Much ado about support drone

Clarification of Multi-Mission Aircraft involved in joint operations

CENTENNIAL — The Colorado Department of Public Safety has received a high level of interest in and speculation about the participation of the state Multi-Mission Aircraft in a joint operation on Monday in relation to reports of suspicious drone activity in northeast Colorado.

CDPS has offered its expertise and resources to assist federal and local agencies as they investigate the reports of suspicious drone activity.

Three members of the Colorado Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Management Colorado Information Analysis

Center attended a joint operation coordination meeting on Monday, and the CIAC has been actively monitoring information related to abnormal drone activity in Colorado.

In discussing additional ways CDPS could support our local and state partners, CDPS leaders decided to contribute one Multi-Mission Aircraft as a resource to coordinate the investigative ground resources involved in the one-night joint operation.

On Monday, the MMA flew for 4.8 hours in northeast Colorado, communicating with law enforcement vehicles on the ground.

As calls came in reporting potential suspicious drone activity, the MMA was prepared to identify which ground resource was closest to the sighting in order to deploy that vehicle in search of more information.

The aircraft typically flies 10,000 feet above ground level, well above drone operations.

The MMA has the capability to detect heat signatures; it did not detect any suspicious heat signatures or drones related to the drone reportings during its flight.

During the flight of the MMA, every report of a suspicious drone was investigated and was resolved, and none was substantiated. The MMA was not diverted from any other operational needs in order to serve this mission.

Press release for report courtesy of Micki Trost, Strategic Communications Specialist, Colorado Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Management. Contact information for Trost is 303-472-4087 by phone or micki.trost@state.co.us by email.

Vatican debates concerning pachamama rites won't fade

The scene during the Vatican's Christmas concert was simple and even child-like, as a young woman from Latin America instructed participants — including smiling cardinals — to fold their arms over their chests.

But this was a religious ritual, not a 1990s Macarena flashback.

You will feel a strong vibration," she said, according to translations of the online video. "That is the heart — your heart, but also the heart of Mother Earth. And on the other side, where you feel the silence, there is the spirit — the spirit that allows you to understand the message of the Mother.

"For us indigenous peoples ... Mother Earth, Hitchauaya, is everything. It is that Mother who provides food. She is the one who gives us the sacred water. She is the one who gives us medicinal plants and power and reminds us of our origin, the origin of our creation."

The name "Hitchauaya" was new, but battles over "Pachamama" rites had already emerged as one of the strangest Vatican news stories of late 2019. For weeks, progressives and conservatives argued about the relevancy of the first of the Ten Commandments: "You shall have no other gods before me."

Three events in Rome fueled the Earth Mother wars. For some Catholics, they became linked, theologically, to an early 2019 meeting in Abu Dhabi when Pope Francis signed an interfaith document that included this: "The pluralism and the diversity of religions, color, sex, race and language are willed by God in His wisdom."

First, early in the fall's Synod of Bishops for the Pan-Amazon region, there were rites that included wooden statues of a pregnant Amazonian woman. Some journalists reported that they represented "Our Lady of the Amazon" or were symbols of new life. Outraged Catholics then stole the statues and tossed them in the Tiber River.

Speaking as "bishop of this diocese," Pope Francis apologized and sought "forgiveness from those who have been offended by this gesture." He said the CAIC stated, "We are heading into a period of unsettled weather beginning Thursday. Before an incoming storm, forecasters pay close attention to the old snow surface. We ask ourselves what the new storm snow will be falling on.

"Will the new snow bond well to this surface? Or is it falling on a crust or surface facets that could be our next weak layer? As you move around your favorite back-country locale, be a forecaster; take a mental picture (or an actual picture), where are the wind slabs we have been avoiding the last week?"

"How is the current snow surface going to interact with this week's new snow? You'll be prepared to make decisions as conditions change. This photo was taken yesterday by our Highway 550 forecasters looking at surface conditions in highway paths ahead of the next storm."

As of Dec. 30, Wolf Creek Ski Resort reported 193 inches of snow for the season.

A hardened 1- to 2-inch layer is now on top of powder snow.

This hardened surface can cause any new snow to slide especially around windrow piles and drifts or overhanging ridge lines.

Outdoor enthusiasts are urged to use caution while in the back country and to be aware of the surroundings before heading out to enjoy the snow.

He added: "Look for signs of recent drifting to spot the danger. Avoid steep slopes with smooth pillows of stiff dense wind-deposited snow. Seek out safer (and softer) conditions in lower angled, more wind-sheltered terrain. A triggered wind slab can step into older snow layers and become a dangerous persistent slab avalanche. We haven't seen a lot of that, but the possibility should not be overlooked."

Now, as of Jan. 1, a Colorado resident can have their firearms temporarily confiscated if evidence that a person poses a significant risk to self or others by having a firearm in his or her custody or control or by possessing, purchasing or receiving a firearm.

Local sheriffs respond to Red Flag law enforcement

By LYNDIE FERRELL

VALLEY PUBLISHING
SAN LUIS VALLEY—

In light of the new year many new laws have come into effect as of Jan. 1, including the controversial Red Flag Gun Law.

The sheriffs in the western end of the Valley have gone on record about enforcement of the law.

The Red Flag law creates the ability for a family or household member or a law enforcement officer to petition the court for a temporary extreme risk protection order (ERPO).

The petitioner for an ERPO must establish by a preponderance of the evidence that a person poses a significant risk to self or others by having a firearm in his or her custody or control; or by possessing, purchasing or receiving a firearm.

The petitioner must submit an affidavit signed under oath and penalty of perjury that sets forth facts to support the issuance of a temporary ERPO and a reasonable basis for believing they exist.

The court must hold a temporary ERPO hearing in person or by telephone on the day the petition is filed or on the court day immediately following the day the petition is filed. Many Colorado residents believe the new law infringes on their constitutional rights.

In a brief interview with Rio Grande County Sheriff Don McDonald, the sheriff stated in reference to the new law that he and his crew will uphold the constitution and will handle each case on a case by case basis. "We already have restraining orders and other laws that prohibit people that may be mentally unstable to be in possession of firearms. Those laws have worked for countless years and with this new law, I sincerely feel we have awoken a sleeping giant. There is no way that this law will do anyone any good."

McDonald and Rio Grande County Commissioners have passed a resolution classifying Rio Grande County as a "sanctuary" county.

The resolution states, "Whereas, the Board of County Commissioners of Rio Grande County, Colorado, pursuant to Colorado Statute is vested with the authority of administering the affairs of Rio Grande County, Colorado, and Whereas the Second Amendment to the United States Constitution, adopted in 1791 as part of the Bill of Rights, protects the inalienable and individual right of the people to keep and bear arms."

The resolution declaring Rio Grande County as a "sanctuary" county was recorded by Rio Grande County Clerk and Recorder on March 21, 2019, and will be used as a means to uphold the Second and Fourth Amendments set forth by the Constitution and Bill of Rights and will be unenforced by Rio Grande County Sheriff in light of the new law.

"We took our oaths of office on the Constitution and that is what we will uphold," stated McDonald.

Sheriff Fred Hosselkus in Mineral County took a similar stance on the topic but also stated that he will do as ordered by the courts. "We are a sanctuary county and will uphold the constitution, but we will do as ordered by a court of law if an order comes through to confiscate weapons. I trust the court system and will abide by those orders. Everything will be handled on a case-by-case basis and we will leave it up to the courts to decide whether or not we will confiscate weapons based on a complaint. We have a due process and an investigation will be performed before any action is taken."

In Saguache County, Saguache County Sheriff Dan Warwick says he cannot in good conscience enforce the passed red flag bill for Colorado. "I don't agree with it by any means," Warwick commented. "The law is poorly written and it violates constitutional rights."

Accused individuals should be issued a summons to appear in court for a hearing regarding having their guns removed, but as the law now stands, the accusations can be made against them and they have no right to be advised of the hearing or plead their case.

"This is no different than being charged with any other crime," Warwick pointed out. "You get your day in court. They can say it's a law, but that doesn't mean we have to enforce it."

"Who's to say what is more important — what takes precedence — to violate someone's constitutional rights or to obey the 'law?'"

The new law will face many legal challenges, he added, and until it is actually declared constitutional, which could take a U.S. Supreme Court determination, "I can't enforce the law if there is a constitutional question."

Warwick went on to explain that mental health providers should be the ones reporting potentially dangerous individuals to law enforcement or the courts because they have the expertise to determine when a true danger exists and when it does not. Privacy and legal issues, however, prevent them from providing this information, and these are the issues that should have been addressed, he said.

The legislature should have explored how to empower mental health to better make these determinations, Warwick observed, so they could distinguish who should temporarily have their firearms removed and returned within a short period of time and who should not possess firearms at all. Mental health providers would then be able to work in concert with the courts to provide such information on which a judge could base a decision. Better supervision and training of mental health personnel would also be in order to assure proper treatment and evaluation of those referred by the courts.

Colorado is the 15th state to pass a red flag law and pro-gun activists across the state have filed a lawsuit hoping to have the new law overturned in coming months.

The law has caused an upheaval of controversy ever since it was proposed by Governor Jared Polis last summer.

HOLLYWOOD — God Bless America, and how's everybody?

Graceland in Memphis had a vigil Wednesday to mark the 85th anniversary of the birth of Elvis Presley. When he died, pathologists found in his blood large amounts of Dilaudid, Percodan, Demerol and codeine and Quaalude.

Elvis may be the only man in history who descended to Heaven.

President Trump announced that tensions with Iran have eased Wednesday after Iran fired off wild missile shots missing U.S. personnel.

There won't be a war. The president's good news was quickly contested by his two leading Democrat critics, Damned if He Does and Damned if He Doesn't.

Nancy Pelosi griped Tuesday that Trump didn't brief Congress before the U.S. attack on Iran's terrorist general. He'd just learned a new trick. Trump was going to send his attack plans over to Pelosi but he decided to hold them up until Congress lets him know how they're going to handle them.

Nancy Pelosi reportedly declined a phone call from Mike Pence intended to give her a security update on Iran on Tuesday as she was busy at a D.C. restaurant party.

No hard feelings. Trump just offered to keep Nancy Pelosi in the loop on the Iran situation by inviting her to follow him on Twitter.

Iran launched 15 missiles on Tuesday intended to go in the general direction of a U.S. Army base in Western Iraq, 11 of which missed and four of which are unaccounted for.

However, one Ukrainian airliner is down. It's an awful thing for the Iranians to celebrate but I guess it's something.

President Trump said Iran has stood over after their futile missile response to his drone strike on Iran's terrorist general.

He gave up a lot to take him out. With an $80-million bounty on Trump's head, imagine how awful his hair is going to look now that he's cutting it himself.

Joe Biden pitching for eco-votes called for a ban on plastic bags Wednesday. They're serious about that out here. Last year, California released thousands of prisoners convicted of selling drugs unless they sold the drugs in plastic baggies, and then more prison time was added to their sentences.

Harvey Weinstein's trial for rape and sexual assault got underway in Manhattan on Tuesday with jury selection.

He forgot where he was. Halfway through the proceedings, the judge threatened to throw Weinstein in jail for whipping it out in the courtroom, only this time it was just his cell phone.

President Trump's campaign just bought a 60-second Super Bowl ad this week in response to Mike Bloomberg purchasing a one-minute Super Bowl ad.

It's unprecedented. In the past the Super Bowl has always banned issue ads, unless the issue is whether or not cleavage sells Budweiser.

The Daily Mail said Queen Elizabeth will be handing over more royal duties to Prince Charles this year.

It's reported she drinks four cocktails a day plus a glass of champagne every night just before going to bed — that's right a glass of champagne at bedtime. Who does she think she is, herself?

The L.A. Times ripped Ricky Gervais's Golden Globes hosting for ripping Hollywood hypocrisy Sunday. He's a liberal, but a free-speech advocate who refuses to live with political correctness.

Now is as good a time as any to say I am inexpressibly saddened by Ricky Gervais's suicide next week.

Retired General Jack Keane assured Fox News viewers during the missile attack Tuesday that Iran was staging a face-saving attack that would intentionally hit nothing, allowing Trump to avoid war and declare victory the next day.

It played out just that way. The way Fox News cleverly uses beautiful blonde anchors to lure Trump into watching tutorials could win them the Nobel Peace Prize.

Behind Bolton's decision

By BYRON YORK
Column

Former national security adviser John Bolton shook up the Trump impeachment standoff recently with his announcement that, if subpoenaed, he is "prepared to testify" before a Senate trial.

It's still not clear, of course, when or even if a trial might occur, since House Speaker Nancy Pelosi is withholding the articles of impeachment. But if there is a trial, and if the Senate subpoenas Bolton, he won't fight it.

Senate Minority Leader Charles Schumer has demanded the trial include witnesses. Schumer specifically wants the Senate to hear testimony from Bolton, current White House chief of staff Mick Mulvaney, and two other White House officials, Robert Blair and Michael Duffey.

To testify or not to testify? The potential witnesses have a lot of thinking to do. Their situation is unprecedented. There is no guidebook to tell them what to do. So here are some of the factors that Bolton, Mulvaney and other possible witnesses have to weigh:

HOUSE VS. SENATE

Neither Bolton nor Mulvaney testified before the House impeachment inquiry. Bolton did not receive a subpoena. Mulvaney defied one, at the direction of the White House.

Bolton's former deputy, Charles Kupperman, was subpoenaed and asked a court to decide whether he would be required to testify. At that point, House Democrats abruptly withdrew the subpoena. Pelosi, impeachment leader Rep. Adam Schiff, and others claimed that a court fight would take too long, given the urgency that Trump be removed from office as soon as possible. So they dropped the issue.

A judge later declared the matter moot.

Now, the questions surrounding potential testimony remain unanswered. If there was a problem requiring judicial resolution in the House, wouldn't there also be a problem when the Senate seeks testimony?

The answer is yes, but possibly in different ways. First, it seems extremely unlikely that a court would rule that the president's aides have a blanket immunity that would prevent them from even appearing before the Senate. But at the same time it seems likely that some, or perhaps all, of the conversations between Bolton and the president, or Mulvaney and the president, would be covered by executive privilege.

It is not clear whether the White House will assert the privilege. But there seems little doubt that the White House, should it seek to bar the president's closest advisers from answering at least some questions, would have some legal options to pursue. It's not clear that they would be winning options, but they could involve some fighting in court as the Senate trial gets underway.

THE ROBERTS FACTOR

House and Senate impeachment proceedings are entirely different from each other, and one of the biggest differences is the presence in the Senate trial of a representative of the judicial branch of government, in the person of the chief justice of the Supreme Court. The Constitution says the chief justice will "preside" over the Senate trial. On the other hand, the Constitution gives the Senate the "sole power" to try the impeachment. So it is highly unlikely that Chief Justice John Roberts will take charge of the Trump impeachment trial. Of the Bill Clinton trial in 1999, then-Chief Justice William Rehnquist wrote, "I did nothing in particular, and I did it very well." Roberts probably won't do much more.

But he will be there, even if he is just a rubber stamp — in other words, he will give the imprimatur of the judicial branch to the Senate's actions. So, say the Senate, with the chief justice presiding, voted to issue a subpoena to Bolton, or Mulvaney or anyone else. And say the recipient of the subpoena challenged it in court. How exactly would that work? Federal judges are not in the business

Biblical salvation is a 'know-so' salvation

By PASTOR JEFFREY C. DAY
Guest column

Today we live in a hustle and bustle world where everybody seems to be going over a hundred miles per hour each and every day.

Stress levels have never been so high as people try to react to the demands that life and the workforce requires of us daily.

Most people have long ago stopped going to church. Many don't take time to think about God, about their own mortality or where they will spend their eternity.

The Bible says in 2 Corinthians 4:3-4, "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost: In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them."

In case you didn't know, the god of this world is Satan, not God. Satan currently rules in this world and that is why Jesus said in the Lord's prayer, "Thy will be done, on earth, as it is in heaven". The implication is that God's will is not currently being done on earth, yet He gets blamed for many injustices that He had nothing to do with. It was the god of this world that created the injustices.

The god of this world has blinded the eyes of people because the stakes for him are very high. The god of this world wants you to be too busy to stop and consider spiritual things.

He gives you headaches, deadlines, computers, video games, television sets, radios, anything that will keep you occupied so you don't consider the spirit world or your own standing with the God of the Universe.

Now, I'm not saying that those things, in and of themselves, are evil, but they pull us away from hearing the true God...the Lord Jesus Christ.

He, Jesus, never intended our lives to be that way. In fact, He proves this when He said in Matthew 11:28, "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Jesus did everything for you so that salvation can be easy for you. A great preacher once said, "Salvation is free, but it ain't cheap."

Salvation came at a cost, which the Lord Jesus Christ paid for in whole on the cross of Calvary. He wants to deliver you from your stressors and give you peace in your heart. Your circumstance most likely will not change, but you'll have the peace that comes from nothing other than the Lord Jesus Christ, and what's most amazing, is the salvation He offers is a "Know-so" salvation. You don't have to sit around guessing about whether you are saved or not. You can know for sure that you are saved and that you are going to heaven.

If you look in your Bible to 1 John 5:13, it says, "These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God; that ye may know that ye have eternal life, and that ye may believe on the name of the Son of God."

Many people have given up on church and say things like, "I don't go to church because it's all a bunch of hypocrites." It's true that churches have hypocrites, but most have room for one more, come on out.

You see, we all are hypocrites to one degree or another. It's not our "goodness" or "good acts" that distinguishes us as true Christians.

The book of Titus 3:5 states, "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost;" You see, you cannot be "good enough" to earn your way to heaven. You are saved by the grace of God and it has nothing to do with the works you do.

Ephesians 2:8-9 says, "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast."

If you have given up on church, I invite you to come and join us for service. I can take just a few minutes and show you right out of the Bible how you can know that you are going to heaven. You see, it is a "know-so" salvation.

Idols

images were displayed "without idolatrous intentions." A Vatican transcript indicated that Francis referred to the statues as "Pachamama," a traditional name for an Andean fertility goddess, or "Mother Earth."

Father Dwight Longenecker, a popular American commentator, outlined the ensuing confusion on Twitter: "It wasn't Pachamama but the pope said it was but he didn't really and it wasn't idolatry because they don't think she's god but she's a goddess sort of and they weren't bowing down to her but just a little maybe but it wasn't to her they were bowing down but to fertility and ..."

Rome buzzed with speculation that the Pachamama statues would reappear, in some way, during synod events. They didn't, but that wasn't the end of the story.

During the final synod Mass, a representative of the indigenous peoples of Brazil carried a black bowl — containing green plants, with red flowers — in the offertory procession. She presented this offering to Pope Francis, an act featured on page 1 of the Spanish edition of the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano. The pope gave the bowl to the master of ceremonies, who placed it on the altar near the candles. Videos showed that it remained there for the rest of the Mass, including the consecration prayers.

What was this offering? Conservatives circulated descriptions of traditional Pachamama rites, noting online guides to the use of pots containing plants, dirt, some kind of food and something red, a color frequently associated with Pachamama.

Conservative journalist Robert Moynihan wrote to the Vatican inquiring about the contents of the bowl and received a statement that there would be "no particular information about the plant. ... We only know that it was planted at the beginning of the Synod and delivered to the offertory to adorn the altar."

A frequent critic of Pope Francis, Archbishop Carlo Maria Viganò, argued that St. Peter's Basilica should be cleansed with new consecration rites after these "appalling idolatrous profanations." The synod, he told LifeSite News, was "a launching pad" for a "syncretistic, neo-pagan church, which is dedicated to the cult of Mother Earth."

But Austrian Cardinal Christoph Schonborn defended these images as "pro-life" symbols, telling Austrian newspaper Die Furche that the "controversial Pachamama statue is simply a heavily pregnant woman.... As 'mother earth' and 'mother of life,' she is an archetype, which naturally has its place in Christianity."

UU's explore the baloney detection kit

Unitarian Universalists have as a core belief, "a free and responsible search for truth and meaning."

But how do we know what to believe as truth? Carl Sagan, a noted Unitarian Universalist, used as his method of truth detection, what he called his baloney detection kit. Don Thompson will use Carl's baloney detection kit as a source to help us all resist the urge to pass on statements that are untrue.

The UU's will be meeting at 10:30 a.m. on Sunday at 3:30 p.m. at San Juan following a 9:30 a.m. community breakfast with the members of Alamosa Presbyterian Church.

For information, please call Don Thompson at 719-587-5529.

The Right Time for Your Dream to Come True

When God created you, He made you a unique individual and He has a special plan for your life. You have a God-ordained destiny! As you pursue a personal relationship with Him, you can discover the wonderful life He has for you in Christ and become everything He's created you to be. Your relationship with Christ is a daily, lifelong journey, and along the way God will give you dreams, desires, and hope for change in your life. Maybe you want to see a change in your family relationships, friendships, work situation, or finances. Or you may be hoping and praying for changes to happen in your loved ones' lives. Whatever your hopes and dreams may be, God wants to help you fulfill His purposes in your life. But He usually won't tell you when those things will come to pass because you have to go through a season of preparation to be ready for them.

My Crazy Dream
I remember when God put His dream in my heart in 1976 to teach the Bible to people all over the world. It seemed crazy because I was nobody from nowhere with a twelfth-grade education who almost failed English, and I hadn't been to Bible college or seminary. But I knew in my heart that God wanted to use me to preach the Gospel.

When God speaks something to your heart, as crazy as it may seem, you can believe it! You have a passion to do it, it's on your mind a lot, and you will sacrifice anything to get it. From the day God revealed His call on my life, I have wanted to teach His Word more than anything else in the world. But it didn't happen overnight. There were years of preparation I had to go through to get to the point where I could do what I'm doing today. It wasn't easy because I wanted my ministry to grow so badly and I couldn't understand why it was taking so long. But during these years, I learned what it means to really trust God and know that He will do the best thing for me at the right time.

There are examples in the Bible of people who had to wait for God to fulfill their dreams:

Moses wanted to deliver his people from slavery in Egypt and he spent 40 years in the desert before he was ready.

Joseph spent 13 years in prison for something he didn't do before God gave him favor with Pharaoh, who gave him a position of authority over all the land of Egypt.

David was anointed to be king 20 years before he sat on the throne.

God wants to give us favor and the ability to fulfill our destinies, and He will do so as we learn to trust His timing with a good attitude.

You Can't Rush God

People are often in a hurry to reach their goals, but God is not. I've discovered that being frustrated about how long I have to wait will never make God hurry. God knows what we need to go through to prepare us to walk in His plans. The best thing we can do during these times is learn to wait patiently, trusting God's timing.

Waiting patiently is not just waiting; it's how we act while we're waiting. The training, or preparation, we go through in the process of reaching our dream teaches us how to trust God and wait on His timing with a good attitude.

Psalms 31:14-15 (NIV) says, "I trust in you, Lord; I say, 'You are my God.' My times are in your hands." And Habakkuk 2:3 (AMP) says, "For the vision is yet for the appointed [future] time.... Even though it delays, wait [patiently] for it, because it will certainly come; it will not delay."

These verses encourage us to be determined to trust God and wait on Him for His perfect timing. When it seems the dream He's put in your heart is delayed, you can stir up your hope in Christ for change to happen because God is faithful.

Your Destiny Is Beautiful in God's Time
We will be tempted to try and make things happen in our own effort sometimes, but when we give in to it, we put off God's answer even longer. Your journey may be long, but you can enjoy it if you'll make up your mind to trust God. Don't be moved emotionally and try to give birth to your dream prematurely.

Ecclesiastes 3:1 (NIV) tells us, "There is a time for everything, and a season for every activity under the heavens." And verse 11 says, "He has made everything beautiful in its time...." The changes and breakthroughs we are praying for will certainly come as we wait on God. And they will be beautiful in the right time, but not outside of God's timing.

Choose to live in the rest of God... peaceful in the midst of the storms of life and the seasons of waiting for change. Enjoy the freedom of not having to know everything or have everything figured out. Instead, replace frustration with trust that God is good. He knows what He's doing, and He will do the best thing for you at the right time!

Adams State prepares for tough stretch

Grizzlies look to carry momentum into road split at Colorado Mines, UCCS

By AARON KINNISCHTZE
ASU Sports Information Director
ALAMOSA — The Adams State Grizzlies Men's Basketball team looks to extend their win streak this weekend, as they travel north to face off against RMAC opponents Colorado Mines on Friday and UCCS on Saturday. The Grizzlies are coming off of a tremendous weekend last Friday and Saturday, that saw them take down conference opponents Chadron State and Metro State, and improve their RMAC record to 3-4. With a good weekend on the road, the Grizzlies could climb their way back into the RMAC playoff race and begin to put the rest of the conference on notice, making themselves true contenders for the postseason.

While the Grizzlies have not yet won on the road this season, they look to end that notion and get their first road victories against a Mines team that currently sits tied for second in the conference on Friday, and the Mountain Lions of UCCS who sit deadlocked in 5th place with four other teams. The Grizzlies at 3-4 in RMAC competition are on the outside looking in but could be right back in the fold at the end of the weekend, which is something that has been an expectation of the team in recent years.

Guard Juwan Green has continued to impress this season, particularly on the offensive end of the floor. After a small scoring slump, forward Kaelin Crane has rejoined him as the second big scorer for the Grizzlies. Throw in key contributors Rickey Norris, Szymon Walczak and Rylan O'Brien, and the undersized Grizzlies are a force to be reckoned with when they play to their potential. Last weekend, particularly Saturday's blowout win against Metro, the Grizzlies shot 55% from three-point range en route to an 18-point victory against the Roadrunners on their home floor. Shooting had been an area that had plagued the Grizzlies all season long but they appeared to hit their stride Saturday shooting the ball, and hope to carry that momentum into this weekend.

History has not been kind to the Grizzlies at Mines or UCCS, as they have not won in Golden since the 2014-15 season, one of those losses being their first-round playoff exit last season in the RMAC tournament. In Colorado Springs, the Grizzlies last win against the Mountain Lions on the road came in the 2012-13 season, and they will look to end that streak this weekend as well.

If the Grizzlies can continue to shoot the ball well and hold their own on the glass as they have thus far this season despite losing the size advantage, they are fully capable of winning their third and fourth game in a row and raising their RMAC record above .500 on the year. Tip-off in Golden Friday night is set for 8 PM while Saturday night's matchup in Colorado Springs is set to tip-off at 7:30. Live stream as well as live stats will be provided by the opposing schools' websites.

Alamosa takes down Centauri in dual

By STEPHEN JIRON
Courier Sports Editor
LA JARA — Thursday saw a dual between Alamosa and Centauri. The Mean Moose controlled the lower weights and ran away with a 55-24 win.

Both the Falcons and Moose have garnered plenty of respect in the On the Mat rankings by Tim Yount. As a team, Alamosa was ranked first overall in the 3A class which Centauri held the No. 10 spot in 2A wrestling according to the week five rankings.

Alamosa has stayed busy picking up big wins in duals as well as seeing wrestlers get to the later rounds in both the Tournament of Champions in Las Vegas and also the Warrior Classic in Grand Junction. Thursday marked Centauri's first action back from the Christmas break, before that they were on the road at the North Colorado Christmas Tournament in Greeley.

Before the boys hit the mat, everyone was clad in Leukemia awareness orange, bearing the statement 'No One Fights Alone' in support of Aundre Chavez. Both Alamosa and Centauri showed support for Chavez who was diagnosed with Acute Lymphoblastic Leukemia (ALL).

When the action got underway Alamosa swept the lighter weight classes.

At 106 pounds was a competitive matchup as both boys ranked in the top ten of their respective classes. Alamosa freshman Kyler Liddell escaped Mario Vigil hanging on with a 7-5 decision that came down to the final seconds.

From 113 up things went quickly. Alamosa's 113 pounder Dario Valdez scored a fall in the second period against Xander Lopez, at 120, 126 and 132 Alamosa's Davion Chavez, Trevor Maestas and Colton Liddell respectively scored first period pins for the visitors. Both Chavez and Liddell are ranked in their respective weight classes. Chavez third at 120 and Liddell first at 132. Going by weight class, the Moose led 21-0.

Centauri's second-ranked 138 pounder Eyan Chavez put the Falcons on the board with a first-round fall for the home squad. Immediately following, a forfeit at 145 put the Moose ahead 27-6.

Freshman Erik Maestas and sophomore Zach Buhr started a run for the Falcons with two straight pins bringing Centauri closer, by weight the home team trailed 27-18.

Alamosa's Hunter and Garrett Smith retook the momentum with two more falls credited to the Moose for a 39-18 lead by weight class. Alamosa's Zeke Rangel would add a decision followed by a pin from All-American Austin Trujillo. A forfeit at 285 pounds to Centauri's Remi Lucero sealed the dual at a 55-24 win to the visitors.

Both teams will be back at it on Friday for duals in Alamosa. Alamosa will stay home for more grappling on Saturday as they host the Alamosa Classic Tournament.

Safety, sensitivity and older drivers

LAKEWOOD — Driving is a feeling of freedom one gets when he or she can travel anywhere they wish.

But, there may come a point in time when either he or she or a relative or friend must make the decision to put the keys away and find another way to commute.

Talking to an older people about their driving can be difficult and is often delayed until their driving is to a point of being dangerous. But if delayed too long, it can be a hesitation that can turn fatal.

"I speak from personal experience when I lost my grandmother in a crash," said Colorado State Patrol Master Trooper Gary Cutler by press release. "The signs were there prior to the fatal crash, but we failed to see them as a serious enough problem and hesitated in having her stop driving."

"It started with a few scratches here and there on the car — and pulling into the garage a little too far. Perhaps, if we had acted upon those signs we may have had her around longer."

Cutler added: "Years later when another driving situation approached my family, we didn't hesitate to take action."

When his father began to show signs of having trouble driving due to early onset dementia, Cutler said, he and his family took steps to keep him from driving and possibly hurting himself or someone else.

A problem people may face is when older drivers believe they are driving fine, Cutler said, when in fact a dangerous problem exists.

"I won't tell you it was easy to have the conversation," Cutler said. "My father was upset with us for a while, but I would do it again to make sure it keeps everyone safe."

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration showed that in 2018, 19% of all fatal crashes were caused by drivers 65 years and older.

Now, this doesn't mean just because someone turns 65, such a person should have his or her driver's license taken from them.

"Far from it, it just means it's time to start being aware of any changes," Cutler said. "For a start, keep track of eyesight, physical fitness and reflexes."

"If you are an older person, try to avoid driving in bad weather, driving at dusk or night, where it may be harder to see things, or if bright lights have started to bother your eyes."

Other ways to make sure one is being safe is to give oneself more distance between cars and to constantly scan the road ahead, Cutler said.

"Look (for) ways you can extend your driving by being aware of any changes that could be dangerous on the roadways for you and others by adjusting those problems as they arise," he added.

For family members with aging relatives, plan ahead so when the time comes everyone involved knows what needs to be done, Cutler said. Have a discussion with family members about what should be done, and how everyone should respond when and if the time comes.

"Be sensitive to ways you can preserve the older driver's self-respect," Cutler said. "Present concerns in non-threatening terms. Use 'I' messages rather than 'you' messages."

He added: Focus on a plan that maximizes community safety and try to look for ways that can put into place ways that allow the older person to continue to drive if possible by changing habits.

"Don't wait to take steps that could save lives," Cutler said. "As always, safe travels."

Top eight ways of coping with stress

It's the start of a new decade and a time when many people are trying to make more positive changes in their lives.

One of the best things one can all do is focus on reducing his or her stress simply because of the adverse physical and mental health effects that come from not managing it.

Dr. Alok Trivedi is a human behavior expert, founder of the Aligned Performance Institute and author of the book 'Chasing Success.' His seven tips for reducing stress are:

1. Measure one's stress levels: At the end of each day, give oneself a score from 1 to 10 describing one's level of stress on that day. Average out one's numbers at the end of the week to monitor the stress level. Knowing where one stands is important to determine how strong a grip stress has over an individual.

2. Reduce time around the stressor: Maybe it's a coworker. Maybe it's an ex. Perhaps it's watching political news on television. Whatever is causing such stress, reduce the time spend engaged with it. In fact, do what needs to be done in order to avoid this person or thing as quickly as possible so one can move forward and feel better. For those situations that can't be avoided, ask oneself, "What is the healthiest way to respond?" Remember, one can't control the stressor. One can only control one's response.

3. Find outlets for an individual's stress: Whether it's hitting the gym or reading a book, everyone needs an outlet to reduce stress. This is usually around an activity that one enjoy and find pleasurable. Whatever it is that takes one's mind off the hustle and bustle of everyday life and makes one feel free, do more of it.

4. Max O2 Breathing: Most people are adding to their stress due to improper breathing or breathing through the chest. Instead, slow one's breathing and inhale through the diaphragm (stomach area) for seven seconds, hold it for seven seconds and slowly exhale through the lips for seven seconds. This prevents hyperventilation, makes one feel calmer and allows the mind and body to reset.

5. Get rid of your family: For 30 minutes, that is. No matter where one lives, what one does for a living or any other life circumstance, everyone needs to take at least 30 minutes each day for themselves. If one is not taking the time to relax, refresh and recharge one's mind and body, one is going to drown in stress and be unable to function at optimal performance.

6. Take a Freedom Day: A longer version of "me" time is taking an entire mental health day all to oneself. In fact, many companies now offer these to their employees. This is a day one spends doing whatever one want, wherever one wants and with whomever one wants. There are no rules to be followed except getting away from the grind and having fun.

7. Slow down: We live in a very fast-paced time where we are all super connected and multitasking is a way of life. If one want to reduce one's stress, as Supertramp said, "Take the long way home." Walk instead of run. Take the scenic route. Focus on completing one task at a time. Admire one's surroundings. Taste one's food instead of gulping it down. Disconnect from social media and the internet for just one day. Be present in all that one does.

8. Stop being so rigid: Having these set and strict expectations to follow isn't healthy. Instead, be fluid and go with the flow more. Things don't always have to go one's way and one doesn't always have to be in control all of the time. Learn to let go, relax and let life take one wherever it does.

South Fork renovates ice skating rink

By LYNDISIE FERRELL

SOUTH FORK — The new year may be over but the fun is still continuing in South Fork. With the help of the town in partnership with the Friends of South Fork, those coming to the area for some winter fun now have a warm place to go near the ice skating rink located in Rickel Park.

For many years the town has placed the ice skating rink in the parking lot of the visitor center, but this year moved it to a more picturesque setting at Rickel Park. The small rink is now surrounded by frost laden willows edged by the South Fork of the Rio Grande. A sledding hill and playground make it the perfect destination for a day or night of family fun.

In years past, the town and South Fork Visitor Center have offered free skates for those who wish to come enjoy the little ice-skating rink and may not have the equipment to skate. This year, skaters will not pick up their skates or sleds at the Visitor Center. Now sleds and skates are available at the rink at the newly erected ice skating shed.

The town, with a small donation from the Friends of South Fork, recently built a warming hut near the skating rink for everyone to enjoy. The building is small but functional and is laden with every size skate for skaters of all ages to enjoy. "The skates are free, but donations can be made in the donation box located in the warming hut. Donations are used to help keep the rink and shed maintained for the public to enjoy," said visitor center Director Mark Teders.

The warming hut will also have some sleds for anyone who wants to enjoy the sledding hill located right above the skating rink and playground. Families from all over the Valley come to the area to enjoy the small sledding hill which is perfect for families of all ages. Guests can be seen on any given day out enjoying the snow in the park and now they have a warm place to go.

The rink and warming hut are open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week. For more information please call Mark at 719-873-5512.

Do things outdoors even when it's cold

Cold weather can make the desire to be outside less appealing, but it is important for one's mental and physical well-being to get outside. The following activities might coax people outside for some crisp air. TF18C525

The amount of time people spend outdoors has dramatically decreased, as the Environmental Protection Agency now reports the average American spends 87 percent of his or her time in a residence, school building or workplace.

Being outside is linked to better moods, more physical activity and less exposure to contaminants (concentrations of some pollutants are often two to five times higher indoors). Also, people who spend time outside may not come into contact with surface germs or develop various illnesses spread as often as those who spend a lot of time indoors.

Cold weather can make the desire to be outside less appealing, but it is important for one's mental and physical well-being to get outside. The following activities might coax people outside for some crisp air.

CREATE SNOW CRITTERS

Why do snowmen and women get all of the fanfare this time of year? Just about any living or fictional creature can be molded from snow and embellish landscapes. Use food-grade coloring in spray bottles to added even more creative flair to snow designs.

GO ON A NATURE HIKE

While many plants and animals hibernate in winter, there is still plenty to see. Bring along a sketch book or camera and capture nature in winter. White-washed hills can be beautiful to behold, and many small animals and birds look even more vivid against the white backdrop of snow.

MAKE AN OBSTACLE COURSE

Turn an area of the yard or park into a homemade obstacle course. It's much more difficult — and a great workout — to try to jump over snow mounds or run down paths when decked out in warm layers. Engage in light-hearted competitions with friends and family members.

GET SPORTY

Sledding, skating, snowshoeing, and ice hockey are just a few of the winter sports that can get the heart pumping and muscles working outside. These activities are entertaining and also great exercise.

When venturing outdoors in winter, dress in layers. This way clothing can be put on or taking off to reduce the likelihood of hypothermia. TF18C525

Ashes have waited 30 years to be scattered over hawaii

DEAR ABBY: Thirty years ago, a friend of my husband's roommate passed away of AIDS and was cremated. His family had ostracized him. I have no idea who they are or where they are. The roommate left and later died, also from AIDS. He left his friend's ashes in his old room in my husband's house in the San Francisco Bay area with instructions to scatter them in Hawaii.

The ashes have been sitting reverently in a cardboard box on a shelf in our several homes for all these 30 years. We are still together, but getting old. There is no paperwork of any kind. All we know about the deceased is his name and the fact that he was a friend.

Before I die, I would like to resolve this problem and arrange for the ashes to have a permanent resting place, preferably in Hawaii. I have a nephew who lives on the Big Island, where the scattering should take place. How should I proceed, in light of the no paperwork problem? -- MIKE IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR MIKE: I applaud your caring heart and your determination to carry out this man's last wishes. I took your question to Joshua Slocum, executive director of the Funeral Consumers Alliance, and this is what he told me:

"There is no impediment to your taking the ashes and placing them where you wish since there are no relatives

DEAR REALLY WISH: The person who was really upset that you didn't buy him wine on one of those dates should have been told that you are on a fixed income and it wasn't within your budget. You should also have told him you were reciprocating within your ability. If he needed a drink that badly, he could have paid for his own. You're lucky to be rid of him.

In the future, TELL the man you are seeing that after you know him better, you would love to treat him to some home-cooked meals, which might actually be nicer than what you can afford to buy him in a restaurant. He might appreciate both your candor and the food. If he doesn't, I think you will be lucky to be rid of him, too.

P.S. Have you considered paying the tab for a casual breakfast, lunch or a coffee/pastry date instead of dinner?

Mitguards bring unique style to Del Norte

Wildwood Sounds hosting its 727th concert

DEL NORTE — The Mitguards' musical style, a hybrid of American roots music that includes folk, country and swing, makes their sound powerful and distinct, and they will be performing at Wildwood Sounds on Friday, Jan. 17.

Based in Colorado Springs, the band consists of Chris Mitguard on acoustic guitar, harmonica and vocals and Deb Mitguard on mandolin, accordion and vocals.

Their original songs, framed by unique musical arrangements, weave a mixture of humor and tragedy through the stories they tell. Chris, a Colorado native, is the songwriter for the band and has been writing songs since he was a young boy in the 1960s. His songs create powerful, visual, almost cinematic images. His well-crafted story lines are full of twists, turns and irony. They create the perfect backdrop for his sad, beautiful, sometimes dangerous and undeniably human characters. Deb grew up north of Detroit and has been performing since she was a young girl. Through the years she fell in love with mandolin and accordion and has developed a unique and charming style of playing. She has a natural sense of composition and theme, which adds layers of texture to The Mitguards' sound. Said Bill Reed of the Colorado Springs Gazette, "In his (Chris') songwriting, Mitguard resists the urge to turn roots music into a reach for some mythical, idyllic past, and goes for a more relevant and immediate impact."

The Mitguards are constantly expanding and stretching their material and performance style. Their spirited banter and engaging humor on stage creates an endearing and intimate atmosphere. The Mitguards have played internationally in Canada and Australia. They perform primarily throughout the west with regular tours through Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming, South Dakota, and northern California.

The price for tickets are $20 door /reserve. For more information, call 719-657-4757, or wwshcv7@gmail.com. Doors open at 6:30 and Showtime is at 7 p.m. Sweetie snackie Refreshments will be of the potluck variety. Attendees can bring their favorite treat to share with coffee and tea on the house.

Wildwood Sounds is located at 850 Grande Ave. in Del Norte on Highway 160. A perfect listening room with perfect acoustics. This will be the venue's 727th concert.
