Supreme Court shuttered courthouses in all 77 counties

John D. Montgomery
The Purcell Register

In an effort to help lessen the spread of COVID-19, the Supreme Court of Oklahoma has essentially closed courthouses in all 77 counties.

"We admonish all Oklahoma judges, court clerks, court employees and staff and the public to follow the guidelines to protect public health set for in the Governor's Executive Orders, those issued by the Oklahoma Department of Health and the CDC," the order from the court said in part.

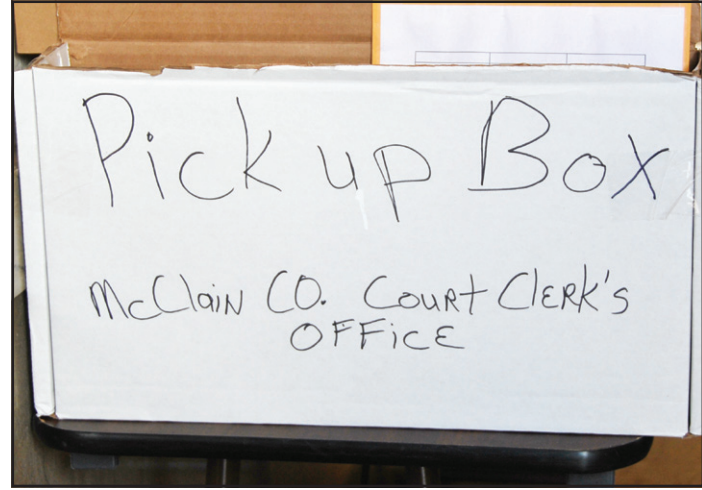

All jury terms have been cancelled through May 15.

Exceptions include emergency dockets, though no more than 10 people can be in the courtroom at once.

This order also shuts down marriage licenses and other non-emergency business.

No additional jurors may be summoned without approval of the Chief Justice.

The order continued saying all civil, criminal and juvenile trials will be continued to the next available

The statute of limitations will be extended through May 15.

The order states that court clerks and judges will use email, fax, or drop boxes to accept written materials.

"Our office is closed to the public except for emergencies," said McClain County Court Clerk Kristel Gray.

They are working four staffers at a time and trading days.

"If it's an emergency like a protective order or a custody order they are allowed to happen. Otherwise, we're closed," she said.

The three McClain County Judges, Leah Edwards, Charles Gray and Lee Shilling are trading off days as well.

According to District Judge Leah Edwards, Shilling will be in the courthouse a minimum of every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon.

She was in McClain County this past Tuesday.

Court clerks and judges will be using email, fax and drop boxes for acceptance of written materials, except for emergencies.

"Pursuant to the Supreme Court Emergency Order and Governor Stitt's Executive Order, the officials and staff of the District Court of McClain County will be working remotely when possible," Judge Edwards said.

"The court will continue to ensure that any emergency matters are heard and all arrestees' bonds are set in a timely manner.

"The court continues to work toward balancing the rights of all litigants while preserving public health of the community," she continued.

"Anyone needing assistance regarding a case set before me or Judge Shilling is urged to call their offices or email their bailiff at Su-

Purcell Superintendent Dr. Sheli McAdoo has announced the school's state mandated Distance Learning Plan.

The Oklahoma State Department of Education ordered districts to come up with plans to educate students away from classrooms at their March 25 special meeting.

Purcell's plan may be found on the school's website at www.purcellps.org.

Hospital financing

City manager clarifies funding

Jeanne Grimes
The Purcell Register

Bond markets are rebounding and the financing for Purcell's new hospital remains on track even with an anticipated dip in sales tax revenue, city manager Dale Bunn said Tuesday.

Bunn clarified an article in The Purcell Register last week which stated the financing was on hold.

"Say it takes a one-third dip, we still have coverage on it," Bunn said.

The city manager said financial advisor Ben Oglesby told him last week that he expected the bond market to "settle down" within a week or two.

Instead it was days.

Bunn said investors look to the bond market when the stock market drops.

While bonds aren't the money makers as many stocks are, investors are drawn to them because bonds are Bill Mounger, left, and his mother, Nonie Humeston, show the masks they are making for OU Medical Center at Blessings by Design in downtown Purcell. Also helping with the mask project is Mounger's wife, Chris. Non-essential businesses ordered to close and medical professionals scrambling for personal protective equipment in the midst of a pandemic are an all too familiar grim scenario these days.

Yet for the owners of one Purcell business, it was exactly that scenario that compelled them to act on an unexpected opportunity.

Nonie Humeston, together with her son and daughter-in-law, Bill and Chris Mounger, own Blessings by Design at 125 W. Main St.

Finding themselves with time on their hands, the three looked about for a way to put their fabrics and knowledge to good use.

They had to look no further than Mounger's daughter, Lindsey Abbott, a nurse at OU Medical Center.

Could the center's doctors and nurses use masks?

Abbott relayed the offer to a physician who gladly accepted it and sent specifications.

Those specifications are a little more involved than cutting out a square of fabric and attaching two elastic ear loops.

"It's not as easy as it sounds," Humeston said.

It takes about 30 minutes to make each mask.

"This is nothing like we ordinarily do," she continued. Humeston is a quilter and her son has a strong background in fabrics.

She said Monday that they've made "30 or so" of the double layer masks.

The custom masks feature a pocket on the back side so the medical staff at the hospital can insert the appropriate

OSU AGRICULTURAL News

Census participation urged during coronavirus response

Brian Brus
Agriculture Communications

Disruptions and distractions caused by the COVID-19 pandemic must not be allowed to keep Oklahomans from participating in the Census, officials said.

"There's too much at stake for the entire decade ahead of us," said Larry Sanders, Oklahoma State University Extension agricultural economist. "The situation seems to be changing daily, as we see libraries close and Extension offices move their services online, places where people typically find help."

The formal launch of the centennial head count was scheduled for April 1, although bureau workers have already been working on counting difficult-to-track populations such as the homeless and transients. Some rural residents may also be at risk of being overlooked because of nonstandard home addresses.

Typically, Census workers are sent into the field for follow-up surveys when residents don't respond. The COVID-19 illness is making the process more difficult than usual.

"Our preparation and contingency planning centers on two key principles: The health and safety of our staff and the public is of the utmost consideration and importance," bureau officials said in a prepared statement. Also, "We must fulfill our constitutional obligation to deliver the 2020 Census counts to the President of the United States on schedule, and we must adhere to our core task of counting everyone once, only once, and in the right place."

Although those principles might seem to be in conflict, there is still an opportunity for people to participate without meeting Census personnel at all, officials said.

The agency sent out millions of mailers asking people to submit forms online, by mail or by phone.

The primary online portal can be found at <https://2020census.gov/en/ways-to-respond> with instructions for alternative modes.

"We're going through a pretty difficult time right now, so it's imperative that everyone help out," said Josh McGoldrick, spokesman for the Oklahoma Department of Commerce. "We will work through the virus, but what happens with the census is going to impact us for the next 10 years."

The census is vital to American democracy. Results are used to allocate legislators in the U.S. House of Representatives, which also determines the makeup of the Electoral College for presidential elections.

Census data also determine federal spending budgets. In fiscal year 2017, for example, more than 300 federal programs depended on the survey to distribute $1.5 trillion to state and local governments, as well

Residents can request deferrals

In wake of possible COVID-19 layoffs

Jeanne Grimes
The Purcell Register

Like local governments across the country, the Purcell City Council grappled Tuesday with the grim reality of COVID-19.

The question raised during a special council meeting at City Hall was should the city cut utilities of residents forced out of work as the state struggles to flatten the curve of coronavirus infections.

It is a prickly problem and a slippery slope for the city which relies heavily on utility revenue to pay for salaries and services.

"Utility bills," said councilmember Danny Jacobs, "drives our budget."

Jacobs said Purcell's "quiet givers" will cover those delinquent bills for fellow citizens if they are asked.

But councilmember Jay Tate asked how do you ask a parent to choose between paying the electric bill or feeding their family when they have been laid off.

"Whether they lose their job before the bill was due or after doesn't matter," he said.

City manager Dale Bunn pointed out that residents forced out of work by COVID-19 restrictions will receive unemployment benefits and that the one-week waiting period to start those benefits has been waived along with work search requirements.

Bunn also pointed out there have been no utility cutoffs since Monday.

Residents unable to pay their utility bill should contact City Hall and request a deferral, Bunn said. Deferrals are granted on a case-by-case basis and require a payment plan. After 30 days, staff reassesses the deferral.

Victor Lohn, Purcell's finance manager, is looking at waiving the fee charged for paying utilities online, Bunn said. Tate's motion to implement a 60-day moratorium on utility cutoffs died for lack of a second.

Earlier Tuesday Mayor Ted Cox issued a proclamation stating the existence of a civil emergency due to COVID-19.

However, Gov. Kevin Stitt on Tuesday imposed stricter rules which closed non-essential businesses in counties with cases of coronavirus. McClain County has one case.

Still the proclamation wasn't without its supporters.

Bunn pointed out that council support for it could possibly prove valuable for the city getting federal money.

"We need to bless it," Jacobs agreed before the council voted unanimously in favor of the proclamation.

Tobacco and COVID-19

Officials say now is time to quit

Toilet paper and groceries are not the only supplies flying off the shelves in McClain County

A recent article by the Tahlequah Daily Press indicated that tobacco shops and convenient stores have seen a spike in tobacco sales since the COVID-19 (novel coronavirus) pandemic has started hitting closer to home.

As schools, businesses, and facilities across Oklahoma close for protective social distancing, now can be a great time for tobacco users to make a plan to quit to further protect themselves and others in their household.

COVID-19 symptoms are often more severe for people with heart and respiratory illnesses that can be caused or worsened by tobacco use and secondhand smoke.

disease, diabetes, cancer, and more. Among other health risks, tobacco users are prone to respiratory illness potentially increasing the risk for severe symptoms associated with COVID-19.

Also common among tobacco users and individuals exposed to secondhand smoke is asthma. The CDC reports that individuals with asthma are potentially at higher risk for becoming very ill from COVID-19.

The virus affects the respiratory tract, can cause an asthma attack, and possibly lead to pneumonia and acute respiratory disease.

According to the New England Journal of Medicine, a recent study suggests that "smokers are at higher risk of severe COVID-19 than those who don't smoke."

The study examined 1,099 patients in China with COVID-19, showing that of 173 patients who had severe symptoms, 16.9 percent of them were current smokers and 5.2 percent had previously smoked. Among the patients with less-severe symptoms, 11.8 percent were current smokers and 1.3 percent former smokers.

Hunter, Downing coordinate to combat coronavirus fraud

Attorney General Mike Hunter and U.S. Attorney Tim Downing today announced a state-federal partnership that will combine resources and information to investigate and prosecute con artists attempting to defraud Oklahomans during the coronavirus emergency.

Both the attorney general and the U.S. attorney for Oklahoma's western district agree that combining state and federal resources enables the two agencies to more quickly verify allegations, which will expedite the process of stopping and punishing criminals who are using the current crisis for personal profits.

They also believe the collaborative force of the state and federal government serves as a strong deterrent to those thinking of ways to defraud Oklahomans.

"During times of crisis, we should all be taking action to help those in need, not exploiting our neighbors for personal financial gain," Attorney General Hunter said. "However, it is an unfortunate reality that since the president's emergency order, both of our offices have been inundated with calls about price gouging and scams related to the coronavirus."

"We anticipate the situation worsening before it gets better. That is why U.S. Attorney Downing and I have decided to combine our efforts to expedite investigations that hold criminals accountable and keep Oklahomans safe. I appreciate his leadership and willingness to team up during this time," he said.

The Attorney General's Consumer Protection Unit will work closely with U.S. Attorney

Downing's recently appointed Coronavirus Fraud Coordinator Brandon Hale. In this capacity, Hale serves as legal counsel for the Western District on matters relating to the coronavirus.

"We will work with Attorney General Mike Hunter to vigorously pursue anyone trying to capitalize on the coronavirus pandemic by cheating Oklahoma consumers, especially the State's vulnerable elders," U.S. Attorney Downing said. "Our federal law enforcement team is actively collaborating and cooperating with the state's top prosecutor team in a concerted effort to stop the scams relating to coronavirus."

"We will use both our criminal statutes and resources to hold accountable to the fullest extent possible fraudsters who engage in the commission of criminal activity during this time of crisis."

"I am thankful to Attorney General Mike Hunter's office for their critical efforts to inform the public and hold criminals accountable," he concluded.

Reports of fraud or price gouging can be made to either the Attorney General's Office or the federal government via the National Center for Disaster Fraud hotline.

Contact OAG's Consumer Protection Unit by calling (405) 521-2029, or by email at consumerprotection@oag.ok.gov.

Reports can also be submitted to the federal government by calling the National Center for Disaster Fraud hotline 1-866-720-5721, or by email at disaster@leo.gov.

Interesting conference call

On a conference call Monday I had the opportunity to listen to a highly regarded cardiologist from Chicago, an architect from Dallas who has done extensive business with the Chinese, in Spain and Dubai, a businessman from Tulsa who has extensive overseas business experience and an Oklahoma City Attorney.

They all had very interesting perspectives on our pandemic and the problems it is causing in our every day lives.

The doctor said the Chinese knew about the coronavirus for months before we got wind of it.

A huge number of the cases around the world could have been prevented if we had been called over there to help with it in the initial stages.

The architect, who has done project after project in China, said that doesn't surprise him one bit about them trying to hide it.

Editor's Notebook

John D.
Montgomery

A colleague of my sister, who is a teacher in Midwest City, had a son who worked in China for several years.

He even married a Chinese girl. They were sent back to the States about 18 months ago.

When the girl called her mother in January her mother told her that the United States had infected China with the coronavirus.

The state run media had even monitored telephone calls prevented the daughter from being able to set her mother straight as to where the virus started.

And speaking of where the virus started, the architect on Monday said Wuhan is where the Chinese biological warfare unit is housed.

Interesting.

Making matters much, much worse was the fact that they hid information about the virus.

Aggressive action just a week earlier in mid-January could have cut the number of infections by two-thirds, according to a recent study whose authors include an expert from Wuhan's municipal Center for Disease Control and Prevention.

Another study found that if China had moved to control the outbreak three weeks earlier, it might have prevented 95 percent of the country's cases.

It's enough to make you sick; literally and figuratively.

YCMTSU

Truer acronym was never written

YCMTSU.

That's on a T-shirt I sometimes wear. It's an acronym and means (since this is a family newspaper) You Can't Make This Stuff Up.

There are no shortage of YCMTSU moments these days.

I experienced one last week.

The lieutenant governor of Texas appeared on television and basically called on older Americans to sacrifice themselves to save an economy pummeled nearly to a standstill by COVID-19.

It seems Dan Patrick thinks this will secure the economic future for the lately departed seniors' children and grandchildren and restore for them "the America that all America loves."

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has warned that senior Americans (65 and older) as a group are at higher risk for dying from COVID-19 if they contract it.

MUCH ADO

Jeanne Grimes

Patrick didn't say how this scenario should play out and I'd like to know since I'm in the pre-selected age bracket to put this miraculous 180 degree spin on the economy .

Congressman Tom Cole

The natural disaster caused by COVID-19 is unlike any other our nation has encountered in modern history. Its impact is severely felt across the whole of society – causing an unprecedented strain on our public health defenders and medical providers as well as sharp economic losses and unexpected disruptions for Americans of all stripes.

Hardworking Americans, families, communities, small businesses and numerous industries have been hit hard and fast in a matter of days and weeks.

Given the enormous scope of this disaster, its consequences and the damage already done, it is critically important to get help to those Americans facing difficult times by no fault of their own. Last week, I was encouraged that Congress passed and President Trump signed into law a bipartisan relief package that extends a much needed helping hand.

As COVID-19 continues to spread far and wide, the federal government was right to deliver the historically massive and wide-reaching Coronavirus Aid, Relief and Economic Security (CARES) Act. While this package is not the first to be delivered by the federal government, it covers a lot more ground than the previous two.

As Americans hunker down in their homes and wait for this storm to pass, the CARES Act rightly sends help. This comes in the form of one-time rebate checks, ranging in amount, for Americans earning up to $99,000 per year.

For families with children, this includes additional money for each of the dependents. Along with these direct payments, the relief package also temporarily expands unemployment benefits, ensuring help is there for Americans who have unexpectedly lost their jobs due to the economic disruption caused by COVID-19.

Moreover, the CARES Act shields consumers from negative credit reports if there is an agreement with their lender to delay payments or make partial payments.

To comply with the guidance of health authorities, many businesses on Main Street have sadly been forced to close their doors overnight. The CARES Act comes to the aid of our small businesses and their workers. Specifically, it includes emergency grants totaling up to $10,000 from the Small Business Administration (SBA) to help small businesses cover operating costs. In addition, it provides for SBA to cover six months of payments for small businesses with existing loans.

Of great importance to workers, the legislation establishes the Paycheck Protection Program to help keep the small business workforce on the payroll.

For our health workers fighting on the front lines across the nation, the CARES Act replenishes vital supplies like masks, respirators and other medical equipment. It also provides reinforcement supplies and resources to bolster state and local response efforts.

The CARES Act comes to the aid of hard-hit industries struggling in one way or another. For example, the package provides emergency assistance for the agriculture industry to ensure that heightened demand for food can be met.

For airlines and related businesses that are suffering due to the sudden drop in air travel, the package allocates loans and loan guarantees to sustain them.

Finally, I worked very hard to ensure tribal nations are

MOVIES WITH DAVE

By David Stull

A few weeks ago, right around when the news surrounding the spread of coronavirus in the United States really began getting serious, I was still seriously considering going to the movies. As has been my Saturday tradition for years now.

That was, of course, a few days before nearly every theater in the country shut down indefinitely.

With the constant announcements of movie releases being delayed left and right, I knew it would have been my last opportunity to watch a film in theaters for quite some time.

Plus I didn't like the idea of missing a whole weekend's worth of movies. Even though I wasn't particularly excited to watch "The Hunt," "Bloodshot," or "I Still Believe," I still wanted to do my due diligence and review them.

In the end though, I decided to stay at home.

Partially because another commitment came up that Saturday, but also because the news surrounding COVID-19 seemed to be getting more and more dire by the minute.

Of course in hindsight, it seems like a no-brainer of a decision now.

Because not only did I avoid potentially exposing myself and my family to the virus, I also didn't have to wait long to review all three of those March 13 theatrical releases since "The

Trying times

Our thoughts and prayers are with our friends and neighbors in Senate District 43 and around the state.

These are not easy times, but Oklahomans have once again stepped up and showed their resilience and patriotism by joining together to support our healthcare workers, first responders, law enforcement and others who are on the front lines of this battle.

Grocery store employees are working through the night to ensure shelves are stocked each day. Then there are the many other essential businesses, postal workers and government employees who are working hard to keep our state running.

There have been several developments recently. Most importantly Congress passed and President Trump signed the $2.2 trillion CARES Act to help with the COVID-19 response efforts. This will provide tremendous support to not only our nation as a whole but to our state economy, our small business owners and our citizens.

On the state level, schools will remain closed for the remainder of the semester and the state Department of Education approved distance learning to help students.

The state Department of Commerce has been holding teleconferences for small business owners to learn more about the SBA Economic Injury Disaster Loan application and program. The next one will be on Thursday, April 2, from 2-3 p.m. You can register on their website at www.okcommerce.gov.

Again, if you have questions about any of Oklahoma's resources or programs regarding this health crisis, please visit COVIDresources.ok.gov or call the Oklahoma COVID-19 call center at 211.

In closing, if you haven't already, please fill out your 2020 Census questionnaire. You should have already gotten information in the mail to fill it out online.

If you haven't received anything, please call the Census hotline at 1-844-467-2020. It's toll-free and open daily from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m.

I can't tell you how important this is to our state. Oklahoma has missed out on billions of dollars of federal funding the last decade because nearly 25% of Oklahomans didn't fill out their form in 2010. This is funding for schools, public health, social services, roads and other vital government programs. Every person who is counted will gain the state an estimated $17,000 over the next decade. It also determines our state's representation in Congress.

Only one person per household needs to fill out the form. They will be asked to list everyone living in their home

Dave:

Hunt” became available on video-on-demand just one week later, and “Bloodshot” and “I Still Believe” received a similar treatment a week after that.

Of course I already reviewed “The Hunt” in last week’s issue, but I’ll finally be covering “Bloodshot” and “I Still Believe” this time around.

We seem to be in it for the long haul with this outbreak.

After all, flattening the curve means spreading out the number of infections over a longer period of time, as opposed to having a sharp spike of patients overwhelming medical providers.

Without a vaccine, staying at home as much as possible is the best thing we as a country can do right now.

It’s incredibly inconvenient, not to mention frustrating and anxiety inducing for anyone who may be out of work due to this crisis, but it’s the best option we have for better or worse.

Despite knowing that, I still feel a twinge of sadness every time a Hollywood studio announces that yet another film is being delayed.

Scheduled releases as far out as July are being pushed back. It’s like the summer movie season is gone before it even started.

But I suppose that’s enough lamenting about the coronavirus for one week.

Luckily, in the midst of this crisis, there’s still new movies releasing to talk about. So without further ado, let’s get to the reviews.

First up is “Bloodshot.”

After he and his wife are murdered, marine Ray Garrison (Vin Diesel) is resurrected by a team of scientists. Enhanced with nanotechnology, he becomes a superhuman, biotech killing machine.

As Ray first trains with fellow super-soldiers, he cannot recall anything from his former life. But when his memories flood back and he remembers the man that killed both him and his wife, he breaks out of the facility to get revenge, only to discover that there’s more to the conspiracy than he thought.

I can’t say I knew anything about the character of Bloodshot before watching this film.

Apparently this film was based on a comic book series by Valiant Comics, which I also had never heard of until researching this film.

Back in 2015, Sony had actually announced plans to make a Valiant Comics cinematic universe all beginning with “Bloodshot.”

Included in their plans were a sequel to “Bloodshot,” two films based on a different Valiant title called Harbinger, and a fifth crossover film titled “Harbinger Wars.”

But as of 2019, those plans seem to be up in the air with Paramount acquiring the distribution rights to “Harbinger.”

Considering Sony’s mixed track record with a separate spider-related superhero cinematic universe, I can’t say I’m terribly broken up learning about this turn of events.

Still, when I saw the trailer for “Bloodshot” in theaters, I’d be lying if I said I wasn’t at least a little intrigued.

Vin Diesel isn’t exactly my favorite action movie star, but the concept itself seemed interesting on the surface, and I was curious to see how the film would execute it.

Turns out the answer to that was “not very well.”

For starters, it seems the main hook in the film’s trailer was actually the biggest twist of the whole dang movie.

I don’t even feel like I can talk about it considering how major of a spoiler it is. Shame on Sony’s marketing team for ruining the biggest surprise this film had to offer.

If you’ve watched the trailer, this movie plays out exactly how you would expect. It is a cool concept, the way the memory loss of Vin Diesel’s character is used, but again if you’ve watched any previews you already know everything the film’s plot has to offer.

Action wise, this movie does okay.

The film relies heavily on slow-motion like a crutch, to its own detriment. Instead of slow-mo making a moment more dramatic, the overuse here just ends up slowing down what should be exciting action setpieces.

Even scenes that have no business being slowed down are given the slow-mo treatment. The action here basically goes from slowed down, to quickly sped up, and back again.

It’s a shame too, because if it weren’t for all the dang slow-mo, you’d actually be able to appreciate some of the more decent action scenes in this film.

It’s not the most incredible action choreography, but at least you can usually see what’s happening most of the time. Even if the film does cut away during the more gruesome moments due to its PG-13 rating.

As for the film’s dialogue, well let’s just say I don’t exactly expect to hear scintillating wordplay in a Vin Diesel action vehicle, but this movie fell short of even those low expectations.

Beyond that, the characters here are mostly all bland and forgettable, with the possible exception of a computer programmer named Wilfred Wigans, played by Lamorne Morris.

At least Wigans has some personality, irritating as he may come across to some. Something that is in stark contrast to Vin Diesel’s character, whose only two emotions seem to be stoic or angry. I suppose you have to play to an actor’s strengths.

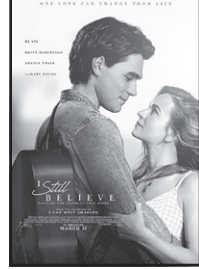

Overall, while I didn’t find this film offensively terrible, it definitely isn’t a movie I’d seek out.

Especially when you can instead choose to watch “Bad Boys for Life,” which released just this Tuesday on video-on-demand, a much better action movie overall.

I suppose if all you’re looking for is some background noise, and you run into “Bloodshot” while you’re flipping channels on cable, this would fit the bill okay.

Otherwise, you can definitely find better ways to spend your time than watching another mediocre Vin Diesel flick.

“Bloodshot” is rated PG-13.

The other film this week is “I Still Believe.”

Based on the true-life story of Christian music mega star Jeremy Camp (K.J. Apa) and his remarkable story of love and loss, this film follows Jeremy and Melissa (Britt Robertson) on a journey that looks to prove there’s always hope in the midst of tragedy.

Hot off of the astounding success of Andrew and Jon Erwin’s previous faith-based film, “I Can Only Imagine,” a movie which made a whopping $86 million at the box office on a $7 million budget, the two brothers decided to use their profits from the film to form their own studio, now dubbed Kingdom Story Company.

With their partnership with Lionsgate, the company has set its sights on releasing two new theatrical releases every year.

Their goal? To become a “Christian Pixar or a Christian Marvel,” as Jon Erwin told Baptist Press.

A studio that is specialized to make specific types of movies and is able to work on multiple films at once. All with the quality that moviegoers expect from an Erwin brothers movie.

This is the first film in that venture.

It really is incredible to see the kind of pull the Erwin brothers managed to receive with movie theaters after the success of “I Can Only Imagine.”

I remember when “I Can Only Imagine” was released a couple years back, it was just relegated to a fairly small auditorium at the Moore Warren Theatre.

Little did they know every single showing of the film would be completely sold out opening weekend, and for many weekends to come. Heck, I could hardly believe it myself while sitting elbow to elbow in a packed auditorium.

This time around Lionsgate learned their lesson.

Heading into the release of the Erwin brothers’ next film, the film distributor not only managed to lock down more auditoriums for “I Still Believe,” they also nabbed the biggest ones as well, including IMAX. An impressive feat for a faith-based film.

Unfortunately for everyone involved in the production and distribution of “I Still Believe,” a certain worldwide pandemic completely stole the film’s thunder, and it only managed to stay in theaters for one short weekend with reduced turnout.

It’s kind of sad. Though I wasn’t the biggest fan of “I Can Only Imagine,” I was still interested in seeing if the Erwin brothers could repeat their box office success with another faith-based film starring a popular Christian musician.

I guess we’ll have to wait until the end of the year when the Erwin brothers release their upcoming Christian sports drama, “American Underdog: The Kurt Warner Story,” to see how much weight the Erwin name really holds.

But instead of going on and on about nothing but a film’s production or box office woes, I should probably at least mention what I thought of the movie itself.

As some of you may already know, I’m not the biggest fan of faith-based films.

Not because I have a thing against Christianity or anything like that, but because usually the movies made for Christians are cheap looking, poorly written, poorly acted garbage, made with the singular goal of selling a sermon instead of actually telling a compelling story.

The Erwin brothers’ last film, “I Can Only Imagine,” was somewhat of an exception to that rule.

Though a few of the performances were still a bit uneven, it managed to be a surprisingly well shot, touching film that clearly resonated with audiences. Heck, it even managed to make me tear up at the end.

Amping up the emotional factor, the Erwin brothers set their sights on making a film about the story of Jeremy Camp and his first wife Melissa Henning. Anyone aware of the tragic tale will know exactly what they’re in for.

Surprisingly, this movie feels much more like a romance than just a straight up faith-based film. At least at first.

The dialogue is definitely a little “churchy” at times, but it’s far less overt than many films in the same genre.

It’s less of a sermon and more a movie that just so happens to feature characters who are Christians and view the world through that lens.

Because of this, the film seemed far less preachy to me.

The dialogue here felt much more natural compared to many other faith-based films.

Sure, the characters here all talk like strong believers in Christianity, but the way they spoke was more like Christians I’ve personally known and not some kind of perfect idyllic Christian you see in so many other faith-based films.

As for the performances, I thought K.J. Apa and Britt Robertson did perfectly fine as the film’s leads. The two of them definitely had some decent chemistry together.

Britt Robertson may have gone a little too whispery with her dialogue for my tastes, but she unquestionably made up for it during some of the film’s more emotional scenes.

I think the majority of Christians who seek out this film will find Jeremy’s and Melissa’s tragic story both touching and uplifting. If you’re a fan of Jeremy Camp’s music, all the better because this movie is filled to the brim with his songs.

While it may not quite hit the emotional highs of the Erwins’ previous film “I Can Only Imagine,” it certainly seemed a bit more even when it came to performances.

Overall, while I wouldn’t say this movie comes remotely close in beating the best Hollywood has to offer in terms of quality, I’m happy to say the Erwin brothers are continuing their trend of producing solid, above average movies for Christian audiences.

They are films that are leaps and bounds better than many other movies in the same genre. “I Still Believe” is rated PG.

Oklahoma is the proud home to 39 sovereign tribes, and each one plays an invaluable role in the lives and health of their members and provides benefits to the surrounding communities as well. I am proud that the CARES Act dedicates generous resources specifically for the response efforts of tribal nations.

This includes funding for the Indian Health Service, food and nutrition programs, housing and energy assistance, economic relief and education programs.

As the federal government continues to put its full weight into fighting COVID-19 and dealing with the wide-reaching consequences, remember that winning this war still requires the collective effort of every American.

Continue heeding the guidance outlined by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the President’s Coronavirus Task Force (coronavirus.gov) as well as updates pro-

Tips for coping with coronavirus challenges

Jacob Longan

The new normal of social distancing and shelter-in-place is challenging for all of us, creating stress and anxiety as we face an uncertain future and timeline.

Worries about our health, our finances and our loved ones seem to increase almost daily. Dr. Thad Leffingwell, a clinical health psychologist and head of Oklahoma State University's Department of Psychology, offers the following tips for effective coping:

Structure your day as much as possible. Unstructured days and loss of routines are fun for vacations, but they can add to the stress of our current situation. Schedule activities. Focus on things that bring you joy or give you a sense of mastery and accomplishment.

Take care of your body and mind. Our current social distancing and self-quarantines can break our self-care habits, and stress eating can draw us to less healthy food options.

Be as active as possible, and choose healthy eating options. Move often. This will be good for your mood and overall health and will help your immune system be most effective.

Limit news and social media intake to avoid information overload. While it is reasonable and responsible to stay informed, it isn't necessary to be plugged in all the time. Take breaks.

Stay in the present. It is a wonderful skill of our minds to predict and plan, but sometimes that can be a trap. Use mindfulness techniques to practice returning to the here and now of this moment.

Be patient. Remind yourself that the current situation, while stressful and challenging, is only temporary. The one consistent thing in life is change, and life will return to normal.

Be grateful. Even in the midst of stress and challenge, gratitude is a powerful psychological antidote. Take time to count your blessings, even now, and you will find that it reduces stress and prepares you to cope with today's challenges.

Pursuant to the Order for Combined Notice, all creditors having claims against Austin C. Waller a/k/a Austin Cooper Waller; Fannie May Trimble Waller a/k/a Fannie Mae Trimble Waller and Mary Trimble Waller a/k/a Mary Trimble Waller Nanney, deceased, are required to present same, with a description of all security interest and other collateral, if any, held by each creditor with respect to such claim, to the Petitioner, Carrie Belle Waller Devereux, c/o Robertson & Williams, 9658 N. May Avenue, Suite 200, Oklahoma City, OK 73120, on or before the 22nd day of April, 2020, or the same will be forever barred.

Notice is hereby given that a hearing will be held on the 7th day of May, 2020, at 9:30 a.m. at the McClain County Courthouse, Purcell, Oklahoma before Judge Gray. At the hearing the Court will decide whether to approve the Petition for Summary Administration, Appointment of Special Administrator, Admission of Foreign Wills to Probate, Determination of Heirs, Devisees and Legatees, Approval of Final Accounts and Distribution of Estates of the Petitioner.

You are hereby advised that you must file objections to the Petition for Summary Administration, Appointment of Special Administrator, Admission of Foreign Wills to Probate, Determination of Heirs, Devisees and Legatees, Approval of Final Accounts and Distribution of Estates before the hearing and send a copy to the Petitioner's attorney, Robertson & Williams, 9658 N. May Ave., Suite 200, Oklahoma City, OK 73120, or you will be deemed to have waived any objections. If you have no objections, you need not appear at the hearing or make any filings with the Court.

If an objection is filed before the hearing, the Court will determine at the hearing whether the wills attached to the petition shall be admitted to probate, whether summary proceedings are appropriate and, if so, whether the estates will be distributed and to whom the estates will be distributed.

LOOKING BACK . . .

Editor's Note: The following is from the file of The Purcell Register 9 years ago about Wayne's first football State Championship in 2011.

The Purcell Register

State champions!

It has a nice ring to it.

The Wayne Bulldogs completed their quest for the school's first Gold Ball Saturday afternoon at Boone Pickens Stadium in Stillwater with a 35-28 victory over the Woodland Cougars.

And speaking of rings, the Bulldogs will be sporting shiny state championship rings in the coming months.

Facing the No. 1 ranked defense in Class A, the Bulldogs rode their horse, Josh Way, all the way to the state title.

Way finished with 41 carries for 284 yards and three touchdowns.

Quarterback Sam Martin scored the first points of the game on a two-yard touchdown run early in the first quarter. The extra point attempt was blocked and Wayne led, 6-0.

Woodland wasn't producing much offensively on their next possession, yet were able to punch through the Wayne defense for a 63-yard touchdown run. After the extra point, the Cougars led 7-6.

After trading a few punts, Wayne got their workhorse going. Way bolted in from 12 yards out to give the lead back to Wayne near the end of the first period.

Martin found Ryan Welch, who made an acrobatic catch and at the same time tip toed along the out of bounds line, for the two point conversion staking the Bulldogs to a 14-7 advantage.

The two powerhouses picked up the defensive pressure in the second quarter trading punts.

But a late second frame fumble by Wayne set up the Cougars for the go-ahead touchdown as the half ticked away.

Cougar quarterback, Patrick Bartlett, found a wide open receiver crossing the middle and connected for an eight-yard scoring strike. Woodland successfully converted its two point conversion toting a 16-14 lead to the halftime locker room.

"We played okay in the first half," head coach Brandon Sharp said.

"At halftime the kids were confident, but kind of disappointed in themselves that they allowed them to score right before the half. Still, we felt good.

"We knew we dominated the half besides a couple of busts that kept them in the game. We knew what we had to do in the second half and came out and were able to do it."

Wayne started the third quarter scoring with a Way three yard run to regain the lead but a failed two point try only left them ahead by four 20-16.

"We stayed with what we were doing in the first half and were able to start hitting the stretch play better," Sharp said.

"We have a big right side of our offensive line in tackle Garrett Reed and Caleb Osborne. Garrett is 6'3" and 270 pounds and Caleb is over six feet tall and tips the scales between 225 and 230 pounds. "We put Loudon (Johnson) at fullback and started smashing Woodland. We were running behind those big guys and let Josh and that side (of the line) wear them out."

Sharp and the staff's plan worked as Wayne's running game began to wear down the Cougars defense.

Meanwhile, the Wayne defense was beginning to find its rhythm, holding Woodland scoreless in the third.

Early in the fourth, Way found a seam in the Woodland defense dashing 41 yards to the end zone for a touchdown to give Wayne a sizeable 27-16, advantage after a successful extra point attempt.

Woodland fought back behind its talented running back, Willie Zachary, who found a crease and scampered 23 yards for a Cougar touchdown. A failed pass attempt on the two point conversion try left them with a five point deficit.

"We had a couple busts on the defensive side of the ball but I felt good about our defense," Sharp said.

"Their running back is one of the best in the state and if you don't wrap him up he'll make you pay. He did that right before the half.

"We also didn't wrap up on their first touchdown on an option play in the first. He hit the corner and was gone."

Wayne put together a solid drive midway through fourth quarter that ended in a one-yard touchdown run by Martin.

Way tacked on the two point PAT giving the Bulldogs a 35-22 lead. As it turned out that was all the points the Bulldogs would need.

Woodland tacked on one more touchdown on a two yard pass with just under four minutes to play, but couldn't convert their two point attempt.

Wayne and Way ran out the clock after that, earning the schools first ever football state championship.

But not before giving the Wayne faithful a scare. A fumble on a play that started on the Woodland 12 nearly cost the Bulldogs.

Luckily, Johnson recovered the ball around the Woodland 35 with 1:02 left. Then the Bulldogs ran out the clock and the party was on.

Wayne finished with 457 yards of total offense, with 363 coming on the ground.

The Bulldogs coughed up the ball four times against Woodland, losing two.

"I felt like we played pretty well offensively despite putting the ball on the ground four times. That was uncharacteristic of our run game. Luckily, we overcame it," Sharp said.

If you have already registered you will be receiving your T-shirt and bracelet. If you would like a shirt and bracelet please message the Warrior Way 5k on Facebook. Organizers appreciate you all again for all of your support. We are thankful as always for our great community!

A Letter From Washington School Superintendent

Dear Warrior Family: Through action taken by the Oklahoma State Board of Education, we learned that Oklahoma students will not return to the classroom for the remainder of the current school year. Instead, districts, including Washington, will implement continuous learning plans that will allow students to complete the school year at home.

State education and health officials believe this move will help our state fight the spread of COVID-19. We understand this change is in the best interest of everyone's health, which is our greatest priority as a district.

The state board's vote also means that All Extracurricular Activities and Special Events will be canceled or postponed as well. Making these difficult decisions, we believe, is simply the right thing to do for our students, our staff and our community.

Washington is developing a plan to ensure your child will continue to have opportunities to learn and to grow academically. Because we are unable to safely gather together, these lessons and activities will primarily be delivered and communicated by U.S. Postal Service, District Email, and or electronic methods.

As you can imagine, this is a significant transition for our students and our teachers. As soon as we identify our next steps, we will share them with you.

We have posted numerous resources on our website, including information about free breakfasts and lunches for students. You can find these details and more by visiting www.wps-isd.com. If you wish to receive district alerts, please sign up for our E-Notes feature. Details are at the bottom of our websites home page.

Please stay safe. As always, we appreciate your support of Washington Schools.

A letter from the Coaches to our 2020 Washington Warrior baseball team:

Seniors: Thank you for your time and effort in leaving this program where it stands today, on the rise! Your willingness to be coached, disciplined and molded makes your coaches so proud!

Underclassman: Don't take things for granted! This unprecedented time should reveal to you that you're never given tomorrow. Let's all grow together for our next opportunity to compete again as a program.

Parents: We as coaches want to express our appreciation to you for allowing us to help mold and make your sons into good baseball players, but even better men! Your support of this program financially, emotionally and through your prayers will never go unnoticed.

brothers and sisters who served during the Vietnam era will succumb to this illness.

We are bombarded with requests to stay at home and away from people to help stop the spread. I believe that we should all heed the warnings that are coming from our medical folks about how contagious the virus is.

When I have to go out, I'm wearing my mask and washing my hands very often. Thankfully, thus far, I do not have any symptoms of the illness. All of us at our Veterans Foundation encourages everyone to take the precautions and the suggestions that CDC has established.

We will continue to assist veterans and surviving spouses using email and by telephone, until we can safely reopen our office in Norman. We can be reached at our main number 405-550-8806 Ext 101 or by Email at dale@dalekgraham-veteransfoundation.org.

Congratulations to our Veteran of the Week, Dr. Les Nunn of Pauls Valley, Oklahoma. He served in the United States Air Force as a Combat JAG in Vietnam. Dr. Nunn is also the President of the Dale K. Graham Veterans Foundation Board of Directors.

We are still receiving rating decisions in the mail. Last week 27 veterans received a disability rating of 100 percent for their service-connected disabilities. This group will receive a combined annual $1,129,208. They will also be eligible for the state benefits of sales tax exemptions, property tax exemptions, and other benefits that our state provides for disabled veterans.

Fifty-three veterans were awarded disability ratings from 10-90 percent and will receive a combined annual $958,105. This group of men and women will be eligible for VA Health Care, and some of them may also be eligible for other state benefits.

One of the things that we encourage veterans to do is to make sure their families know what disabilities they are service-connected for. We talk about that because if a veteran's disability is on their death certificate as a primary cause of death or is listed as a contributing condition, their spouse and dependents may be eligible for VA benefits.

If you would like to help us make a difference, we welcome your support. We spend over $30,000 each month in direct support of the veterans and family members we serve. We are transporting many homeless veterans to our Norman location each week to begin the process of making a difference in the lives of the men and women who have served in the military. Champs:

just as it has all season, wore down the Woodland defensive line and linebackers.

Reed, Osborne, TJ Boles, Alex Cheatwood and Kael Groff played great, according to Sharp.

"In the second half, we wore them down and pounded Way. Sam played great from his quarterback spot," Sharp said.

"The offensive line played great all year and we have to take our hat off to them. And David Davenport played great and opened a lot of exceptional holes for Josh.

"Anytime you put up over 450 yards of total offense against the No. 1 team in the state you're doing something well."

Martin was 5-11 passing for 94 yards and carried the rock 14 times for 66 yards and two touchdowns.

"We had to throw it a little more, just to loosen them up. They had the safeties so tight that as soon as we snapped the ball they were there," Sharp said.

"We threw it enough to keep them honest with short passes."

Wayne installed a fake stretch run play that turned into a short pass in the flats that proved very effective in the finals.

"We picked up good yards on safe pass plays. We had one that we were lucky it didn't get picked off. Both of our receivers ran posts that brought three defenders to one area. We were very fortunate," Sharp said.

Wayne rode Way, who was told by his head coach to expect a heavy load.

"I've been telling him to get ready for 30 carries a game. We had to do it again the other day. We knew if we were going to win, we had to ride our horse that got us there. He carried the load and Sam did his thing behind the offensive line," Sharp said.

"Sam threw the ball well and our pass game was good. One play that was huge for us was a third and long that looked like Sam was going to scramble, but he stopped and hit Ryan (Welch) for a big first down."

Woodland was averaging over 400 yards a game but the stellar Wayne defense limited them to just 275 yards with 82 coming through the air.

"The defense played well. We turned the ball over and it gave them a short field a couple of times. You can't do that against the No. 1 team in the state or they'll make you pay," Sharp said.

"It was a nice job by our defense. We were a bend-but-don't-break defense through the playoffs and we did it just enough times to win the game."

Sharp was again pleased with the play of Loudon Johnson and Davenport from their linebacker spots as well as Groff from the defensive line.

Groff finished with one sack and a tackle. The sack gave him a total of 23 for the year to lead all classes.

"Kael played really well again. And our secondary played well against their passing game, which has been very explosive. Our hats go off to them as well," Sharp said.

Sharp received the traditional Gatorade bath following the win.

"Our guys were just ecstatic and you can't even really put it into words," Sharp said.

"I've been telling them since middle school if they stick together, believe in what we're doing, listen to the coaches, be good people as well as good football players, something special could happen."

That proved to be the truth Saturday afternoon on a chilly day in Stillwater.

Sunray Baptist Church

Greetings from Sunray Baptist Church! You are encouraged to look on our Facebook page every few days to hear teachings from the Word of God presented by our pastor Dennis Clark.

These are pre-recorded, and there is no specific time to hear them.

Sunday School lessons will continue to be streamed by Baptist Publishing House on their Facebook page each Sunday at 10 a.m.

Our church and nation are facing unprecedented quarantine measures brought on by the spread of the coronavirus. Our prayers continue to be with those affected by this disease, the healthcare workers who strive to treat and care for those infected, and for our leaders who have to make difficult decisions about this disease. We praise God for who He is and ask that He strengthen us during this uncertain time.

This past week Brother Dennis spoke from Psalm 42 saying we live in a day of uncertainties. We still have a continuing desire to feel the presence of God in our lives. We should seek God and remember His works in our lives. We should trust God, and He will get us through these days of uncertainty.

Our pastor also spoke about “the choices we make.” There are many choices that impact those around us. In I Kings 18, Elijah issued a challenge to the entire nation of Israel. He called on the people to make a choice, one that you would think would be easy to make. They remained silent.

In Hebrews 11:23-29, Moses refused to be called the son of pharaoh. He aligned himself with God. He did this by faith.

We make a choice on a daily basis - to serve the world or God. We need to live for God. The choices we make can turn our

The Reviving of Uncle Alton's 'Family Altar'

One of my fondest memories of growing up is, at the close of the day, ending up at my auburn-headed Uncle Alton's and Aunt Florence Bailey's house and reading the Bible with their family.

We would gather around their big living room in their home on Truitt Avenue—I must have been very young when I first joined in—and we usually would read out of the New Testament. The one I remember is a big black hardcover Bible with large letters. I did not need those big letters then, but times do change, as you know.

We would go around the room taking turns reading: Bruce, Mark, Allen, my aunt, my uncle, and me. One by one we would read a few verses, maybe four or five. Then at the end, we would pray. I remember my Uncle Alton asked me a time or two to lead the family prayer. It made me proud. I think those moments were as close to going to church as I ever got without having to leave the house.

Uncle Alton called such a gathering around of the family for Bible reading as the “family altar.” He would remind me at

Crisis as Opportunity for Faith

Most of us are practicing “Safe at Home” these days. Some of us thrive on it! I like the quiet time to do some extra writing and reading. For others of us, the novelty is wearing off. Our children want to be playing with their friends from school.

The elderly feel like they are “under house arrest” and miss the loving contact with grandchildren. One woman at a retirement center told me “If the coronavirus doesn't get me, I'm gonna die anyway from sheer boredom!” It can feel like being lifeless in a grave, as Ezekiel saw in his vision (Ez. 37). Simply a collection of bones, without the flesh of human contact and personality and liveliness.

These times call for immense creativity, inventiveness, and patience. We certainly need to have private spaces in our homes. But we also need time together, as a family, to re-learn about each other, to establish new ways of leisure together and new ways of prayer together.

The distancing is physical, but it doesn't have to be social—we have many ways to connect via cell phone, Internet. We don't know how long the period of stay-at-home work and school will last. But we do know that it will end. The uncertainty is in length of time.

More importantly for us

Please see OLV, page 13A

Our next Food Bank Give-Away is planned for Saturday, April 18, between 12 and 4 p.m. However, in light of the coronavirus situation, we may not be able to open for that day, and the next Food Give Away may be carried out on an emergency basis. The usual Food Give Away day is always on the third Saturday of the month, so put it on your calendar anyway.

If you are getting low on food, please call the church or Pastor David to arrange a way to get more food.

We know because of our faith that God can heal us from anything. However, it is foolish to avoid doing what the virologists and our government officials have asked us to shield ourselves from disease. God has given us a mind and a certain amount of wisdom, and we must use them. Please stay at home. Please wash your hands. Please be safe and safeguard others.

There have been some churches that have insisted that their followers continue to meet, especially in large numbers. Their leaders claim that God will not let them get sick, and if they do get the disease, the laying on of hands will cure them. There is no doubt in my mind that this can happen. However, this reminds me of what we read during Jesus's time in the wilderness.

Remember when Satan came to visit him there and challenged Jesus to three actions? In particular, in Matthew 4: 7 and Luke 4: 12, Jesus reminds us that we shouldn't test God.

It doesn't hurt for us to ask God for healing and protection from the COVID-19 virus. But we must also beware of testing God. So do all you can to guard yourself and to shield

Controlling rabbit and deer in your landscape

Justin McDaniel
Extension Ag Educator

White-tailed deer and cottontail rabbit both have a broad diet and sometimes damage garden and ornamental plants. Damage to hosta, rudbeckia, pansy, peas, beans, rose, blackberry, and many low growing trees is common.

Turf damage is typically minor. Fortunately, homeowners have several options for reducing damage to an acceptable level.

Repellants have been found to provide limited effectiveness with putrid egg solids or thiram based products having the highest reported effectiveness. A problem with all repellants is that they must be applied to a large portion of the plant to provide protection and they must be reapplied frequently.

Expect to reapply every couple of weeks at minimum, although rain and direct sunlight will necessitate more frequent reapplication. This becomes expensive and frustrating and unless the plant is of high value, probably not a realistic solution for most situations.

Areas with higher deer density and/or lower food resources will have reduced effectiveness from repellants. Also, the more preferred the target plant, the less effective the repellant will be.

Exclusion is a very effective way to minimize damage to landscape plants. However, it can be expensive as fences need to be 10 feet to completely exclude deer, although a two foot fence will suffice for rabbits. Woven wire or netting is the most effective.

For large areas of a high value plant (such as a garden) this may be the best long-term solution. An electric fence for small garden plots can help to reduce deer damage, but is not foolproof.

If using an electric fence, try attaching pieces of aluminum foil (or other electrical conducting material) at about three inch intervals.

Peanut butter smeared onto the conductors serves as an attractant. The resultant shock can condition deer to avoid that area. To protect small trees and shrubs, wrap the trunk with plastic tree wrap or poultry wire. Ensure that the wrap or wire is not cutting into the bark of the tree.

If branches are within the reach of the deer, they may still browse the tips.

The most effective way to reduce deer and rabbit damage is to select plants that they do not generally consume.

Fortunately for the Oklahoma gardener, there are many such plants available. The Oklahoma State University factsheet "HLA-6427 - Ornamental and Garden Plants: Controlling Deer Damage" (<https://extension.okstate.edu/fact-sheets/ornamental-and-garden-plants-controlling-deer-damage.html>) has an extensive list of plants and their relative attractiveness to deer and most of this information will apply to rabbits as well.

Examples of plants not generally damaged include blanket flower, lantana, salvia, zinnia, bee balm, butterfly weed, foxglove, gayfeather, goldenrod, lavender, penstemon, rosemary, Russian sage, thyme, yarrow, holly, barberry, creeping mahonia, yucca, sumac, cantaloupe, pepper, onion, and tomato.

If replacing plants is not an option, place susceptible plants together (to the extent possible) and use exclusion or repellants to protect that area of the garden.

and health care workers as they fight a battle for us.

After consulting with other members of our family, one of our daughters threatened to take me (83 years) and my wife (79 years) into her home until the danger of the virus has passed. Our entire family has taken over the buying of needed items.

After the initial shock, the results have been beautiful. One of our sons read for us of Isaiah's message in time of danger.

"Come, my people, enter your chambers, and shut your doors behind you; hide yourself, as it were, for a little moment, until the indignation is past."

After shopping for us to purchase flowers and gardening supplies, our grandson said,

"I loved buying the flowers." For so long we have helped our children. It is so wonderful when our children love us and come to our rescue.

Two beautiful stories recorded in the Bible tell us how to behave in a time of crisis. First, we must work and defend ourselves against all enemies.

On returning to Jerusalem after years of captivity, the Lord's men set about building a wall around the city while the enemy lurked nearby. The laborers worked with their hands and a sword belted to their side. A trumpeter was nearby to sound the alarm.

Second, we must seek to live by the Lord's miraculous power. The Prophet Elijah, during a severe drought, was sent to the home of a widow in Zarephath. She was gathering sticks to prepare the last handful of flour for her and her son in preparation for dying. Because the widow was willing to give the prophet a small cake, God miraculously blessed her jar of oil until the Lord sent rain.

Please be extra diligent in your prayers for the world. "But when you pray, go into your inner room, shut your door, and pray to your Father, who is unseen. And your Father, who sees what is done in secret, will reward you." (Matthew 6:6).

All services have been cancelled until the safety net has been placed around the coronavirus. Our pastoral service will still be available 24 hours daily. We will carry our weekly news item in The Purcell Register.

Westside:

times as the years went along that it is not a good thing that the family altar had begun to gather dust.

Isn't it very appropriate that now—so many years later—that the family altar is almost all the worship we have left across the world, at least for a time!

Few churches around the country will be gathering together on this coming Lord's Day. It is almost as if we are exiled on Patmos. I suppose there will be fewer worship services this coming Sunday than there have been in more than 500 years, since way back in the Dark Ages when the church took wings of an eagle and flew into the wilderness, according to Revelation.

We are not in the Dark Ages today, as such, because our religion is not being oppressed by political powers. But we are in a bit of a dark time. Even with this, we know the Lord has led us safe thus far, and—as says the songwriter—the Lord surely will lead us home.

Oh, I know: There will be online worship services, and that is commendable. We know, of course—as with any replacement—the copy can hardly hold a light to the original.

But we have something else, and I think you are going to find it is the next-best thing to actual church worship. It is the restoration of my Uncle Alton's family altar. Oh, I know it isn't his, per se, but I cannot think of one without thinking of the other.

If nothing else good comes from everything we are seeing now, one good thing we know is this: The family altar is going to return, and it will return in a blaze of glory. It was all but gone yesterday, but it is everywhere to be found today. That would make my auburn-headed Uncle Alton proud.

The family altar is completely undenominational, too. It would little matter what church the friend down the street attended when he found himself spending the night with that little family on Truitt Avenue.

I'm glad of that. Here is a worship, right in your living room, that puts everybody on equal footing. There we all read together, sing together, and pray together, joining hands to learn a little bit more of what we need to be to get to heaven.

Through the years Uncle Alton reminded me just how biblical these often-impromptu Bible studies were: Abraham would always build an altar to serve the Lord in his day, he would say, as did Isaac and Jacob, and all the patriarchs. The world during that patriarchal age didn't have a church to go to. No, they would mark key and blessed moments in their lives with a freewill offering on an altar of stone.

We have come to such a moment in life, as well. We can mark this moment, without a doubt, as a key one in the history of all of our lives. Of that, we are sure. We do not know exactly what the Lord is saying to us, perhaps.

But we know assuredly—that phrase sounding an awfully lot like the language we'd read in that big black Bible on those lovely altar nights—that He is saying something. The Lord has something in mind, and we would all do well to pay attention. If nothing else, this is a time for us to dig deeper than we ever have spiritually and try to draw closer to God.

When we gather with our family this evening, or on Sunday, in our living rooms for the only public worship you may have available, I am glad you nor I will need to slay an animal to offer on an altar of stone.

Those days are long past. You will only need your family, a few old Bibles you have stacked around the house, maybe a songbook or two, and a family anxious to give to the Lord the very best it has to offer—much as in the Old Testament days.

Blessings to you and your family as you revive this old-time tradition. Build you an altar today—maybe for the first time in a long, long time—and gather your family around it, and remember how much better the world is when the fire from that altar is burning.

And when the crisis ends, keep the altar's fire burning for many years to come.

That, I know, would make my auburn-headed Uncle Alton proud. ~ Steven Ray Bowen

OLV:

Christians is to not lose this crisis as opportunity. For us, it is pandemic as potential. And the potential is a new way of being as family, as community, and even as individuals.

This is also an opportunity for our faith to shine in two important ways: First, we are asked to give up a little bit of individual freedom for the sake of the collective good. The social distancing puts a cramp on our normal lifestyles—the way we like to hug one another, play sports together, sit in classes together. But we sacrifice it for the greater good of the broader community—the health of those who are most vulnerable to disease, and those are all around us.

Theologically, it is Christ on the Cross who gave his life for the ransom of many, for the salvation of the collective good. But practically, we give up individual freedoms out of love of our neighbor, even the neighbors who we cannot see but are protected by our proper practices of hygiene and social distancing.

Secondly, we are already practiced in the art of keeping our death before us. As the Psalm says (Psalm 16) "I say to the LORD, you are my Lord, you are my only good. I keep the Lord always before me, because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved." In other words, my death is my entrance into the Lord's holy dwelling. Because my death is always before me, I shall not be afraid.

We also read "When you pass through waters, I will be with you; through rivers, you shall not be swept away. When you walk through fire, you shall not be burned, nor will flames consume you. For I, the LORD, am your God, the Holy One of Israel, your savior." (Isaiah 43) This idea of keeping your death before your eyes—might be new to some people. But not to us Christians. By kneeling before the Cross each Lent, we also kneel before the shortness of our own lives—knowing that at any moment we can be diagnosed with cancer or heart disease or (now) an infectious disease.

The Cross that was both an end and a new beginning—with God who is at my right hand.

We do need to be creative, to be generous, and to be considerate in how what we do as individuals affects the larger community. But we need not be afraid.

Our weekend Masses and Holy Week liturgies will be videotaped and available on our Facebook page and on our website at ourladyofvictorypurcell.org.

Obituaries

Glenda F. (Freeze) Ward

Glenda Ward, of Washington, Okla., a devoted mother, grandmother, retired nurse and faithful child of God, died Thursday, March 26, 2020, following a brief illness. She was 75.

Born Glenda Fay Freeze on June 12, 1944, in Carnegie, Okla., Glenda and her twin sister Lynda Mae (Freeze) Moore were the last of eight children born to Arlie E. and Pearl G. (Sipes) Freeze.

Glenda spent her formative years in rural Kiowa Co., Okla., where her father farmed, attending Mountain View Public School.

In 1960, Glenda, along with her parents and twin sister, moved to a farm on Walnut Creek west of Purcell, Okla. Glenda attended Purcell High School for her junior and senior years before graduating with the Dragon Class of 1962.

The Freeze family's move to Purcell proved to be fortuitous: Glenda quickly made friends with many of the students in her school, including a trio of sisters who would eventually introduce her to their uncle, who was home on leave from the U.S. Army.

Through this introduction, Glenda began a courtship with Robert H. Ward Jr., and the two were married on August 24, 1962. Glenda and Robert, who died in 2009, were married 47 years, and made homes in Oklahoma City, Moore, Okla., and Dayton, Ohio, ultimately settling on a small acreage in rural McClain Co., Okla., near the town of Washington. In the home they built together, the couple raised four children: Robert (Trace) III, Erin, Kristin and Josh. Glenda remained in this love-filled home the rest of her life, a home that served as the default location for any and all family activities.

After early jobs working for Kerr-McGee and the State Chamber of Commerce, Glenda later spent 12 years as a school bus driver for Washington Public Schools. Proving that determination has no expiration date, Glenda returned to academia later in life, earning a nursing degree from Oklahoma City Community College shortly before her 50th birthday. Glenda went on to become a highly respected nurse in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit of Norman Regional Hospital, where she worked for 17 years before retiring.

Glenda's great compassion for people, her sharp mind, love of children and faith in God were on full display in the hospital where she excelled in what is often considered the most difficult job in nursing. In retirement, Glenda spent several years as a volunteer in the same NICU unit from which she retired, donating her time to help feed and comfort premature babies.

Glenda loved international travel, reading and studying her Bible. She was a highly skilled Moon player who also enjoyed word puzzles, Hallmark movies, dining out, music and maintaining an active, healthy lifestyle. Whether it was besting her family at the domino table or in a game of H-O-R-S-E in the driveway, Glenda taught her children and grandchildren what it meant to compete with integrity and grace in both victory and defeat.

Her grit and determination helped pave the way for her to be a two-time breast cancer survivor, victories she credited to God.

To know Glenda was to know her unwavering optimism, unrelenting smile and never-ending faith in God. Glenda remained an active member of Central Church of Christ in Moore for nearly half a century, where she taught Sunday School and volunteered for a variety of different roles that allowed her to serve her church family. Her trust in God and the knowledge that she would inherit the Kingdom of Heaven buoyed Glenda through life's most difficult moments and served as a source of comfort and inspiration for her family whom she led, and united, with love.

Glenda was preceded in death by her husband, Robert Hendon Ward Jr.; her parents, Arlie and Pearl Freeze, as well as her siblings Maxine Fuchs, Gene Freeze, Arlene Mitchell, Cleta Wooldridge and an infant brother.

Glenda is survived by four children: Robert H. (Trace) Ward III and wife, Tanya, of Shawnee, Okla.; Erin Skero of Moore; Kristin Voskuhl and husband, Eric, of Edmond, Okla.; Josh Ward and wife, Sherri, of Norman, Okla. She is also survived by two sisters, Delta Wear of Washington, Okla., and her twin sister Lynda Moore of Goldsby, Okla., along with numerous nieces, nephews and friends. Glenda's most cherished role in life was that of Mommy to her eight grandchildren whom she adored and with whom she spent most of her free time. The adoration was mutual, as evidenced by the love and devotion shown to her by her grandchildren Alyssa, Gabriel, Gideon, Zach, Justin, Julia, Katy Sue and Ryan.

Glenda was laid to rest in Purcell's Hillside Cemetery, in a private service officiated by her nephew, Darrin Wear. Her family will welcome all friends and family to a celebration of her life, which will take place in her home church at a later date.

Double takes

One small school, 10 sets of twins

Jeanne Grimes
The Purcell Register

The assignment was so simple. Call area schools to see if any twins or triplets were enrolled.

Take pictures of them and wrap it all up in a nice little feature.

Well, it wasn't here a set, there a set.

Calls to Washington Public Schools revealed an amazing 15 sets of twins attending class in the small district.

The breakdown was 10 sets in the elementary school, two in the middle school and three at the high school.

Purcell Public Schools reported five sets of twins each at the elementary and intermediate schools, as well as two sets of twins and one set of triplets at the junior high school.

The high school didn't respond to calls or emails before the district closed for spring break and remained shuttered due to the coronavirus.

Wayne Public Schools has three sets of twins – two at the elementary school and one at the high school.

Across the river in Lexington, the count was two sets each at the elementary and intermediate schools and one set at the high school.

This week The Purcell Register will introduce you to the twins of Washington Elementary.

They are Kate and Lucy Hamm, pre-K; Hunter and Hudson Harris and Austin and Braxton Blackburn, kindergarten; Seth and Strydr Flora and Carson and Grayson Wesley, first grade; Evan and Wyatt Harryman, second grade; Cade and Colt Giltner, Anna and Bear Mitchell and Brynlee and Kynlee Mize, third grade; and Bo and Luke Nash, fourth grade.

Next week, meet another 10 sets of twins from Purcell Elementary and Purcell Intermediate Schools.

McClain County Under-sheriff Landy Offolter said the Supreme Court order does not affect the sheriff's department.

"It's not affecting us at all," Offolter said.

So far, the order is not affecting Court Clerk Pam Beller's office.
