Dr. Danny Melson retires Says 'goodbye' to kids

By DAWN HANKINS dhankins@t-g.com

From croup to sensory processing disorder, local pediatrician, Dr. Danny Melson, has diagnosed it all. More over, he's been a confidant and encourager for thousands of patients, moms and dads the last 40 plus years.

He doesn't mind being called the local "baby doctor." After all, treating adolescents has been his life.

But, with a laugh, he says it's pretty clear that he's now getting rather great-grandfatherly. He's been treating generations; he now has 7 great-grandchildren.

Come Christmas, he won't be treating kiddos for flu, colds or what ails them. That's the hardest part of it all, parting ways with the patients, he recently said.

As he talked, his office staff at the Northside Professional Building were removing photos from the waiting room. That's a little tough, they advised, to see a once very loud and lively waiting room now so quiet and empty.

The practice has storage units all over town filled with medical charts. Moving a pediatrician's office is not for the faint of heart, the doc explained. "We've got boxes everywhere . . . moving equipment here and there. It's much more difficult, in my opinion, closing a practice than opening one."

As for his personal life, he notes that his two sons, Timmy and Josh, were small when he was in medical school decades ago. Wife, Linda, held most of the parenting responsibilities by default.

While he was treating everyone else's children, he regrettably missed out on his own fatherly experiences, he notes. So he plans to spend more time with his family during his retirement years, perhaps even travel.

While the pandemic didn't nudge him into retirement, he said he won't miss that. But it was a medical experience to witness.

Becky Miller is new Southside principal

T-G STAFF REPORT

Bedford County School Superintendent Tammy Garrett recently announced the promotion of Becky Miller to principal at Southside Elementary. Miller's first official day as principal will be Monday, Dec. 12.

Miller, who has served as Cascade Elementary's assistant principal since 2021, replaces Stefanie Landis, who resigned as principal earlier this month.

"We're excited to have Mrs. Miller on board at Southside Elementary after gaining experience as assistant principal," said Garrett. "She has extensive experience in the Response to Intervention process, or RTI, for accelerating student learning in literacy, and she is an instructional leader, especially at the elementary level.

Prior to Cascade Elementary, Miller was in the Bedford County Schools (BCS) central office as the RTI coordinator for 2 years. In this role, Miller served all BCS with strategies for providing effective, high-quality, instruction and progress monitoring. She was instrumental as well with applying support strategies for struggling students.

Miller is in her 19th year in education, which included teaching in Rutherford County at the elementary level before transitioning to instructional coach at both the elementary and middle school levels.

The new, local principal also served at the state level in the areas of standards development, standards trainings for teachers and assessment committees. Miller earned her bachelor's in elementary education and her master of education in administration and supervision from Middle Tennessee State University.

Miller and husband, Matthew, have been married for 30 years; they have two adult sons, Jacob and Mitchell. Residents of Bedford County, they attend Fair Haven Baptist Church.

"Mrs. Miller has had a great mentor in Cascade Elementary School Principal Robin Adcock in forming relationships with students and teachers," said Garrett. "She has a passion for students and their success, which will serve her well and will be a great asset for Southside Elementary."

Bedford County Schools are on Thanksgiving break Nov. 21-25.

Five years of 'mess' Longview couple fights septic issues

By ZOË WATKINS zwatkins@t-g.com

Greg and Trudy Heerdink of Longview have endured, in their words, "5 years of hell."

Greg bought his Longview Road property in 2012, expecting to build his retirement life in the peaceful countryside.

However, with how the property was divided up when it was sold, the Heerdinks' septic lines ended up being in their neighbor's property. When the former neighbors decided to do excavation work, the septic lines were broken, he said.

While in Indiana, Greg said he had a large excavating company for 50 years, so he has knowledge of what's gone wrong. "They claimed they didn't know anything about the septic lines," said Greg. And so began the Heerdinks' yearslong court battles with their neighbors and the former property owner. (The T-G is currently trying to get in contact with that property owner for his comments.)

With their first lawyer Tamra Smith, the Heerdinks were asked to get a soil scientist and inspector. He said they called some 30 companies, but none wanted to deal with the lawsuit.

"We finally got to see Judge [James] Cox, got our new lawyer, got our new inspector . . . But the judge threw the case out and we had to start over," said Greg. They remain unclear as to why their case got thrown out.

"We went to all the officials—the commissioners, the county mayor—and nobody would help us," he said. "They told us they felt sorry for us but didn't do anything."

COVID-19 and children

As for COVID-19, he's treated cases in children over the last couple of years. "It didn't seem quite as hazardous potentially for children as it was for the geriatric population But, that virus was a little strange, because it would fool you sometimes."

He's seen it render seemingly healthy people in this community useless. Others who had more health issues often seemed to do better.

The Shelbyville physician has always done a lot of research within this practice. He witnessed how COVID-19 seemed to have shifted the entire viral process across the board.

A lot of his patients, those who had previously been hospitalized, also had co-existing respiratory syncytial virus or RSV, he revealed. He explained that the RSV season is typically between November and April. But during the pandemic, RSV was showing up in the summer months.

As for the flu, "We went there for a while, early on when COVID first hit, and we didn't see much flu. It was sort of like flu just disappeared. But now, it's back this season. We're seeing several cases of flu, already, now."

Dr. Melson notes COVID, in relation to the children treated in his office, wasn't much more serious in symptoms than the flu. He knows after all these years how serious influenza can be for kids.

"We lose kids across the country, with the flu. We lose adults with, the flu. You don't usually hear about those cases"

Being honest, he's naturally seen a lot of boogers in all forms, fashions and colors. But seriously, while he has treated countless strains of bacteria over the years, Dr. Melson said COVID-19 was really odd from a medical science perspective.

He described it as "just a genetic piece of material—one waiting on a human cell to take it up." The seasoned doc advised that the cellular system follows "instructions," which is to make proteins, etc., he explained. It's an experience he'll never forget as a physician.

"A lot of the antivirals that we use are designed to either keep the virus from attaching to the cell or keep the virus from penetrating inside the cell—to take over the cellular machinery and the raw materials. That's what viruses do."

Bottomline, he advises how viruses do not have brain cells. "They can't do anything on their own. They need our own cells to do the work for them."

What's in store for the baby doc?

Upon "retirement," he likely won't write books or submit to medical journals. But Dr. Danny said he loves to teach.

"I really enjoy teaching my patients and their families about the disease process . . . what's going on and how to manage problems at home."

He said he believes in giving parents as much information as possible in relation to their child's illness. And he thinks that's been a comfort to many families over the years. ". . . a time to sleep for me too."

When little "Johnny" wakes up with a croupy cough at 2 a.m., they know the four to five things they can do to relieve that cough and save the child from further respiratory problems. He said they can then come into the office the next morning.

Most locals know by now he's a gentle doctor with that preferred bedside manner. Dr. Melson advises, "If you don't know how to do that and you have a really sick child in the middle of the night, it can be terrifying."

His career has been filled with advising parents to put their croupy child in a steamed bathroom or take them outside for some fresh air. "I always wanted my patients to leave the office with some sort of idea as to what I thought was going on with them and how we planned to manage it."

Of course he always told them to call him. "It served us well. We've been happy with the way things have gone."

He estimates he's treated thousands of patients. His office has served through adolescence years but that definition has even changed over the years.

"The insurance companies started making parents insure their children until age 26. We had a lot who didn't want to leave. So, that was a way to nudge two more years into their care."

By then, it was time for the second generation of patients to enter the office. The rest is of course history.

Vaccines and antibiotics

While his early career included treating chicken pox cases, Dr. Melson said that illness and others, thanks to vaccines, are becoming a thing of the past. "We rarely see chicken pox anymore. It's been decades since I've seen a true case of red measles."

Still, there's more disease lurking around, including dangerous strains of bacteria. It's an ongoing process, learning and treating the diseases of adolescence.

Dr. Melson notes that his office began its own testing in-house. Over the years, they come up with a lot of "simple" tests to do in office, such as the rapid Coronavirus test and rapid RSV test. "In the past . . . years ago, our biggest concern was to rule out bacterial things early on, if we could, because we only wanted to use antibiotics for bacterial things, because antibiotics don't really do anything to treat a viral infection—never have, never will."

Using antibiotics unnecessarily leads to resistant bacteria, he said. "I think there's a lot of resistant bacteria out there. And, the more we abuse antibiotics, the more we're likely to get resistant bacteria."

Sinus infections and bronchitis are viral, the doctor reveals. But in today's society of free information, he said it is sometimes difficult to convince parents/patients that they don't need antibiotics.

Children's medicine is unique, he said. But he tries to help families understand the basis of an illness.

Closing the practice

Again, behind every good pediatrician is the spouse, usually taking care of your own children. When asked how long she's worked at Dr. Melson's office, Linda explained with a smile, "On and off forever."

She grew up in Bell Buckle and Dr. Melson in Pleasant Grove. They began the practice here in August 1981.

Out of his total 44 years in medicine, 41 of them have been spent right in this community. "This is home for us," he shared recently from his office.

In fact, Dr. Charles Stimpson's mom was his 4th grade teacher. Dr. Stimpson and the other doctors in the Northside Professional building will be moving their practices, with the exception of Dr. Sammy Sells, who he's worked closely with for years; they're across the hall from one another. (Dr. Sells has recently retired.)

Dr. Melson and Dr. Sells have been partners in medicine, but also really good friends. They were even neighbors at one time.

In fact, they worked so close that people often got them confused, he shared. "It got to the point where we stopped correcting them," said Dr. Danny.

The Northside

Professional Building where they've given most of their lives is changing. Rutherford Primary Care, Inc., (Primary Care and Hope) made the offer on their building. They will bring their own communication center here to operate their rural health clinic, according to Dr. Melson. Basically, they bought the building, so the doctors, including Dr. Melson, had to move.

But, Dr. Danny realizes it is time. Now, he just needs time, and a lot of physical space, to make it official. He laughs about the number of storage units they have in the area.

No doubt, Dr. Danny is one of the last remaining, life-long pediatricians to serve Shelbyville and beyond. There are, however, some new pediatricians who've moved here with various medical groups.

At 1701 North Main St., B suite, the toys and books which served to occupy little sick folks are now packed. A lot of the furniture will be donated.

The little children's step stools which gave them courage to climb upon the examine table are now gone. The stack of lollipops has dwindled.

Dr. Danny's patients have now transferred to medical practices. He's still helping with that process and likely will for a while.

When it came to saying goodbye to the children this month, Dr. Danny admits he's had to choke back more than a few tears. Wife, Linda, ever the doctor's support and confidant, notes, "One little girl chose to come to our house."

Greg Heerdink shows his septic tank, which he says hasn't been working for 5 years. They've resorted to using a portable toilet.

Mess

The Times-Gazette called Commissioner Bill Anderson, who is familiar with the Heerdinks' situation. He said it sounds like a terrible situation but did not want to give any further comment.

In short, Greg says they've spent thousands of dollars in court costs, including the selling some of their cattle—only to still have no working septic system.

At one point, a 5-gallon bucket filled with saw dust served as their toilet. Today, they are renting a portable toilet, which sits next to their exposed septic tank. Often, they're greeted by wasps and snakes nesting in the toilet, they said.

It's far from the ideal retired life the 70-year-old thought he would have in Bedford County.

Their septic tank sits close to their house with 5 years of weed and grass growth covering it. There's a pump nearby that pumps the waste away from the property because, according to Greg, they were sold a piece of land that they can't perc.

A perc test determines the water absorption rate of the soil (or the percolation rate.) This test is used to determine whether a septic system can be installed.

They stated how now, they need a court order to get an easement—which they should've had to start with—and fence in their septic system. Heerdink said they had an "implied easement" but didn't know where it was located since they had no paperwork in the deed specifying it when they purchased the property.

"[The property owner] . . . did not put it on the closing that there was a septic up there. We got the paperwork from Environmental Columbia showing where it was permitted and paid for. That's what we've been fighting for," said Trudy.

The T-G also contacted Joshua Jenkins of the Hagan-Jenkin Law Group in Murfreesboro, who is serving as the Heerdinks' current lawyer. He said he preferred to give "no comment" since the case is pending.

The Heerdinks' next court date is Dec. 9. They hope the judge will grant them access to the easement, which Greg said they should've had access to 5 years ago.

"The happiest day in my life will be when I see this Tennessee sign in my rearview mirror," he said. "We're tired of this."

Ex-deputy Guthrie case: The rest of the story

By TERENCE CORRIGAN

In today's "Issue" we look at the results of the appeals court ruling which now opens records of secret rape cases. Terry Corrigan is a former T-G editor and has followed this case of rape, concerning a former local law enforcement deputy, from beginning to end.

By TERENCE CORRIGAN
Special to the T-G

Prosecutors said former Bedford County Sheriff's Office Deputy Joseph Matthew Guthrie viciously raped a registered nurse at his home on Nov. 1, 2019. The victim, a 2016 MTSU graduate, who grew up in Murfreesboro, has since moved out of state.

In the June 2020 indictment of Guthrie for aggravated rape, it was stated that Guthrie did "intentionally, knowingly or recklessly engage in unlawful sexual penetration" of the victim causing her "bodily injury."

In a plea deal, on March 26, 2021, Guthrie agreed to plead guilty to a substantially lesser offense, aggravated assault and was sentenced to 3 years of probation, of which he must complete a minimum of 30%, about a year. He was not fined and he won't be listed on the Tennessee Sex Offender Registry.

Guthrie also agreed to surrender his law enforcement certification (which would have nevertheless been revoked due to his felony conviction.) He was ordered to pay $100 a month in court costs and to not contact the victim or her family.

Guthrie spent no time behind bars.

If the case had gone to trial, and Guthrie was found guilty of aggravated rape, a Class A felony, he would have faced a sentence of 15 to 60 years in prison and could have been fined up to $50,000.

But that didn't happen. When the terms of Guthrie's sentence were made public in a news article on April 27, 2021, it drew many online complaints, alleging the relatively light sentence was due to a virulent "good old boy" network.

It goes deeper than that.

SECRET INVESTIGATION

Because Guthrie was a Bedford County law enforcement officer, the sheriff's department did not conduct the investigation. Tennessee Bureau of Investigation (TBI) investigated and TBI records are not available to the public according to their state law.

The law (TCA 10-7-504) reads: "All investigative records of the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation ... shall not be open to inspection by members of the public. The information contained in such records shall be disclosed to the public only in compliance with a subpoena or an order of a court of record. The only other people who have access to TBI investigation records are the governor and committees of the Tennessee legislature."

Given the secrecy of TBI investigations, the only opportunity for anyone in the public to find out what had allegedly happened in this sheriff deputy's home on the first day of November 2019 would be at the sentencing hearing.

If there's no trial, the last chance to find out what prosecutors think happened in a crime is at the sentencing hearing. At sentencing hearings, the prosecutors orally present the facts in the case. In this statement, prosecutors say what they believed could have been proven if a case went to a trial.

Trials and sentencing hearings, such as plea agreements, are normally conducted in Bedford County Circuit Court, that is, in the county where the crime occurred. In Bedford County, the Guthrie case had gained notoriety and aroused considerable public interest, as it involved a sheriff's deputy.

Guthrie's plea agreement hearing was taken to Moore County where there is no routine court coverage by local media. As Guthrie's plea hearing was not listed on the Bedford County Circuit Court docket, no local media was aware of it and no journalists attended the hearing. The facts of the case, it seemed, were forever concealed.

Assistant Attorney General Mike Randles said the decision to move the plea agreement hearing to Moore County was not to hide anything. He described it as an expedient move, striking while the iron was hot. He said it was to settle the case with a plea agreement before Guthrie had a chance to change his mind and choose to go to trial.

The last possibility to find out the facts of the case was to listen to the audio recording. But, until August 2022, audio recordings were kept secret.

AUDIO RECORDING IS NOT A RECORD?

On Nov. 2, 2021,

Covy's attorney, John T. Bobo, requested a public records request (a copy of the audio recording of the Guthrie sentencing hearing to the T-G.)

"The court recording that you have requested is not subject to public records request pursuant by Tennessee Supreme Court Rule 34(2)(c). I also contacted the State Counsel for Tennessee Open Records who confirmed this position."

But 10 months later, on Aug. 23, 2022, the Tennessee Court of Appeals lifted the veil of secrecy from courtroom audio recordings. Judge Kristi M. Davis (a judge of the Tennessee Court of Appeals Eastern Section) authored the appeals court opinion.

Honorable Judge Davis stated, "For more than a century, Tennessee Courts have recognized the public's right to inspect government records," Davis wrote. "This right extends to court records ... There can be no doubt then, that the audio recordings are public records."

Fourteen days after the Appeals Court ruling, county attorney, Bobo approved a second records request for the audio recording for the details are appalling, especially given Guthrie's position in the community.

The Facts

According to Assistant DA Randles' statement of the facts, as presented in Moore County on March 26, 2021, on Oct. 31, 2019, several people had gathered for a cookout at the home of Guthrie and his "then wife." The victim and Guthrie's wife were long-time friends and the victim had stayed in their home previously.

"It was not an uncommon occurrence," Randles said. "There was some drinking going on. The party started to wind down. The plan was for the victim to spend the night. She had a room she typically stayed in. There was a bathroom near it but the hot water was not working that night. She (the victim) was going to take a shower late at night so she went to another bathroom. To get to the other bathroom, the victim had to walk across the house, passing through the kitchen. In the kitchen, as she returned to her bedroom, were Guthrie and another man. The victim was reportedly wearing a towel. As she passed the two men, Guthrie reportedly commented on the victim's breasts ..."

The appalling story continues.

"Sometime later, perhaps as much as an hour later," Randles said, "the victim got up to go to the kitchen to get something to drink." While she was in the kitchen, the defendant walked up behind her, startled her," Randles continued, "whispered in her ear."

It was then that Guthrie reportedly sexually assaulted the victim. (The documented details of what happened next are sexually graphic.)

Randles continued with his case. "When the victim got back to her room, she was screaming and crying which awakened a friend she was sharing the room with. She was very upset and emotional. The victim called her boyfriend at the time to come pick her up as she was 'too intoxicated to drive.'

Randles said in court that the victim delayed reporting the incident, thinking she would not be believed. This is not uncommon with victims of rape.

Randles said Guthrie told TBI investigators he had no recollection of the events the night of the incident. He reportedly told investigators he had no memory of the events because he was "too intoxicated to drive."

This is just one criminal case of which the public needs to be informed. Point being that there were 20 reports of forcible rape in Bedford County in 2021, according to the TBI report "2021 Crime in Tennessee."

Gifts Grandma can treasure

Dear Heloise: Regarding gifts for Grandma, as a great grandmother, my favorite gifts are being taken some place ... a zoo, a musical, a lunch, a museum or any place I wouldn't normally go to on my own. After my mother passed, I found night robes and some gifts with the tags still on them, but I know she treasured the musical productions we took her to see.

DEALING WITH YARD LEAVES

Dear Heloise: It's that time of year again when our yards are knee-deep in leaves. Here's a hint to make bagging them a little less work.

If you're using a trash can and bag liner, and the bag gets full, you'll need to remove it from the can. Even though the leaves do not weigh very much, they feel like a ton. So, here's what to do: Drill/poke a few holes in the bottom rim of the trash can so the leaves pull out very easily. -- Fred, Colorado Springs, Colorado

Caregiver charged with elder abuse, neglect

By DAVID MELSON
dmelson@t-g.com

An investigation by special agents with the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation Medicaid Fraud Control Division, along with other agencies, has resulted in the arrest of a Shelbyville man, charged with the abuse and neglect of elderly patients.

Cody Prestwood, 34, a licensed practical nurse at an assisted living facility, was responsible for abuse and neglect of patients, the TBI said. The name of the facility was not revealed in the TBI press release, but Prestwood's Facebook page lists him as a Licensed Practical Nurse at Carriage House Inn.

Cody Prestwood

The TBI joined the investigation in January after referral from Adult Protective Services and the Tennessee Department of Health.

The investigation revealed that from December 2021 through August 2022, Prestwood failed on multiple occasions to document alleged incidents of abuse and failed to seek proper treatment for the individuals involved.

Prestwood was arrested by the Bedford County Sheriff's Office. He is charged with two counts of aggravated abuse of an elderly adult, two counts of neglect of an elderly adult, and one count of abuse of an elderly adult. Prestwood was booked into Bedford County Jail on a $250,000 bond.

Landscaper charged

A man accused of taking money from a Bell Buckle-area woman faces multiple charges.

Johnny Robert Bowen Jr., 43, of Lafayette Street, is charged with elder abuse, actions by a home improvement provider, and fraudulent use of a credit/ATM card.

"He was hired by a Bell Buckle-area woman to do a landscaping job," Detective Chris Brown of the Bedford County Sheriff's Office said.

"He did a small portion of the work but took cash payments and her credit card to buy more supplies for the job."

Bowen allegedly didn't complete the job and eventually used the credit card to purchase items for his personal use, Brown said.

A total of approximately $48,000 was taken from the then-71-year-old victim, according to Brown.

Bowen, who operates Quality Plants and Landscaping, posted $100,000 bond, Brown said.

Church vandalized

More BB shots have been fired into Lone Oak Church of Christ, Highway 130 West.

Seven windows were shot by BBs between Nov. 6-13, the BCSO was told. More damage was found Wednesday along with additional BBs.

Drug charges

Charges were filed against a man who allegedly tried to ride away on a bicycle from an officer in a patrol car Monday.

Michael Henry Welter Jr., 43, threw a bag containing 0.3 grams of methamphetamine and a small amount of marijuana toward the courthouse as he rode around the Shelbyville square with Officer James Sharp behind him.

Welter, listed as "homeless" in the Shelbyville Police Department report, was arrested shortly afterwards. He was charged with simple possession and on a previous warrant for theft. Bond was set at $2,000.

Drugs were allegedly found on a man at a North Main Street convenience store shortly after midnight Tuesday.

Officers called to do a "welfare check" on Randall J. Swindle, 52, of Midland Road, allegedly found a hypodermic needle containing liquid methamphetamine in his vehicle, a glass pipe with drug residue in his clothing, and a suboxone strip in his wallet.

Swindle was arrested at the RaceTrak store.

Charges of possession of schedule 2 and 3 drugs and paraphernalia and violations of parole and probation were filed against Swindle. Bond was set at $16,000.

Methamphetamine was confiscated from a vehicle during a traffic stop Tuesday night on North Main Street, police said.

Wendy Janette Wallace, 50, of Fayetteville, had a malfunctioning brake light, Officer Jonathan Evans' report said. Evans said he smelled marijuana and was told by Wallace the vehicle was uninsured and she didn't have her license present.

A computer check showed Wallace had been arrested four times previously for driving on a license suspended due to failure to provide insurance or pay fines. Field Training Officer Dylan Bliss and Evans searched the vehicle and allegedly found a container with a "shard of meth" and a pipe used to smoke methamphetamine.

Wallace was charged with possession of a schedule 2 drug and paraphernalia, fifth offense driving on a suspended license and violation of the financial responsibility and vehicle light laws. Bond was set at $8,500.

Disturbance

A man accused of causing a disturbance in Vanderbilt Bedford Hospital's emergency room Monday night was charged with disorderly conduct.

Dakota G. Hare, 27, of Murfreesboro, was arrested after police were called three times due to alleged threats toward nursing staff. Hare is accused of breaking out of restraints and swinging at staff members.

Police said Hare caused no incidents when en route to the nearby Bedford County Jail. Bond was set at $2,500.

Dangerous move

An argument turned dangerous Tuesday afternoon when a young woman angrily grabbed the steering wheel of her grandmother's vehicle and ran it into a ditch, police said.

Shelbyville Officer Jerry Lawrence said in a report he watched the car swerve "violently" off Harts Chapel Road.

Joshlynn Bliss Northcutt, 19, of Mountain View Road, Bell Buckle, allegedly admitted the action. The grandmother said she had refused to give Northcutt money. Northcutt "threw a fit" and, when the grandmother said she was taking her to the nearby

Bedford County Sheriff's Office, grabbed the wheel, Lawrence's report said.

Northcutt was charged with reckless endangerment, assault, and domestic assault. Bond was set at $3,000.

Rider gets away

A woman given a ride along Highway 41A North took a rifle, backpack, and speaker from the man she encountered and disappeared after they stopped at a store along the way Wednesday, a BCSO report said.

The man said he hadn't known her earlier and only knew her as "Anita."

Blue light blues

A second driver within two weeks has been stopped for driving with blue lights resembling those on law enforcement vehicles.

Officer Andrew Koehler said a car-wide solid blue light appeared from a distance to resemble a police cruiser with cruise lights activated.

The driver, Israel Gomez Ortiz, was cited for violation of the state light law, driving on a suspended license, and financial responsibility.

Hit-and-runs

Two drivers were charged with leaving the scene of an accident alleged hit-and-runs Wednesday.

Tina McKennis Cox, 27, of Landers Street, hit another vehicle at a Landers Street apartment complex, police said. Cox was also charged with DUI, open container, and refusing voluntary consent to a blood test.

Martin Salazar Balderas, 42, of Landers Street, allegedly drove through the scene of an injury accident on South Thompson Street and struck the mirror of an unoccupied Shelbyville Fire Department truck. Salazar complained that the fire vehicle was blocking the roadway, the report said.

Charges of driving without a license and not driving with due care were also filed against Salazar.

Jail intake

The following were arrested since Monday by the Bedford County Sheriff's Office, Shelbyville Police Department, Tennessee Highway Patrol, or 17th Judicial District Drug Task Force. They are only charged; guilt or innocence will be determined by the courts.

Local PA is woman's club guest
Women's health is program topic

By ZOË WATKINS
zwatkins@t-g.com

Shelbyville Woman's Club recently hosted Jessica Parham, a physician's assistant at Womble Health Care and co-owner of The Skin Project, to talk about women's health.

Preventative health

Parham has practiced for almost 15 years, though she admits primary care is the last place she thought she would end up. Instead, she enjoyed working in emergency medicine or in surgery. "The ER is where I originally fell in love with medicine," she said.

However, today she has the opportunity to help people before they even need the emergency room. "It turns out actually practicing in medicine, I have learned that if we as health care providers help our patients be more proactive with their health, we can prevent a considerable amount of those urgent and surgical visits."

But preventative health is a day-to-day, week-to-week, month-to-month practice. And, often, it can be more complicated for women to keep track with current guidelines.

Women sometimes only get check-ups with their OBGYN, whose main goal is to give Pap smears and breast examines. So other major check-up items can be missed. That's why it's also crucial to also get regular physical check-ups.

Typical examinations include a pelvic examine with a Pap smear (which screens for cervical cancer). Pap smears are recommended for women ages 21 to 65, every three years, along with high-risk HPV testing beginning at age 30.

A breast exam with mammograms should begin at age 40. "Breast cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in women, so screening is of upmost importance," said Parham.

Routine physicals, every one to two years, include checking vital signs, a head-to-toe physical examine, and the opportunity for patients and doctors to talk about any concerns. They also assess cardiovascular risk factors with EKGs.

"Based on the information we're gathering at these appointments, your health care provider is better equipped to make recommendations that are personalized for your well-being," she said. Parham added that these physical examines should also be used to discuss your mental health. Issues like depression and anxiety are far more prevalent than we realize.

Jessica Parham has been a PA for 15 years.

The Skin Project is located at 302 North Main Street in Shelbyville.

One big change that's occurred in the preventative health world in the last two years is the change in age for colon screenings. It used to be 50; now, they begin at age 45 and end around age 75. The age is sooner if there's a family history. Colon cancer is the fourth most common cancer in males and females.

However, traditional colon screenings are getting a new look with techniques which are recommended to people with no family history or symptoms. Many do not require time off from work or bowel prep and only requires patients to send in stool samples.

Parham also mentioned urinary incontinence, which is not often routinely asked about even though it affects up to 1 in 3 women. It's more than an inconvenience as it can lead to infections and irritations as well as depression. "If you are experiencing those symptoms, it is very much worth talking to your provider about," she said.

Skin care

But health doesn't have to be all about screenings and testing but also beauty care, which is a primary reason why Parham started The Skin Project, along with fellow nurses Lynette Womble and Nikkie Turner.

"So as women age, we really got the short-end of the stick. We begin to experience volume loss in the face and will start to have resorption of the bone. We have natural fat pads that begin to sag and cause hollowness in the cheeks...everything begins falling forward so we get more jowling and exaggeration of the nasal labial folds," she said.

The Skin Project opened in 2020 as a cosmetic dermatology practice aimed at helping customers achieve all their skin care goals.

The Skin Project does a variety of procedures such as chemical peels, micro-needling, neurotoxins (like Botox), derma-fillers, and laser hair removal. However, these procedures work best when paired with a consistent skin care routine.

"The countless shelves of beauty products can be incredibly overwhelming and confusing," Parham said.

However, there are ways to simplify a skin care routine through—most importantly—having a routine.

There are three key ingredients to look for are vitamin C, retinol/retinoid, and sunscreen.

Vitamin C defends the skin against "stressors," like pollution, the sun, and smoke and helps prevent the breaks down of collagen to make skin look brighter.

Retinols or retinoids can be a bit more difficult to tolerate, especially for patients with sensitive skin, but they can help with any skin concerns from acne to wrinkles. These products increase cell turnover and stimulate the production of collagen and new blood vessels in the skin.

Finally, sunscreen of at least 30 SPF should be worn everyday whether it's cloudy or sunny. "This step actually reduces the risk of pre-cancerous skincare lesions that can be associated with prolonged sun exposure," said Parham. "The sun can actually damage the DNA in our skin cells, which affects the skin's elasticity, can produce wrinkling, sunspots, pigmentation, dryness..."

The Skin Project is located at their new location of 1302 North Main Street in Shelbyville. For more information call 931-619-6493 or visit <https://theskinproject.co/>.

Musings and Memories

Reasons to be thankful

While looking through my archives at some older columns, I came across one that was written and printed in the Times-Gazette before Thanksgiving of 2012.

I had forgotten about the events I told in that story. It's a good reminder of God's protection, and of God's goodness. And a reminder of our Local Heroes we oftentimes take for granted, the First Responders.

I want to share that column once again. And I want to say, "Happy Thanksgiving!"

"...The other day, my wife and I were busy going about our business around the house.

Lynn was in our granddaughters' room straightening up the toys and hanging clothes in the closet, and little Kori sat on the bed watching her Nana work.

I was getting things ready for a service to be held that evening at a local nursing home.

Our little dog, Buster, was lying in his usual spot, on the rug at the front door, sound asleep.

Suddenly, the smoke alarms started shrieking, and Lynn started calling out, "I smell smoke!"

We ran from room to room trying to find the source of the smoke that was filling the hallway of our house.

Buster starting whining; and Kori was looking around wondering what that loud blaring noise was.

Lynn opened the door to the laundry room and the smoke billowed out from the dryer.

We found the source of the smoke.

I quickly called 911, and told the operator what was going on. He told me to get everyone out of the house and wait for the fire department.

So, I grabbed Kori and Lynn grabbed Buster and we went out to the front yard.

I heard the sirens in the distance and knew that help was on the way.

So, I traded with Lynn, and she took Kori, and I got Buster and put him on his chain, and then I went back inside to assess the situation.

Sure enough, our dryer was on fire.

When the fire truck pulled up outside, I went out to let the fire-fighters know what was going on.

Club hosts 'Scholars for Service'

It's being called a "really neat project" at Shelbyville Central High School, thanks to the National Honor Society. The program, "Scholars for Service," was a recent fundraiser, but developed into so much more, according to school officials.

Experiences and talents were shared in many ways between the students and their "employers" for the day. The event served to provide a service opportunity to student-members, businesses and teachers.

And after all, who wouldn't want help from an NHS member for a day?

My Take

Father

I hate the phrase "new normal" but that is what my mother and I are adjusting to after the death of my father last week.

A lot goes through your mind in the days after the passing of someone you love. As I have mentioned before I wish I had been closer to my father in terms of shared interests.

My father was a simple and humble man, but was known throughout the county. Many of you dropped by the visitation and a great number attended the funeral on a cold Saturday morning. Some of you did both.

Darryl Lewis, Lance Bennett, Ed Bogges and my daughter Sarah Margaret shared their experiences with my father. He was always willing to spend time talking with people, and though he never said anything to me through the years, I realized he was proud of my accomplishments talking to others about what I had done. That meant a lot to me.

I wish I could have climbed the economic ladder the way my father did. He started working at the Princess Theater, now the Capri, at the age of nine. From that point on he purchased every item of clothing he wore and most of the food he ate.

He was poor and many of his classmates through the years never let him forget it. They made fun of him because he had to go to work at such a young age. They would drive by or walk by the theater and jeer at him. No wonder he never attended a reunion of his high school class.

His working life was spent mostly as an insurance agent. He was required to collect at homes on a weekly or monthly basis. Not only did he collect, but he also made friends of most everyone who had purchased a policy from him. He was a successful insurance agent, one of the best in his company. He never called attention to himself and even the higher ups in the company realized and respected his unwillingness to boast.

In December, he and my mother would have been married 70 years. That is a feat almost unheard of this day and time. He was buried in the suit he wore the day he married my mother. Like their marriage, despite the years, it was in great shape.

He would have also been 90 in December. Ironically, he was buried on Nov. 12, which was the day his older brother Grady died last year.

His only request was that his last trip on earth be in the back of the rag-tag black-and-white 1974 Chevrolet truck that was his calling card. I am sure many people pulled to the side of the road on Highway 231 wondering what was going on as we made our way to Fosterville Cemetery.

As my father said many times in recent months, "he had a good life". I know he is having a great eternity as well.

Here's some facts about it:

98 of 102 SCHS members participated. Charge was $20 for the day for the host industry; almost $2,000 was raised for the club. Students were responsible for finding a business or local teacher to work with on Nov. 3. Students went back and helped many of their favorite teachers at SCHS and local middle and elementary schools as well as at the Central Office.

Local businesses that allowed our students to get an idea of what a day was like in their career field were local veterinarians, healthcare providers, communications professionals, assisted living facilities, pharmacies and physical therapists centers, local realtors, law enforcement agencies, local agricultural farms and companies, locally owned small businesses, local food trucks, local churches, local funeral homes, and local industries.

This will be done again on March 1.

They hurried into the house and checked out the dryer, and they agreed with me...

The dryer was on fire. It wasn't long and the firefighters had the fire out and they hauled the dryer out of the house and out onto the driveway.

One of the team members started pulling big wads of lint out of the back of the dryer and we realized what had been on fire.

I opened all the doors in the house to start clearing the smoke out, and one of the firemen got a big fan from the fire truck and put it in the open front door.

That thoughtful Supper Hero was kind enough to remove the holiday wreath from the front door and he laid it on a chair inside.

The whole time all of this activity was buzzing around us, Kori was sitting with Lynn with a look of wonderment on her face.

The wailing smoke alarms and firemen in their suits, and the sirens coming down the street thrilled our little grandbaby!

Buster on the other hand was having a panic attack!

I knew I wasn't going to make it to the nursing home service that evening, so I called one of the men from church and told him what was happening.

Frank assured me that he and his wife, Hazel, would take care of it.

Well, after we thanked our Local Heroes for coming to our aid, and we watched them drive down the street, Lynn and I thought maybe it was time to go look for another dryer.

The old one sat in the driveway, dripping wet, clogged with burned lint, and was now just a piece of Dezotell history.

(And there it sat as a stark reminder of the importance of regularly cleaning the lint out of the dryer hose.)

It happened shortly before the Thanksgiving Holiday. We were so thankful that there was no fire or smoke damage to our house, and that we even had a house to be thankful for.

We were so thankful for all those people who came to our assistance that day.

The 911 operator, who calmly assured me that help was on the way; the fire fighters who quickly got to work when they got to our house and put out the fire and calmed our fears; and to the folks from church who were praying for us and who took over and held a great worship service at the nursing home that evening.

Lynn, Kori, Buster and I are very grateful today. We have a lot to be thankful for this Thanksgiving Season.

God protected us. The firemen came to our aid. And Lynn got a new dryer.

Thank the Lord! Thank the Lord! Thank the Lord! And thank you

Shelbyville Fire Department...."

What a wonderful reminder of the divine protection of the God who watches over His children.

Back in October of 1863, President Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation declaring that the last Thursday in November would be a day of "National Thanksgiving."

America was in the midst of a Civil War at that time, and Lincoln still found reason to be grateful to the Almighty God.

The President, with words of comfort and encouragement, proved to be a true, compassionate leader.

Lincoln's Thanksgiving Proclamation began with these words... "The year that is drawing toward its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties, which are so constantly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they come, others have been added, which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever-watchful providence of Almighty God....

"...The gracious gifts of the Most High God, who while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy."

As the proclamation was coming to a close, President Lincoln wrote...

"I do, therefore, invite my fellow-citizens in every part of the United States, and also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands, to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a Day of Thanksgiving and Praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the heavens."

Today in America, even in the midst of these turbulent times, with schisms in the nation and in the churches, even with troubles in our homes and in our communities, we need to remember all the good that God has done for us.

Our God who is rich in mercy has forgiven our sins, and He sheds His love abroad in our hearts.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow, Praise Him all creatures here below, Praise Him above ye Heavenly Host, Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen."

OH NO...

I JUST HAD A FRIGHTENING THOUGHT.

WELL, THAT'S ONE WAY TO START THE DAY.

WHAT IF YOUR SISTER IS PLANNING TO LEAVE YOUR MOM WITH US WHEN THEY COME OVER FOR THANKSGIVING?

WHAT DO WE DO? ARE WE OBLIGATED TO HAVE YOUR MOM STAY HERE? DO WE JUST SHOW HER THE DOOR? DO WE DRIVE HER BACK TO JACKIE'S AND THEN IT JUST GOES BACK AND FORTH OVER AND OVER?

WHAT?

YOU SAID JACKIE'S BEEN HAVING A TOUGH TIME LIVING WITH YOUR MOM.

SO WHAT IF YOUR SISTER AND RALPH ARE PLANNING TO SNEAK OUT BETWEEN DINNER AND DESSERT AND LEAVE YOUR MOM WITH US?

BUT NOW THAT YOU MENTION IT, WE SHOULD HAVE A PLAN...

I'M THINKING WE NEVER GIVE ANYONE A CHANCE TO GET INSIDE OUR HOUSE. JUST DO THANKSGIVING ON THE FRONT LAWN WITH HEAT LAMPS.

WHAT DO WE DO? ARE WE OBLIGATED TO HAVE YOUR MOM STAY HERE? DO WE JUST SHOW HER THE DOOR? DO WE DRIVE HER BACK TO JACKIE'S AND THEN IT JUST GOES BACK AND FORTH OVER AND OVER?

TED! THAT'S A HORRIBLE THING TO SAY! WE'RE TALKING ABOUT MY MOM!

YOU'RE RIGHT, I'M REALLY SORRY.

I WANT YOU TO DRAW YOUR SIDEARM AND GO ON WITHOUT ME.

SAY THAT AGAIN?

DON'T STOP, DON'T LOOK, BUT THERE'S A LIGHT BEHIND US.

WHATEVER DEVIL WAS INTERESTED IN BACK THERE...?

...IT'S INTERESTED IN US.

IT'S A STEADY LIGHT, NOT AN OPEN FLAME LIKE OURS. I'VE SEEN IT TWICE NOW.

DARLING, NO!! HOW DOES THAT MAKE ANY SENSE?

YOU AND DEVIL GO ON AHEAD. I'LL CATCH UP.

IT DOESN'T.

WHICH IS WHY OUR FRIEND'S GOING TO FALL RIGHT INTO MY HANDS WHEN HE GETS HERE.

BY BOB WEBER JR.

Slylock Fox and Max Mouse were separated when the bridge collapsed. Slylock is without GPS access. Max Mouse needs to get the printed map to the other side so Slylock can continue the mission. How did the fox suggest Max get the map across?

Solution -- Slylock advised Max to take off his sock and use it to throw the weighted sock across the span.

Spot six differences between these panels.

Answer -- Hair, fence, bone, dog's eye, pants and beak.

Eagles ready for Year 2 with Howard at helm

By GARY JOHNSON
Sports Writer

To say Shelbyville Central boys basketball coach Kody Howard is excited about the start of the season would be a huge understatement.

The Golden Eagles played their best at the end of last season with a number of upsets along the way and there are hopes that momentum will carry over to this season after a successful offseason program.

“Over the summer, we worked really hard and played 30 to 40 games to prepare for this year and see what this team was going to be like. We quickly found out that we are going to play hard and guard you hard. We did struggle at times scoring, but the guys have come in and practiced working on their shots,” Howard said.

“Give credit to our seniors from last year in showing these underclassmen how buying into our system pays off after winning the district semifinal game and going into overtime in the district championship.”

The Eagles return four seniors, Marquis Wilson, Isah Alexander, Ty Childress and Evan Conditt, so this team will be young, but athletic and talented.

“We don’t return a lot of experience but I like this team and how hard they work and complete,” Howard said.

Juniors Kyler Trice and

Joe Harris return the bulk of playing experience for Shelbyville Central and will be called upon to help be productive on both ends of the court.

A number of underclassmen will get the opportunity to show their talents and abilities as well.

“We will play at least four sophomores and freshmen so we do have a very young team,” Howard said.

Look for sophomores Zyon Bonner and Rocky Chandler along with freshmen Jack Conditt and 6-7 Tae’Shawn Shelton to contribute and improve as the season progresses.

The Eagles will look to push the ball up the court and try to score in transition but they also realize that they will need to set up their half-court offense to be successful.

Coach Howard thinks District 6-AAAA will be as balanced and competitive as ever with defending district champion Coffee County projected to be the frontrunner.

Shelbyville Central opened the season this past Tuesday with a 62-50 loss at Nolensville.

The Eagles play Summit and Independence on Saturday at Summit.

Kody Howard has the Golden Eagles prepared for Year 2 with him as head coach.

Champs claim opener

T-G STAFF REPORT

HAMPSHIRE — The Cascade Champions tipped off their 2022-2023 season with a monster win at Hampshire on Tuesday night in a Hall of Fame non-district clash.

Eleven different players penciled their way into the scoring column and were led by the senior trio of Lucas Clanton, Jackson Davis and Thomas Gentry, who each reached double figures in Cascade’s 88-28 win over the Hampshire Hawks.

Davis led all scorers with 18 points, while Clanton drilled four treys and added 16.

Gentry chipped in 10 points as well.

Cascade led 20-1 after the first quarter, with the hosts going 1-for-4 from the charity stripe in the opening frame.

Clanton led the way in the opening quarter with eight points, including a 3-pointer, while Davis added six.

That lead ballooned to 30 points by halftime with Cascade pouring on 22 more in the second period.

Seven different Champions scored in the second quarter, with Davis and Gentry combining for 11 points in the quarter.

Not much changed in the third quarter as Cascade connected on four 3-pointers as part of a 27-8 run in the quarter before closing on a 19-8 run in the fourth.

Seven different players for the Hawks scored, but none reached double figures.

While Cascade proved efficient from every inch of the court, one area Cascade struggled in was a the free throw line, where the Champs connected on just 11-of-21 tries.

Cascade hosted Tullahoma in another Hall of Fame game on Thursday in its home opener, however results were unavailable at press time. Visit t-g.com/sports for game recaps from Thursday night.

Second half blast powers Viqueen win

UNIONVILLE —The Community Viqueens trailed at halftime after a sluggish first half but righted the ship with a 45-point second half as the Viqueens opened the season with a 65-49 win over the Fayetteville Lady Tigers in a Hall of Champions contest Tuesday night.

In a quarter of runs, the Viqueens got off to a fast start with a 6-0 run in the first minute of the opening quarter to take a 6-1 lead.

The Viqueen offense stalled for a bit as the Lady Tigers went on a 9-0 run to take a 10-6 advantage before Community scored the final five points of the quarter to take an 11-10 lead to the second quarter. Viqueen fouls played a role in the quarter as Community had trouble finding the basket.

The Lady Tigers took advantage and outscored the Viqueens 13-9 to take a 23-20 lead into the intermission.

“Right off the bat, we had three starters with two fouls and got some minutes out of the bench,” Coach Cody Pierce of the Viqueens said.

“That’s always going to be key in a full season to sub a little bit and get some good minutes,” Pierce added.

With the help of a scoring spree by freshman Anna Haskins, the Viqueens took control in the third quarter.

Haskins scored 10 consecutive points for the Viqueens, including two straight three-point plays as Community broke out of a 25-25 tie to take a lead it would not lose.

M.J. Simmons scored six points from the post as the Viqueens outscored the Lady Tigers 23-11 to take a 43-34 lead to the final quarter.

The Viqueens were 11-15 from the free throw in the quarter as Community gradually increased its lead. Haley Mitchell had seven points while Simmons and Zoey Dixon each had five as the Viqueens took their biggest lead at 63-46 before settling for the 16-point win.

UNIONVILLE — After trailing for the entire game, the Community Vikings fought back to take a 57-56 lead with six seconds left before the Fayetteville Tigers took the ball the length of the court and scored on a layup with one second left as the Vikings fell 58-57 in a Hall of Champions game to open the season Tuesday night.

The gritty Vikings were behind by double digits for a large part of the game before mounting a comeback in the final minutes.

The Vikings could only manage five points in the opening quarter as the Tigers jumped out to a 14-5 lead heading to the second quarter.

After trailing 20-5, the Vikings warmed up as Jason Cullum scored seven points and Jacob Flannagan added five. Community ended the quarter with 16 points to match the Tiger output as Fayetteville took a 30-21 lead into halftime.

The Vikings cut the Tiger lead to 41-34 with 1:15 left in the third quarter, but Fayetteville scored the final five points to take a 46-34 lead to the fourth quarter.

Community still trailed 51-41 with 5:17 to play before coming back.

Led by eight points each from Cullum and Flannagan, the Vikings cut the margin to 55-52 with 1:28 to play.

After a Tiger free throw, Flannagan scored from inside to cut the Tiger lead to 56-54 with 1:06 left.

The teams traded turnovers late with a Tiger turnover giving the Vikings possession with 17 seconds left. After a timeout, Landon Lovvorn found a sliver of daylight and drilled a three-pointer to give the Vikings their first lead at 57-56 with six seconds left.

But the Viking excitement quickly faded after a Tiger timeout as Teondre Love took the inbounds pass and drove for a layup with one second left to give Fayetteville the 1-point win.

Camaurionn Taylor led three Tigers in double figures with 20 points. Love added 14 while Wyatt Groce had 11.

Flannagan had 19 points and Cullum added 18 to lead the Trinity Dixon led the Lady Tigers with 14 points while Isabella Martin added 11.

The Viqueens were 15-of-21 at the free throw line while Fayetteville was 14-of-21.

“I felt like we played with some nerves which is expected but I felt like we got some of that out last week playing a couple of scrimmages,” Pierce said.

“We settled in and made a few adjustments and dominated them in the paint in the second half,” Pierce added.

State deer season opens Saturday

NASHVILLE — Tennessee’s 2022-23 statewide gun hunting season for deer opens Saturday, Nov. 19. The season traditionally opens each year on the Saturday prior to Thanksgiving. During gun season, sportsmen may also use muzzleloaders or archery equipment.

“Deer hunting season is one of our state’s most cherished traditions,” said Jason Maxedon, Executive Director of the Tennessee Wildlife Resources Agency. “We hope everyone will be able to get into the woods and have the opportunity to carry someone with you to continue the tradition.”

The statewide bag limit for antlered bucks is two. No more than one antlered deer may be taken per day, not to exceed two for the season. Hunters are allowed the following antlerless bag limits: Unit L-three per day, Unit A-two per season, Unit B-one per season, Unit C-one per season (Nov. 19-Dec. 4 only), and Unit D-one per season (Nov. 19-25 only).

In Unit CWD, there is a limit of three antlerless deer per day with no season limit. A bag limit of three antlered deer applies in Unit CWD, too. However, the bag limit of three antlered deer may be exceeded within Unit CWD if taken under the Earn-A-Buck Program or if taken under the Replacement Buck Program. Details on each of the programs are on page 31 of the 2022-23 Tennessee Hunting and Trapping Guide.

Anyone born on or after January 1, 1969 is required to carry proof of satisfactory completion of a hunter education class or be in possession of the Apprentice Hunting License (along with other required licenses) while hunting any species in Tennessee. Hunter education can be completed online for free.

For more information about Tennessee’s 2022-23 deer hunting seasons, exact boundaries of deer units, and complete license requirements refer to the 2022-23 Tennessee Hunting and Trapping Guide available online at tnwildlife.org or the TWRA App. Physical copies can be picked up at an agency office or license agent retail location.

House review of Commanders likely to end

By STEPHEN WHYNO
 AP Sports Writer

The congressional investigation of the Washington Commanders will end when Republicans take over early next year, according to the party’s ranking member of the U.S. House Committee on Oversight and Reform that has been looking into the NFL team’s workplace culture.

“It’s over,” Rep. James Comer of Kentucky said in a brief statement, which came after The Associated Press and other outlets projected Republicans clinched a narrow majority in the House for the 118th Congress that begins meeting Jan. 3.

Democrats led by chairwoman Carolyn Maloney of New York and Economic and Consumer Policy Subcommittee Chairman Raja Krishnamoorthi of Illinois had been presiding over the investigation since last year. Comer vowed over the summer to bring it to a halt if Republicans won House control from midterm elections, as expected.

The team in a statement through legal counsel praised the decision to drop the case.

“We applaud Rep. Comer for his leadership in putting an end to the investigation into a private company, which has been correctly characterized by sitting members of Congress as a ‘farce’ and ‘an abuse of power,’” attorneys John Brownlee and Stuart Nash said, adding the investigations has not interviewed any current employees and has relied largely on those who have been fired or left the organization.

“The Congressional investigation has added nothing of value to this process and, indeed, the independent firm (Vestry Laight that is) monitoring the improvements in the Commanders’ workplace has singled out the investigation as an impediment to further progress.”

A spokesperson for the House Oversight Committee said there were no updates on the investigation, which included virtual testimony from NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell in a public hearing and a private virtual deposition by Washington owner Dan Snyder that lasted for more than 10 hours, the contents of which have yet to be released.

Lady Champs outlast Hampshire

T-G STAFF REPORT

HAMPSHIRE — Cascade held survive a furious, fourth-quarter Hampshire rally in their season opener, but that’s just what they did as they opened a new era of Lady Champion basketball in Tuesday night’s 55-54 thriller.

Entering the fourth quarter, Cascade held a comfortable 45-24 lead, but Hampshire was able to attack the rim, draw fouls, stop the clock and work its way to the free throw line in a 30-point fourth-quarter surge.

Kadence Stoner led the way and went 9-of-9 at the charity stripe in the fourth quarter alone and finished a remarkable 15-of-16 attempts from the line.

Madison Cagle also went 3-for-4 from the line in the period as well.

But even with the remarkable comeback bid, the early work done by the Lady Champs proved to be just enough for Cascade to withstand the rally.

Cascade led 13-4 after the first quarter and 29-15 at the half.

Not much changed in the third as Hampshire was held to nine points, while Cascade piled up 16 more.

Led by Abrielle Presley’s 12 points, Cascade spread the offense around and seven different Lady Champs scored in Tuesday’s win.

While Presley was the lone Lady Champ to reach double figures, three more were knocking on the door of double digits and finished the game with nine points apiece.

Kaegan Young, Annabelle Calvert and Suzanna Crews all finished with nine points.

Cascade opened its home slate in another Hall of Fame game on Thursday night, hosting the Tullahoma Lady Wildcats, however results were unavailable by press time. Visit t-g.com/sports for up-to-date recaps.

Lady Feet tip off season with overpowering win

By WILL CARTER
 Sports Writer

BELL BUCKLE — Opening the new season in dominant fashion, the Webb Lady Feet cruised to a 69-28 victory over the visiting Hamilton Heights Christian Academy Hawks on Monday night.

The Lady Feet (1-0) started the game on a 12-0 run before the Hawks (1-1) were able to score their first basket with two minutes and 57 seconds remaining in the first quarter and Webb never looked back.

“I was proud of how hard everyone played and how they got after it,” Webb head coach Matt Shewmake said.

“We need to shoot a little bit better, but it was overall a good team effort.”

Led by senior Angelica Velez’ five first quarter points and fellow senior Bree Robinson’s four, eight total Lady Feet players contributed to a 21-5 first quarter advantage.

Showing no signs of letting up, Webb went on a 10-2 run in the first five minutes of the second frame to take a 31-7 lead.

Robinson added four more points to her total in the quarter while junior Daria Biriyyk contributed six.

Expectations are high for Robinson and Velez this season, but Shewmake is confident in their abilities to spearhead Webb’s attack.

“They’re the best guard combo in the country,” he said. “Tip to buzzer, they play 100 miles per hour.”

“They’ll be everyone’s problem for the rest of the season.”

At the halftime break, the Lady Feet led 39-14 after the Hawks held them to eight points in the final three minutes of the half while scoring seven of their own.

But it was all Webb in the third quarter as they reached another gear on their way to a 26-7 frame, led by Velez’s eight.

Robinson and Velez led all scorers with 13 points each.

While both guards are vital to the Lady Feet’s success, Shewmake looks towards Velez to lead the charge.

“She’s (Velez) probably the most important piece that we have,” he said.

“She has a certain tenacity to her on defense and handles the tempo on offense. She gets after people, and does it every night.”

The game reached a running clock in the final frame and Webb walked away with a dominant win where 10 total players contributed on the scoreboard.

But it wasn’t by accident as Shewmake expects to play deep into his bench night in and night out.

“The depth that we have helps us to be able to play with the pace that we have,” he said.

“A lot of teams have six or seven players, but we have 10 or 11. We’re going to get deep into our bench and score points.”

Last season, the Lady Feet coasted to a 15-0 record in Div. II-A play, and also had no issues in the state tournament as they hoisted the state championship trophy for the second consecutive year.

Being the favorites to win it all again this year, Shewmake believes his team has improved from top-to-bottom.

“I think we can be better than we were last year,” he said.

“(Aalyah) Del Rosario is the stable anchor in the middle and our guards are supposed to protect her. They did that last year, and I expect them to do that this year as well.”

“We have a better group of guards and shooters this year with Bre’Aria Cannon and Daria Biriyyk coming on as well.”

Even with an improved squad as a whole and the confidence he has in them, Shewmake wants them to stay focused on their goals as a group and not “worry about more.”

“Pat Riley says we have to worry about the disease of more,” he said.

“Everybody just wants more. We just have to keep our eyes on our team goals, and trust that process.”

Webb will be back in action on Saturday, Nov. 19th against Lalumiere (IN.) at 6 p.m. in Bell Buckle.

Webb 21 18 26 4 — 69
 Hamilton 5 9 7 7 — 28
 Webb: Angelica Velez 13, Bree Robinson 13, TaTianna Stovall 12, Daria Biriyyk 6, Aurora Sanchez-Almon 6, Aalyah Del Rosario 6, Bre’Aria Cannon 4, Makenzi Hale 3, Korah Johnson 2, Rhema Collins 2.
 3-point goals: Webb (3): Angelica Velez, Aalyah Del Rosario, Makenzi Hale.
 Halftime score: Webb 39, Hamilton 14.

Hyatt heads home, eager to show out vs. SC

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina coach Shane Beamer had a message for those wondering why Tennessee receiver Jalin Hyatt left town to star for the fifth-ranked Volunteers.

“I have certainly heard from people about what an idiot I am that I didn’t recruit Jalin Hyatt,” said Beamer, the second-year coach who was an Oklahoma assistant when Hyatt was a standout for Dutch Fork High School, about 20 miles from the Gamecocks’ campus.

Hyatt and the Vols (9-1, 5-1 Southeastern Conference, No. 5 CFP) will look to crank things up in front hometown friends and family at South Carolina (6-4, 3-4) on Saturday night.

Blame Lincoln Riley, then Oklahoma coach, for not recruiting Hyatt “and whoever else was here,” Beamer continued. “Certainly, he is a fantastic player.

What a year he is having.”

Will Hyatt, with 58 catches for 1,116 yards and 15 touchdowns, be ready for the moment?

“Yeah, for sure,” Tennessee quarterback Hendon Hooker said. “You know, anytime you go home to play, it’s a great feeling.”

And maybe a little bittersweet. Hyatt was among the best prep players in the Palmetto State. He even showed out at Williams-Brice Stadium, most notably with three touchdowns including one in OT as Dutch Fork won the 2019 state title.

But he wasn’t pursued by his hometown school in part because the past staff, led by Will Muschamp, wondered if the 6-foot, 185-pound junior was a little too slight for the rugged SEC.

“You can see the intensity that he plays with when he catches the ball,” Hooker said. “He’s playing very physical right now.”

South Carolina cornerback

Cam Smith, like Hyatt considered a first-round NFL draft pick, can’t wait for the challenge of slowing down the talented, Tennessee wideout.

Just like Peyton

Tennessee quarterback Hendon Hooker is among five finalists for the Johnny Unitas Golden Arm Award this season. Hooker is the first Volunteers’ passer to make the final cut since Peyton Manning did it in 1997. Hooker hopes to make it 2-for-2 for Tennessee as Manning won the honor.

Who’s running the ball

South Carolina won four straight games midseason on the strength of a strong run game led by tailbacks MarShawn Lloyd and Christian Beal-Smith. But Lloyd has missed the past two games with a thigh bruise and Beal Smith missed the loss at Florida last week with a lower body injury. The two have combined for 751 yards rushing and 11 touchdowns. Beamer said both are hopeful to play this week, but are limited at practice.

Late score

With the win well in hand last week against Missouri, Tennessee opted to go for a final touchdown with 36 seconds to play in the 66-24 victory. Vols coach Josh Heupel thought about taking a knee, but said his backups were mostly in the game.

“I don’t know what the right thing to do is in that moment at the end of the day, but our guys continued to play football,” Heupel said.

Juju’s delight

South Carolina backup runner

Juju McDowell was asked what it’s like play in the Gamecocks home stadium that will be sold out for the sixth time in seven home games.

“Imagine you’re 9 years old walking down the street and someone gives you two tons of Reese’s (Peanut Butter Cups),” McDowell said. “That feeling right there is exactly what we feel like every time there.”

Strike up the band

Tennessee’s Hooker had a career moment when he climbed the ladder to direct “Rocky Top” after the Missouri win last week. Hooker was walking over to sing with his teammates when the band’s director asked him if he’d like to lead the school’s famed song.

“I was kind of scared, though, getting on the ladder with my cleats on,” Hooker said. “I was like, ‘I hope I don’t fall.’”

Rodgers, players urge NFL to go with grass

By MARK LONG

AP Pro Football Writer

Aaron Rodgers has hit the ground in every NFL stadium except one. And while the “frozen tundra” of Lambeau Field has delivered its share of bumps and bruises, the venues with artificial turf have been even rougher on Rodgers’ nearly 39-year-old body.

“I do think it’s time to go all grass throughout the league,” the four-time MVP said Tuesday, echoing a growing sentiment that’s become a major talking point around the NFL.

Players Association President JC Tretter called on six venues to immediately change their playing surfaces last weekend, saying the artificial turf in those stadiums results in higher injury rates when comparing non-contact injuries and lower extremity injuries like sprained ankles and torn knee ligaments.

Players from Seattle to Miami, from New England to Los Angeles, have loudly backed Tretter. Rodgers, Green Bay’s 10-time Pro Bowl quarterback who has played in every stadium except Las Vegas, thinks there’s a way for the league to pivot to grass quickly.

“A lot of money in this league,” he said. “It’s about cost. I don’t know how much that would cost. ... But the league’s been doing pretty well.”

Does Rodgers think it will get done?

“No, honestly,” he said. “I don’t have a lot of confidence when it comes to the league making that decision without some sort of big vote and gripes from certain owners who don’t want to spend the money. ... This would be putting your money where your mouth is if player safety is important.”

The NFL hasn’t acknowledged a need for new sod. Jeff Miller, the executive vice president of communications, public affairs & policy for the NFL, said in a statement Saturday that injury rates are approximately the same on grass and turf.

The data provided by the league did not distinguish between the three types of turf used: monofilament, dual fiber and slit film. Tretter specifically took exception with the slit-film surfaces used in Cincinnati, Detroit, Indianapolis, Minnesota, New Orleans and New York.

Players parroted Tretter’s plea, and even a few coaches have joined the push.

“I prefer natural grass,”

Kansas City Chiefs coach Andy Reid said. “I’ve listened to all the studies, density studies, I’ve seen all the different compounds they’ve put in there. I still like grass.”

Most players do, too.

“You kind of feel the difference when you’re running,”

Minnesota Vikings running back Dalvin Cook said. “If we can fix it, let’s fix it. Let’s get the safest atmosphere for us to go play in.”

Added Detroit receiver Amon-Ra St. Brown: “I do prefer playing on grass. It’s more forgiving, more natural, and it just feel it’s better. It feels better on my joints, my ankles and whatnot.”

Jacksonville Jaguars safety Rayshawn Jenkins called artificial turf the equivalent of playing in a parking lot, saying “I’m getting slammed on the concrete. It doesn’t feel good.”

Carolina Panthers tight end Tommy Tremble watched teammate Donte Jackson tear an Achilles tendon at home — the latest in a rash of season-ending injuries sustained on turf.

“Guys get terrible injuries from that stuff,” Tremble said. “I get the usability of it, but this is a billion-dollar business, and I think where we should put the money into should be for the players because if we got grass fields and can keep playing, the money keeps rolling in. You see star guys go down all of the time because of it.”

The Panthers already have urged owner David Tepper to switch to grass in the offseason. Sure, it costs more in the long run, but technology advancements have made grass fields more tolerant to every condition seen in the NFL: heat, cold, humidity and dryness. Two indoor venues — in Arizona and Las Vegas — have grass fields that can be rolled into the sun.

Fourteen of the NFL’s 30 venues still use a version of synthetic turf. The Hellas Matrix Turf used in Dallas, Houston and Los Angeles is widely considered the best. It’s created using a textured and twisted monofilament fiber.

Slit film, meanwhile, has sliced strands that form a honeycomb shape. It holds up well to frequent use, but the concern is whether cleats are getting caught in the honeycombs.

“They don’t have a bad field in this league, but there are better fields,” New York Giants safety Julian Love said. “There is a type of turf that has proven to be better. We happen to play on the lowest turf in the league, so you want to see those standards go up.”

Switching from artificial turf to grass would be expensive, as Rodgers suggested. It would cost roughly $500,000 for demolition, new rock underlayment and irrigation (drainage could be reused) and another $350,000 for lay-and-play sod. Cold-weather teams, including those playing indoors, would be lucky if the new grass lasted a month before needing to be resodded.

A potential compromise would be placing thick-cut sod on top of the fake stuff and swapping it out a few times over the course of a football season.

Any tweak would be a welcome relief for most players.

“I do know that after having surgery, and when I go out there and play on turf fields, it’s different,” Cincinnati Bengals nose tackle D.J. Reader said. “It’s a lot more pounding. I get a lot more achy after games.”

Tretter, a longtime NFL center who played in Green Bay and Cleveland, began his anti-artificial turf campaign two years ago after San Francisco 49ers coach Kyle Shanahan and players expressed concern about the MetLife Stadium turf in New Jersey.

Defensive end Nick Bosa, quarterback Jimmy Garoppolo, defensive tackle Solomon Thomas and running backs Raheem Mostert and Tevin Coleman all suffered game-ending lower-body injuries that day.

Thomas, coincidentally, now plays for the Jets. He was among the many calling for immediate change.

“No one knows the beating that our bodies take on turf more than us — the players,” Thomas posted on Twitter. “The sport is violent enough. We shouldn’t be taking more damage from the field, too.”

All those 49ers injuries prompted a review involving representatives from the NFL, NFLPA, MetLife Stadium, the Jets, the Giants, the turf maker and an independent field inspector. They concluded that the field met all applicable standards and protocols for NFL surfaces.

Two years later, Tretter — now with players like Rodgers standing behind him — insists the standards need to be raised.

SEC resources, right hires help programs rebound

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Less than a year ago, fans across the Southeastern Conference were mocking new LSU coach Brian Kelly for trying to talk Southern.

No one's laughing now. Josh Heupel's revival of Tennessee from the SEC depths to one of the nation's top teams in his second season has been impressive, but Kelly topped that by turning the Tigers from cellar dwellers into SEC West champions in his first year.

In the SEC, programs can jump from the basement to the college football penthouse in a matter of months by making the right moves.

"The resources here are better than anywhere that I've been in my career," Kelly said Wednesday. "And so those resources go to work right away in helping you develop your football program."

That's saying something considering Kelly spent 12 years at his last job at college football's most storied program. LSU was able to lure Kelly away from Notre Dame to arguably the sport's most competitive conference because the coach knew he'd be given exactly what he needed to win.

This has happened faster than even Kelly expected. The Tigers clinched a berth in the SEC championship game with two games remaining and will face defending national champion and top-ranked Georgia in Atlanta on Dec. 3.

The transfer portal certainly helps coaches, not just in the SEC, restock a depleted roster quickly.

Kelly had 39 scholarship players available for LSU's bowl game a year ago. He needed to restock both his coaching staff — only offensive line coach Brad Davis was retained — and the support staff for a program that won both the 2019 SEC title and national championship.

If LSU athletic director

Scott Woodward had told Kelly last December winning the SEC West title in his first season also was on that to-do list, Kelly likely would've said nope.

"That would not have been a realistic expectation," Kelly said.

Heupel has Tennessee fifth in both The Associated Press Top 25 and the College Football Playoff rankings two seasons after the Vols went 3-7 in an SEC-only season that ended weeks later with the head coach and nine others fired for "serious" NCAA violations.

His scholarship players available also plummeted as Vols ran to the transfer portal, heading to other teams in the SEC like linebacker Henry To'o To'o to Alabama.

Tennessee (9-1) just finished its first undefeated record at Neyland Stadium since 2007 along with six straight sellouts, and Heupel credits fan support as a huge part of the turnaround.

"Obviously, when Neyland is rocking, it is unsurpassed by anybody," Heupel said.

Not winning quickly enough is cause for concern in this league.

That No. 1 recruiting class only ramped up the pressure to win at Texas A&M where a 3-7 record has fans wondering if Jimbo Fisher's buyout really is too big after his pricey extension last December. Eli Drinkwitz's own extension lowered his future buyout in case Missouri doesn't keep going to bowls.

Lane Kiffin, already mentioned as a candidate at Auburn or even Nick Saban's eventual successor at Alabama, made clear winning, not coming close, is the expectation these days at Ole Miss after last week's loss to the Crimson Tide.

"Two years ago, I walked off this field and I said we didn't come here to cover spreads, we didn't come here to play what at the time was the No. 1 team in the country close," Kiffin said.

"So all these things about, 'Well, you did this good, your freshman running back,' it doesn't matter. We didn't win the game."

Shane Beamer took over a South Carolina program that went 2-8 in 2020. Now the Gamecocks are 6-4 and even climbed into the Top 25 earlier this season. Senior wide receiver Josh Vann says he's definitely proud of the steps this program has taken toward winning.

"From talking bad about us to two years later, we're literally the same team just with a different coach," Vann said. "It's just been fantastic. Last year we had seven wins. We have six this year so hopefully we can get these last two up. Definitely very proud of where we are, where we can be."

Florida gave Billy Napier a budget of $7.5 million for assistants and $5 million more to hire an "unprecedented support staff." The Gators at 6-4 have as many wins as they managed a year ago before hiring Napier last December as they prepared to visit Vanderbilt.

"I think the chemistry, the team dynamic, the morale is much better," Napier said of the culture he's building. "Obviously, winning helps that."

Clark Lea, Kelly's former defensive coordinator at Notre Dame, is busy in his second season trying to build his alma mater Vanderbilt. Lea won his first SEC game last week, snapping the Commodores' 26-game skid in league play just ahead of the program's biggest football stadium renovation in 41 years.

"Building a program is hard, and and you have to be able to stick with your process," Kelly said. "And he has, and they're starting to see that begin to pay off."

Still, as Kelly has reminded everyone, faster matters more in the SEC.

Universities eye athletes' mental health after crises

By RALPH D. RUSSO
AP College Football Writer

Police awoke Indiana State athletic director Sherard Clinksdale early on Aug. 21 with tragic news. Two of the university's football players, and another student, had died in a car accident.

Clinksdale immediately began devising a plan to console and support the teammates and friends of the deceased teenagers.

"There is no playbook for something like this," Clinksdale said.

But those who have experienced the unexpected death of a college athlete under their supervision say the increased emphasis on mental health care in athletic departments and universities at large — spurred in part by the pandemic and lessons learned from other tragedies — helps when responding to a crisis.

Grief struck the University of Virginia earlier this week. Three members of the football team were shot and killed on a bus returning to the Charlottesville campus from Washington. Two other students, one of them also a football player, were wounded.

The suspect in police custody, Christopher Darnell Jones Jr., 22, is a Virginia student and former walk-on member of the football team.

Classes, academic activities and the university's Saturday home game against Coastal Carolina were canceled, and the school made counselors and therapy dogs available. Temporary memorials with flowers and stuffed animals have sprung up on campus throughout the week, including at Scott Stadium, where the Cavaliers football team plays. Classes resumed Wednesday though the university said undergraduate students won't have to complete any graded assignments or take exams before the Thanksgiving break.

Virginia athletic director Carla Williams said Tuesday the department has three psychologists available for grieving teammates.

"In our first meeting with the student athletes, we had a lot of counselors on hand that were there and available to work with the student athletes," Williams said. "And not only our football student athletes — with all of our student athletes."

Clinksdale said after he was informed that Christian Eubanks, 18, and Caleb VanHooser, 19, had been killed in a single-vehicle wreck just outside of Indiana State's Terre Haute campus, he went to the home of head coach Curt Mallory to break the sad news to him.

Mallory took on the difficult task of informing the players' families that their sons had been killed.

The players and staff were gathered just a few hours later, with a familiar face there to provide help: Dr. Ken Chew, director of Indiana State's Student Counseling Center.

"He's been in front of our team before," Mallory said. "This wasn't a first-time introduction."

While university leaders have pointed to increased focus on student mental health services, athletes appear less convinced. A 2019 survey of college and university presidents published by Higher Education Today found 80% indicating that mental health was being prioritized on campus more than it was three years ago. About 7 in 10 college and university leaders said they were putting more funds toward addressing mental health issues among students.

But only half of the 9,808 NCAA athletes who took a survey in late 2021 said they believe mental health is a priority to their athletics department — even after universities worked to shore up services during the pandemic as isolation to prevent the spread of coronavirus kept students from accessing resources. Among the athletes surveyed by the NCAA, 53% said they believe their coaches are taking mental health concerns seriously.

The NCAA does not have the power to mandate how schools invest and address mental health within their athletic departments, but its Sport Science Institute offers resources such as mental health best practices, workshop templates and planning tools.

In the last five years at Washington State, Cougars quarterback Tyler Hilinski killed himself on Jan. 16, 2018, and a little more than a year later, defensive back Bryce Beekman died of an accidental overdose. Dr. Sunday Henry, head team physician, was part of the response to both tragedies.

"Your primary care medical team and your mental health team immediately activate and assess the situation and how to respond," Henry said. "What just happened? What do we need to do? For us it was get everyone together. Tell them the news. And here's the resources available."

Henry said she believes coaches generally have become better at encouraging athletes, who at times can conflate vulnerability for weakness, to be more willing to seek help if they are struggling with mental health.

Communication and interaction with the students is vital. Henry said athletic trainers, who spend so much time around the athletes, can play an integral role in trying to determine which students might need extra help.

At Virginia's news conference on Tuesday, coach Tony Elliot talked about "having eyes" on the players.

"Nothing can prepare you for this situation, and we just want to be there to support the guys," Elliott said.

Toledo athletic director Bryan Blair was a deputy athletic director at Washington State. He was hired shortly after Hilinski's death and was part of the staff when Beekman died. He said all members of the department who came into regular contact with athletes were required to take a Mental Health First Aid course.

"All of us have a certain amount of responsibility to be able to be a resource to the student athletes," Blair said.

Mallory, whose late father Bill was a longtime Division I college football coach, has been coaching since the early 1990s. He said even before the tragedy at Indiana State, he spent one-on-one time on Mondays with players away from the field. Over the years he's set more and more time aside for those meetings.

"Even if I felt like they were doing OK, I still wanted to get them in front. You just don't know," he said.

At San Jose State, freshman running back Camdan McWright was killed last month when he was hit by a bus while riding a scooter near campus.

Athletic director Jeff Konya said head coach Brent Brennan delivered the news to McWright's family and it was Brennan and assistant coaches closest to the player who talked with his relatives throughout the week as a memorial was planned.

"And so that was an additional burden, and rightly so that was placed on our coaches, who had the best relationship with the family through the recruitment of Camdan," Konya said.

The team's game against New Mexico State was postponed and, instead, the players and coaches spent time together watching football. The next week, before the Spartans' homecoming game, McWright was honored in a ceremony with his loved ones in attendance. San Jose State beat Nevada 35-28 in a cathartic victory.

Konya, who has been a college athletics administrator for 36 years, said he has seen mental health care become more of a priority on campus and in athletic departments.

"We're in a better position now," Konya said. "But it's not foolproof and events like what happened here and what unfortunately happened at Virginia, those kinds of extreme cases are going to require really particular attention."

Number of women working in NFL steadily rising

By ROB MAADDI
AP Pro Football Writer

From the owner's suite to the front office to the sideline, the number of women in the NFL is steadily rising. And, they're here to stay.

Kalen Jackson was born into football, one of three daughters for Indianapolis Colts owner Jim Irsay. She got her introduction to the sport attending community events. Now, she has a seat at the table for owners' meetings.

Sam Rapoport fell in love with football the first time she held a ball and threw a spiral as a 12-year-old growing up in Canada. Rapoport ended up becoming a professional quarterback in a women's tackle football league and has spent two decades working to expand career opportunities for women in the sport.

Ashton Washington was surrounded by football as a kid in Texas, but she says she preferred playing with Barbie dolls. By high school, Washington wanted a career in football. Last year, the Chicago Bears hired her as the first full-time female scout in team history.

Katie Sylvan grew up in San Diego rooting for the Chargers. She was determined to find a job in football and applied for the NFL's junior rotational program while in college. After nine years working for the league, Sylvan was hired by the Chargers to be the team's director of football administration.

The overall percentage of women in the NFL's league office is at an all-time high of 41.3% in 2022 with 319 females holding various positions. The Institute for Diversity and Ethics in Sport said in its 2022 racial and gender report card that the league office "has been a model of diversity and inclusion for their clubs to follow."

"To see so many things changing that weren't this way when I was little is super exciting," Jackson, the Colts vice chair/owner, said on the AP Pro Football Podcast last month. "Being from a family of three girls and always being told you belong here and your opinion about this matters, we definitely had a blessing to have a very passionate girl dad, as they say."

Rapoport, the NFL's senior director of diversity, equity and inclusion, is determined to continue opening doors for women in the league.

"I was somewhat relentless with the idea that I was put on this planet to work in football in some way," said Rapoport, Rapoport runs the NFL's Women's Forum, an annual event that connects participants working in college football with owners, general managers, head coaches and club executives. More than 225 female coaching, scouting and operations candidates have been hired since the forum started in 2017.

"We just put women in a position to impress people," Rapoport said. "Half our fan base are women. Why aren't they working in it? We're working toward that."

In June, the Cleveland Browns named Catherine Raiche assistant general manager and vice president of football operations, making her the highest-ranking female executive in the NFL. A month later, Sandra Douglass Morgan became the first Black female president of an NFL team when the Las Vegas Raiders hired her.

Kelly Klein is the executive director of football operations for the Denver Broncos. Andrea Gosper is the Buffalo Bills player personnel coordinator.

Washington first joined the Bears as an intern in 2021 after working in recruiting at the University of Illinois. She was promoted to scout — there are 33 female scouts in the NFL — later that summer. In May, she became the Bears player personnel coordinator, pro scouting.

"I feel like it's a lot of pressure on me and other females across the league because you want to set the bar and you also want to exceed your personal expectations," Washington said.

There are six women who are full-time coaches in the NFL, including Tampa Bay Buccaneers assistant defensive line coach Lori Locust and director of rehabilitation/performance coach Maral Javadifar. Washington Commanders assistant running backs coach Jennifer King, New York Giants offensive quality control coach Angela Baker, Cleveland Browns chief of staff/assistant wide receivers coach Callie Brownson and Philadelphia Eagles sports performance coach Autumn Lockwood are the others.

In 2020, Locust and Javadifar became the first female coaches on a team to win the Super Bowl. Sarah Thomas also made history in that game as the first woman to officiate a Super Bowl, working as the down judge.

"It was time for that door to be knocked down and allow them because they've been putting in time, and they're very, very qualified," former Bucs coach Bruce Arians said about hiring Locust and Javadifar.

There are 21 women currently working as athletic trainers in the NFL, including Allison Miner of the Chargers.

"The biggest challenge was just opportunity," said Miner, who was one of only three women in her position when she was hired in 2015.

Another obstacle for Miner early in her career was finding a locker room to change. She would use a public bathroom in the stadium. The NFL now requires space for women at each stadium.

"It's exciting to see the female faces," Miner said. "There's going to be a day where it's not a big deal."

For Sylvan, it's important for women to know there are various jobs for them in the NFL. She has embraced her role working on roster management, the salary cap and player contracts.

"It's great to see more women in these roles," Sylvan said. "There have been women in these roles before me and there will definitely be women in these roles after me. I think that's really the most important thing is that people understand that these opportunities exist and are out there if it's something they're interested in doing and pursuing."

November is American Diabetes Month

How to prevent Type 2 diabetes

By SARAH BRIDGE, FNP-C

Sarah Bridge is a certified nurse practitioner at Vanderbilt Integrated Primary Care in Wartrace.

November is American Diabetes Month and an important time to make healthy lifestyle choices that can delay or entirely prevent diabetes.

In Bedford County, nearly 30% of residents are diagnosed with diabetes. By extensions, they are at a higher risk of experiencing other severe health complications.

People with diabetes are at a greater risk of having heart disease, stroke and other health issues such as kidney failure and blindness. Diabetic patients are also at more risk of serious health complications from catching the flu, which is spreading particularly aggressively this fall.

It's never too late to change your lifestyle by taking meaningful steps toward diabetes prevention.

This month, take control of your health and wellness by trying these practical tips at home.

Lose extra weight

Excess weight is the single most important cause of Type 2 diabetes. If you fall into the pre-diabetic category, meaning your blood sugar levels are running higher than they should, it's recommended to lose at least 7% to 10% of body weight to prevent disease progression. It's important to talk to a provider about reasonable short-term goals and expectations when on a path to lose weight.

Increase physical activity

There are many benefits to regular exercise. It can help you lose weight, lower and maintain your blood sugar, and keep a healthy body mass index or BMI. An individual should aim for 30 minutes or more of aerobic exercise like walking, biking or running on most days of the week.

Resistance exercise – such as weightlifting, yoga and Pilates – can increase your strength, balance and ability to maintain an active life.

Tune up your diet

Eat plenty of fiber as well as plant-based foods and fats is beneficial for gut health and weight management. Consuming healthier food choices and avoiding large portion sizes can help prevent spikes in blood sugar and insulin, which may help reduce your risk of developing diabetes.

Excessive alcohol consumption increases the risk of heart disease and Type 2 diabetes. If you drink alcohol, it is key to keep your consumption light. Consuming higher volumes dramatically increases the chances of getting diabetes. It is important to quit smoking if you are a current tobacco user—smokers are 30% to 40% more likely to develop the disease than nonsmokers.

Preventing and delaying diabetes is achievable through healthy lifestyle changes. If you think you're at risk for developing dia-
