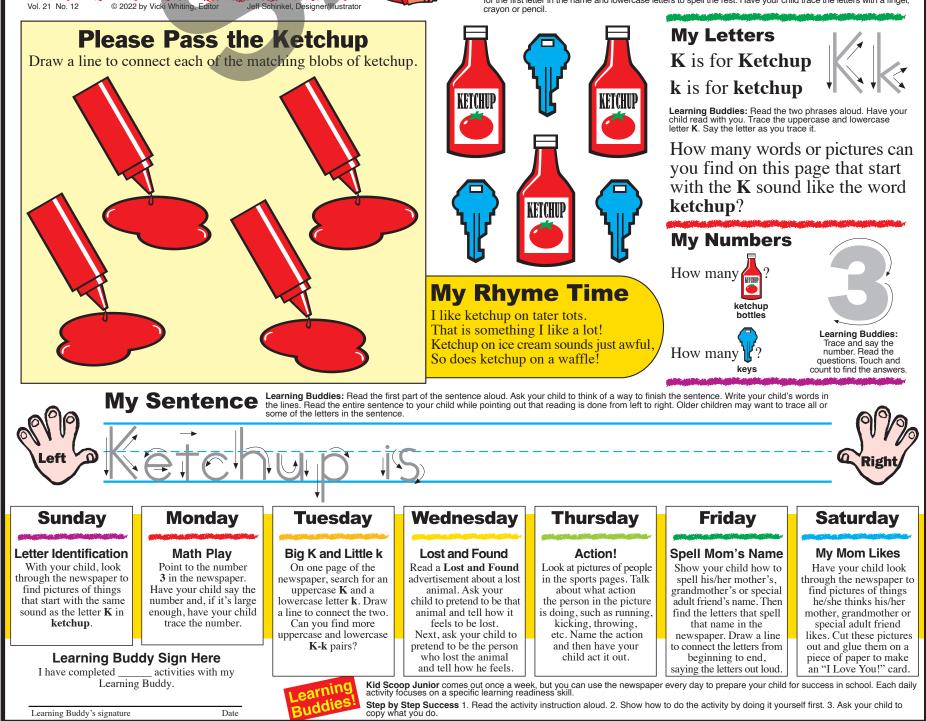

Rita requests no gifts, please. The time you spend with her is the most precious gift you can give.

Please mark your calendar for this special day. We look forward to seeing you there.

lived in Barnwell County since 1760.

Margaret attended the University of South Carolina where she met her future husband and biology partner, Harry E. Shealy Jr. In 1972 she earned a BA degree in English with minors in Philosophy and Spanish. She also worked towards a master's degree at Augusta State University in the late 1990s where she was given a teaching assistantship.

During her teaching career that spanned 40 years, Margaret was a beloved educator who taught thousands of students and shaped many lives. Her subjects included earth and life science, English grammar and composition, literature, Spanish, and history. Of special interest are the years she spent teaching the Irish Travelers of Murphy Village making many friends in this unique culture. She also worked as alumni director, fundraiser, and librarian in private education. She has been a member of Saint Thaddeus Episcopal Church for over forty years where she served on the Saint Thaddeus Home and Garden Tour, Care Team, Altar Flowers Committee, Wedding Committee, Tea Under the Trees Committee, and as a Sunday School teacher. Saint Thaddeus has always been a great source of close friendships and family support for both Margaret and Harry throughout the years.

Margaret was an active member of the Aiken community for many years having been a member of the American Association of University Women, the Cancer Society, Sand River Women's Club, Aiken County Museum board secretary, Aiken Historic Society secretary, Aiken Land Conservancy Executive Board, Henry Middleton Chapter of the DAR as conservation and U.S. Constitution chairman, Garden Club of Aiken (a member of the Garden club of America) as events chairman, secretary, historian, vice-president, president, and conservation chairman. One of her favorite organizations was The Student Club of Aiken where she held every office, and which inspired her with intellectual stimulation.

Margaret lived her life with true passion for family, learning, laughing, entertaining, and building and nurturing her many friendships. Her life mantra has always been, "Stay on the target!"

Her beautiful spirit will live on with all who were fortunate enough to have known her.

Margaret is survived by her husband of 56 years, Harry E. Shealy Jr.; her two children (Margaret Elizabeth Shealy and John Calvert Shealy); along with two grandchildren (Jack and James Garrick).

In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the Garden Club of Aiken (217 Whistling Straits Lane, Aiken, S.C. 29803) for a native plant garden.

Visitation was from 5 to 7 p.m. on Friday, February 18, 2022, at George Funeral Home. The funeral service was held on Saturday, February 19, 2022, at 2 p.m. at Saint Thaddeus Episcopal Church followed by a reception afterwards at the parish hall. Barnwell County Museum honors local African-Americans

In observance of Black History Month, the Barnwell County Museum (617 Hagood Avenue, Barnwell) has several displays in remembrance and honor of local African-Americans.

In the military room, one of the showcases displays the service of Sgt. George Buggs, a Barnwell native who gave his life in service for his country, along with a display on four local brothers who entered separate branches of the service.

Throughout, the museum has displayed other local African-Americans who have served their country. Another display highlights the first three police officers at the Barnwell Police Department while one more is about the ironwork of Willie White Williams.

The museum is open from 12 to 4 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesday, and Thursdays.

BOOMER BRIEFING Are pet trusts a good option?

Q. Are pet trusts allowed in S.C.? If so, what can you tell me about them.

A. With all the purring, tailwagging-welcomes, companionship, play, love, protection and related health benefits pets provide to their owners is it any surprise we want to ensure Mittens and Fido are cared for after one's admission to a nursing home or an owner's death. Some studies have shown up to 50% of Americans now provide, in some way, for a pet in their will.

In 2016 Minnesota became the 50th state to allow pet trusts. Just over a decade ago only four states allowed them. There are several kinds of pet trusts, but if you are leaving money you need to be aware that in South Carolina you can't leave money and assets directly to the pet.

In December 2011, 94-year-old Italian heiress Maria Assunta, who had no living relatives, left her entire estate (valued at over $13 million) to "Tomasso", a 4-year-old black cat she found wandering in the streets of Rome. Assunta named her nurse Stefania as trustee for Tomasso in her will, and the cat reportedly became the third richest animal on the planet – behind a chimp and a German shepherd. In 2007 real estate tycoon Leona Helmsley left $12 million of her multi-billion dollar estate to her pet, a dog named Trouble, and expressly excluded her grandchildren in her will. Woman's Day magazine once reported that Oprah Winfrey will leave $30 million for the benefit of her pets, which at the time included five dogs.

As a result of these and similar stories, some have come to consider pet trusts as planning tools for the ultra rich or eccentric, but many rational people of modest means love animals and consider their pets part of the family.

An open or prearranged adoption by a family member or friend with a modest stipend in a will to the new caregiver is an inexpensive alternative to an actual pet trust.

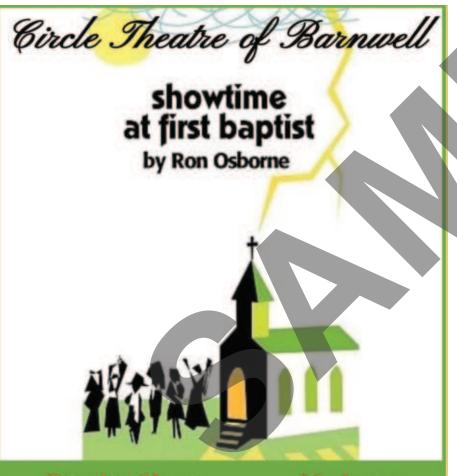

Pet trusts are fairly traditional in structure, with a designated human or corporate trustee and possibly a trust protector that ensures the animal actually receives the intended benefits. The trust may be testamentary which means they Attorney at Law can be created in a will or inter vivos while the settlor, the one who creates and contributes property or funding to the trust, is still alive. The latter may be part of or an amendment to an existing revocable or living trust. Under S.C. law the pet must be clearly identified and be alive or in gestation at the time the trust is created, but an additional animal may be added to a trust if done so prior to the settlor's death. A pet trust terminates on the death of the animal or last surviving animal. Before meeting with your lawyer you should determine your pet's standard of living - exercise and nutritional needs, veterinary checkups schedule and shots, etc. and estimate the cash and/or assets needed to cover these expenses for a typical life span of your pet. You may also want to decide how the body of your pet will be handled at the time of passing – cremation, burial, a pet cemetery, etc. You should choose a beneficiary to receive any remaining funds that are not used up by the pet trust.

You may also want to consider making a generous contribution to a local animal welfare project in your will. In 2011 Daniel J. Garr, an urban planner and Professor at San Jose State University left $50,000 to Project Purr, an all-volunteer feral cat advocacy organization, to fund the neutering of cats. There are wonderful South Carolina non-profit organizations that provide animal rescue, medical care, no kill shelters, feeding, spay and neutering, adoption, pet care education and other services to domestic animals. These programs often rely exclusively on donations and volunteers. Some organizations operate second-hand shops where your gently used household goods and clothing can help abandoned or abused pets. Household items, furniture, art work, jewelry, other personal property, monies, and stocks can be left expressly to an animal charity in a will or trust.

CORDER'S BOOK CORNER The wonder of 'The Lord of the Rings'

Discussion of books and all things literacy from writer, reader, and teacher, David B. Corder.

ast week was my Jbirthday, and to celebrate, I decided to host a Lord of the Rings marathon. I got out the chairs, invited my nerd friends, and put out a spread of junk food that every hobbit in the Shire would have been proud of. And for nine hours, my friends and I entered the cinematic version of J.R.R. Tolkien's world, experiencing its adventure, its majesty, and its magic.

Nothing else has quite had the impact on my life that The Lord of the Rings has had. From seeing the films when I was thirteen years old to reading the books in high school and throughout college, Tolkien's imagination has left a large impact on me that other fantasy books have not.

Compared to other fantasy literature, whether it be Harry Potter, The Forgotten Realms, or Eragon, there is something profoundly wholesome and good about The Lord of the Rings. It possesses a purity that I have not come across in any other piece of modern literature. Not to say that other works are not good and wholesome, but Tolk-ien's work is in a league of its own. Tolkien is like a shaft of light piercing a dark canopy of clouds. His work is filled with strife, but there is a profound hope in the books and films that I have seldom found elsewhere.

David B. Corder loves getting lost in a good book.

I let students check out discussing the lore of the my books to read. One of them checked out The Hobbit and returned wanting more of Bilbo and the magic Ring. So, I showed her The Fellowship of the Ring. And now she's hooked. Almost every day when I walk into the cafeteria, I'll see her poring over the copy she checked out, the same copy that my parents gave to me for Christmas nearly ten years ago, with yellowed pages and highlighted passages. She begs for independent reading time in class so that she can spend more time in Middle-Earth, and every day check on how far she has made it in the book. We discuss the events, the chapters, the story. It is an awesome joy.

And I love sharing this movies this past week hope. In my classroom, with my friends, and story, I have decided to reread the books. Stephen King once said life is too short to reread books. I partly agree with him, but The Lord of the Rings is an exception. It is a story that demands to be experienced again and again because so many of the truths of the goodness of life and God are recorded within its pages. If you have never read Tolkien's masterpiece, I encourage you to give it a go (do skip the opening pages on hobbits and go straight to chapter one; the prologue is quite dense). I can guarantee you that you will never come across another book like it, and the change it may have on you can very well be invaluable.

Raising Awareness of Parkinson's Non-Motor Symptoms Via Storytelling

(StatePoint) With the help of an Airstream trailer traveling the country, people with Parkinson's disease will soon have a unique opportunity to record and share their experiences and personal stories as part of a program called "Yours, Truly " Nonmotor symptoms associated with Parkinson's disease, as a whole, can be more troublesome than motor symptoms, in terms of quality of life. The stigma around these symptoms may also create challenges. As a recent survey shows, caregivers to those living with Parkinson's disease psychosis are hesitant to discuss Parkinson's non-motor symptoms involving psychosis with physicians in the presence of patients so as not to embarrass them. "Patients and caregivers are reluctant to talk about non motor symptoms out of concern for their loved ones," said Leilani Pearl, senior vice president of communications at the Parkinson's Foundation. "Having a place to hear and share the unique experiences. of others living with Parkinson's will increase awareness of symptoms and may help others. get the care they need." "Parkinson's disease affects about 1 million people in the United States, which may present with both motor and non-motor symptoms. Around half of the people living with Parkinson's disease may develop hallucinations or delusions over the course of their disease, but the majority of people don't proactively tell their physicians about these symptoms. That's why I believe it's so important to share experiences across languages and cultures," said Dr. Cus Alva, assistant professor at University of California, Riverside Medical School, Department of Neuroscience.

The storytelling campaign is in collaboration with StoryCorps, a non-profit organization whose mission is to "preserve and share humanity's stories in order to build connections between people and create a more just and compassionate world. Sponsored by Acadia Pharma couticals Inc., "Yours, Truly" invites people with Parkinson's disease and their care partners to record interviews about their lives and preserve their story in StoryCorps' national archive. Signs and symptoms of Parkinson's disease can vary, with people experiencing both motor symptoms (such as slowness of movement, resting tremers, limb stiffness and trouble with balance) and non-motor symptoms (such as constipal tion, impaired bladder control, anxiety and depression, loss of mental sharpness/acuity, hallucinations and delusions). When people living with Parkinson's disease experience hallucina tions and/or delusions related to their condition, it is known as Parkinson's disease psychosis. A hallucination is a perception like experience that occurs without an external stimulus and is seen, heard, feit, tasted or smelled. A delusion is a false, fixed belief despite evidence to the contrary. To share or view a story, access educational resources in English or Spanish, or to find out where you can visit the StoryCorps. airstream, visit www.Yours Iru lyPDP.com. Already, several Parkinson's families have shared their stories and added their voices to StoryCorps' national archive.
