Never Stop Learning

Don't allow graduation to be the end of your learning experience.

Your professional career can benefit from staying updated on trends, and continuing education can help you progress through the field.

Lifelong learning also can encourage you to take a different career path that didn't seem plausible when you first chose your major.

In addition to helping you professionally, did you know that challenging yourself with new lessons can even have health advantages? According to the Learning Resources Network (LERN), lifelong learning offers these incredible benefits.

COMMUNITY AND SOCIETY BENEFITS

When you commit to learning new skills or lessons, the quality of your local community can be beneficially impacted. LERN states that those who are involved in lifelong learning are 20% more inclined to support vital community organizations like parks, public schools and higher education.

Try to share your desire to learn by volunteering with non-profits in your area. You can share the message of continued learning in programs like Big Brother Big Sisters of America to inspire youth.

IMPROVES SELF-MOTIVATION

Since lifelong learning is a choice, there is no pressure from professors or teachers to educate you about life's lessons. Because of this, you are required to show intense self-motivation to find the inspiration to research a new topic or challenge.

As your motivation improves, it may promote a surge in your drive to achieve goals, feel fulfilled and improve your overall quality of life.

CHANGES LIVES

When you decide to learn about challenges others face, you can create strategies to change the way you view their struggles. For instance, LERN shows numerous moms and dads reported that their autistic children change almost immediately after the parent takes a class on autism.

Consider someone in your life who suffers from a disability or disease and seek education to learn how you can help them manage.

Lifelong learning enables you to view a sensitive situation with a different problem-solving perspective.

Graduation Advice

As you prepare to make your final walk in your academic career, the unfamiliar future may seem terrifying.

Rather than worry about what lies ahead, think of your graduation as a symbol of your hard work and efforts to accomplish a momentous goal. To help ease your mind, check out these quotes from professionals of Bentley University about what they wish they had known before their own graduation.

“I wish I had known that I was going to make mistakes and it would be OK; that learning from those mistakes would benefit me greatly down the road.”

— Barbara Stevens, head coach, women’s basketball

“I wish I had known how much you could do, and how much anxiety you could avoid, just by adhering to a work schedule that allows you to devote the most productive hours of the day to creative work — and leave everything else for the less productive hours.”

— Chris Beneke, associate professor of history

“Don’t limit yourself to potential job opportunities in just what you studied. Problem-solving, being innovative and mapping your skills to how you bring value to an organization is as important (if not more) than the discipline you studied.”

— Peter Rodrigues, ’80

“I wish I had paid more attention to the things in life that really made my heart sing, instead of things that other people told me should make me happy. Each of us has our own sources of joy, and nobody else’s idea of happiness is going to fill us up.”

— Leigh Gaspar, executive director, advancement relations

“Keep your student loan payments in mind when accepting a salary.”

— Elliot Knight ’13, MBA ’14

“When I graduated, I had every detail of what my career should be in my head. Had I embraced a broader perspective and allowed new ideas and opportunities to flourish, I may have advanced my early career faster.”

—David Schiegoleit, ’93

“I wish I had known that it would all be OK in the end — that I didn’t have to know everything or have it all together before I graduated; that just because it wasn’t exactly how I envisioned, my future would still be successful and I would be happy.”

— Nina DeAgrela, assistant director, Multicultural Center
