ASU's Mortensen retires

Grizzlies' AD will step down after his 14th season

ALAMOSA — Athletic Director Larry Mortensen will retire from Adams State University at the end of the spring semester in May, leaving behind a legacy of devotion to the significant student-athlete population on campus.

A national search for Mortensen's replacement will begin immediately, said Adams State President Cheryl D. Lovell.

"Adams State is a special place that serves a unique mission, and I'm proud to have served that mission for nearly a quarter-century," said Mortensen, who was appointed athletic director in the 2006-2007 academic year following 11 years as Adams State head men's basketball coach.

"Adams State has been life-

changing for me," Mortensen said. "I hope I have contributed, in some small part, to the betterment of the institution and the student-athletes Adams State serves."

Adams State fields 18 NCAA Division II teams that compete in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference.

The student-athlete population represents more than a third of the total student population at Adams State, an emphasis Adams State will make in its search for a new athletic director.

"Larry has been an invaluable part of Adams State and I have grown to trust and value his opinion and leadership," Lovell said. "The athletic director role is a critical position for the university. The student-athletes are a vital part of Adams State and our commitment is to build on the work Larry has done in growing and serving a diverse student-athlete group."

Alamosa clinic handles 6,200-plus outpatients per year

ALAMOSA — The San Luis Valley is a beautiful region in south-central Colorado with an average elevation of 7,664 feet and a cold desert climate.

The Valley is picturesque, with the Great Sand Dunes National Park and Preserve nestled at the foot of the usually snow-capped Sangre de Cristo Range. Just down the road from the park is the City of Alamosa, featuring a VA Clinic that is small but mighty.

During fiscal year 2019, more than 1,100 veterans used the Alamosa clinic, completing 6,200-plus outpatient visits. Good things are happening at the Alamosa clinic, and the team of dedicated employees is at the heart of that progress.

The in-house Alamosa team consists of a primary care provider, a registered nurse, a licensed practical nurse, two telehealth technicians, a medical support assistant and a licensed professional mental health counselor. The clinic also has remote staff, like audiologist Diane Brady, who serves veterans from her home office.

Because Alamosa is a small city, the staff are well known and often run into their veterans at the local grocery store or gas station. Most of the staff even grew up in or near Alamosa. Telehealth tech Debra Martinez said, "I've had veterans come up to me at the store and ask me to make them an appointment. It feels like family here."

San Luis man found dead in his backyard

By SYLVIA LOBATO

SAN LUIS — A suspicious death was discovered in San Luis early Saturday Dec. 21 in the 700 block of Pedro Street.

Reports from the Costilla County Sheriff's Office said Dennis Valdez was found deceased in his backyard, triggering an investigation that is still ongoing.

The sheriff, 12th Judicial District Attorney's Office and Colorado Bureau of Investigation are all part of the probe.

Sheriff's Sgt. Clark said there are some items and materials, but nothing concrete as to the manner of death, who may know about it or be involved with it.

"As of now, we are calling it a suspicious death," Clark said. "At this time there is no threat to the general public."

Persons who might know about the incident are welcome to call the sheriff's office at 719-672-0673.

TSA Precheck is now in Alamosa

By HELEN SMITH Staff Writer

ALAMOSA — Travellers looking to fly out of the San Luis Valley Regional Airport can now get the Transportation Security Administration's Precheck in Alamosa.

Gigi Dennis, Alamosa County Administrator, was quick to point out that this new addition to the area is a big step forward for local flyers.

"A person used to have to go to DIA or Colorado Springs to get this done, but there is a local company that will send in the paperwork and does the fingerprinting in Alamosa," she said.

Dennis further noted that the TSA's Colorado Springs branch recently closed its office, so this is added convenience for anyone in Southern Colorado."

To apply, an individual can fill out the paperwork at https://www.tsa.gov/precheck, then proceed to make an appointment or walk into the local office.

The cost for Precheck is $85 and covers membership for five years.

Dennis said, "It speeds up security, and you don't have to remove your shoes, laptop, liquids, etc." She called the process "Fast, easy, and convenient."

Joseph J. 'JC' Clark, 103

SALIDA—Having lived to the age of 103, Joseph J. ("JC") Clark, a quiet, unassuming, gentle man peacefully passed from this life into the next on Dec. 24, 2019, at the Colorado Veterans Community Living Center (CVCLC) at Homelake.

He served for 19 months with the Army Air Corps in World War II in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater with the 565th Signal Aircraft Warning Battalion.

He was a cryptologist who typed personnel rosters and records and handled correspondence for the Intelligence Department.

(Cryptology is the conversion of data into a secret code for transmission over a public network.)

Mr. Clark was born on Sept. 6, 1916, in a home in the San Luis Valley where he eventually farmed for 13 years.

When farming was no longer a viable option, he moved his family to Salida, and worked for the Colorado State Reformatory in Buena Vista for 21 years before he retired. He loved to fish and hunt small game and would often return to the Valley to enjoy those hobbies with friends.

He enjoyed playing cards and he loved gardening. He was always making sure his plants and lawn got the attention he felt they deserved in his well-groomed yard.

He and his wife, Madelyn, enjoyed 73 years of marriage. To their union three children were born, one, a girl, died at birth and Cheryl and Craig, both single. Ronnie Clark, who lives in Texas, is Mr. Clark's son by his first marriage.

Cremation was selected and a memorial, along with burial, will occur in Salida at a later date, to be determined.

Mrs. Clark is deeply grateful to those who took care of "JC" at the Veterans' Center where the couple has resided for the past two years.

Clinic

Donald Romero, are veterans themselves, and most of the others have veterans in their families. Everyone is dedicated to their work and really enjoy what they do.

Snow, a former Navy corpsman, said, "I love being able to help other veterans, to get to know them. It's a different kind of relationship because we're so small here."

Snow recently started traveling to the nearby State Veterans Community Living Center on Monday mornings to offer hearing aid services. "I pack up my gear and take our audiologist with me remotely. We help an average of five veterans each Monday, which saves them from having to travel to our clinic."

"I love working with fellow vets," Romero agreed. "It doesn't really feel like work, if that makes sense."

He was an Army infantryman, and now uses that experience to connect with his mental health patients. "We went through a lot of the same things, and that helps build trust. I know what it's like to eat MREs all the time. I know what it's like to be deployed. They know I get it."

Romero went on, "I enjoy working in Alamosa because it's my hometown."

For those that don't know, telehealth is much like a traditional health care appointment. If a veteran has a telehealth appointment at Alamosa, they would go to the clinic, sign in and have a seat in the waiting room. A nurse would come to greet the vet and take them to one of four exam rooms to check vitals and talk about the reason for the visit, but that is where traditional ends and progressive health care begins.

A telehealth tech enters the exam room and outlines their role in the appointment, connecting the veteran online with the telehealth provider, who appears on a screen.

From there, the tech essentially acts as the provider's hands and assists with the instructed care from the monitor. These techs and the nurse use a variety of tools to help the provider see inside ears and throats, listen to hearts and lungs, check blood pressure and other tasks, just like an in-house provider does.

The provider looks at the results on screen and then instructs the tech and nurse what to do next, until the end of the appointment.

The process may seem strange to those who've never had a telehealth appointment, but many veterans said it's not much different than having a provider in the room. Romero said, "I provide mental health counseling to veterans in remote locations via something like Skype or Facetime on a screen. I can see and hear the vet, and he or she can see and hear me."

Romero thinks more appointments will be done via telehealth in the future. "It's a great tool, especially since we live out in rural Colorado, and the weather can be bad," he added.

Whether veterans come to the Alamosa clinic for an in-person visit or a telehealth appointment with a remote provider, they will be met with a friendly health care experience, where sense of community is proud and prevalent.

From time to time, veterans on vacation in the San Luis Valley stop into the clinic with questions or requests and the staff does what they can to help.

It's all part of that small-town charm.

ASU artist in residency Shelby Head (left) with Jose Martinez, one of the grant heirs to La Sierra. Head's project, focusing on stories by La Sierra grant heirs, will open in the Adams State University Cloyde Snook Gallery on Monday, Jan. 13.

La Sierra opens at Adams State Cloyde Snook Gallery

ALAMOSA — In the fall of 2019, visual artist Shelby Head worked alongside San Luis Land Rights Council members collecting stories from the beneficiaries of the 1843 land grant issued under the Mexican land grant system.

These seven recorded stories will become large wall projections in the 2020 exhibition titled La Sierra at the Cloyde Snook Gallery on the campus of Adams State University from Jan. 13 through Feb. 6.

An opening reception for the exhibition will be from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m. on Friday, Jan. 17, and will include the grant heirs' personal stories concerning the historic land rights to La Sierra.

The centerpiece for the exhibition is a large-scale shrine designed and installed by San Luis sculptor, Huberto Maestas, Adams State Class of 1984, from donations made by Costilla County residents. The shrine is dedicated to the spirit of La Sierra and to the generations of families who have used the mountain range for water, grazing, logging, wood, hunting and fishing.

The exhibition will travel to universities and museums in Colorado before finding a permanent home in San Luis.

This art project was made possible due to a National Endowment for the Arts Challenge America Grant awarded to the Adams State University Department of Art and Theatre for the Social Practice Arts Residency in the San Luis Valley.

Opinion

God bless America ...

HOLLYWOOD— God Bless America, and how's everybody?

The Golden Globes Awards were highlighted by Ricky Gervais' blistering and hilarious anti-PC opening monologue.

It didn't go unnoticed in Washington. Ricky Gervais could be impeached and removed from show business for attacking Hollywood without first obtaining Congressional approval.

The Beverly Hilton Hotel hosted the Golden Globe Awards Sunday that aired on NBC. Before the celebrities arrived, a sewage pipe suddenly burst in front of the hotel, soaking the red carpet in raw sewage water. It was widely believed to be Donald Trump's second successful attack in three days.

President Trump ordered the military to launch a drone-fired Hellfire missile to kill Iran's Major General and terrorism coordinator Qassim Soleimani.

The mainstream media was aghast. If Trump killed Hitler, the New York Times would mourn the loss of a promising Austrian artist and vegetarian Iran's Major General Qassim Soleimani was killed by a Hellfire missile fired by a drone aircraft waiting for him to deplane on the tarmac at the Baghdad Airport on Thursday. Naturally the Iraqis call the act a murder. However, the New York City prison medical examiner ruled his death a suicide.

Iran reacted swiftly to the drone attack assassination of its leading terrorist General Suleimani in Baghdad last Thursday. Iran immediately offered an $80 million reward for the head of Donald Trump. Imagine how awful Kathy Griffin feels, she had it in her hand and then threw it away. President Trump announced the assassination of Iran's terror coordinator General Suleimani on Thursday in a TV broadcast.

Trump insisted he does not want a war. He is considering giving a speech this week in Beverly Hills, which will give Trump a chance to speak directly to the Iranian people.

French president Emmanuel Macron reacted to the war drums in the Persian Gulf on Saturday and declared that the nation of France would not join the United States in any armed conflict with Iran.

It's a brand-new record. The war hasn't even started and already France has surrendered.

The Cure for everything

The only time you see gray-haired people like me on television is in commercials that only run during the evening news. You'll see an athletic gray-haired guy and his athletic wife running down a beach, playing tennis and dancing on the deck of a cruise ship while a serious, disembodied voice intones, "You'll know when it's time for Splondocaine." The voice never tells you what Splondocaine does, or what it's for, but instead just tells you to ask your doctor about it. It's like a big secret we can't let young children know about yet.

"Mom, what's Splondocaine?" "Watch your mouth! We don't talk about that kind of stuff in this house. You'll know when it's time!"

During the rest of the commercial, the voice tries to warn you, in frantic speed-whispers, NOT to take Splondocaine, for the love of God!

"In some people, Splondocaine may cause drowsiness, vomiting, stomach upset, mucous discharge, yellowing of the skin, visions, dementia, loss of hearing, warts, curvature of the spine, sleep apnea, loss of feeling in the forehead, smelly feet, bad breath, a deep and abiding sense of impending doom, liver spots, baldness, wrinkles, sciatica, bed-wetting, liver damage, loose teeth and forgetfulness. Did I mention the drowsiness?"

The man and the woman in the commercial were now laughing at a kid flying a kite. That did it: I decided I had to have some. So I went to my doctor. "Doc, don't you think it's time I took Splondocaine?"

"I don't know," he said. "How long have you been constipated?"

"Is that what it's for?"

"Well, what did you think?"

"I thought it was like marijuana for old people. Have you seen their ads? Those people are high. I thought that's what the kite meant."

The next night, I saw a commercial for Plasothalix. It came between an ad for adult diapers and another for Polident. It showed a gray-haired man blowing a horn, eating corn on the cob and laughing on a big, fancy sailboat. The serious voice said, "Joe used to worry, but he doesn't anymore. He uses Plasothalix twice a day and is the life of the party. Ask your doctor about Plasothalix today! May cause dry heaves, cold sweats, boils, manic depression, palsy, dry mouth, emotional outbursts, itchy skin, sneezing, runny nose, tennis elbow, psoriasis, foaming of the mouth, fingertip soreness, loss of a sense of time and lower back pain. Do not drink alcohol or eat cashews while taking Plasothalix."

I called the doctor again. "Doc, I'm sick with worry. Shouldn't I be taking Plasothalix twice a day?"

"Oh, wouldn't think so," he said. "You've got plenty of hair."

"Hair? I thought for sure it was for anxiety. Or maybe motion sickness. Do you have anything for anxiety? Because I'm very anxious. Don't you ever watch the news? People with gray hair are falling apart! I'm afraid to walk down the street. Pieces of me may drop off the way tailpipes come off old cars."

"Maybe there is something you should take," Doc told me. "I'm going to call in a prescription for Evenitol for you."

"Evenitol? I've seen that commercial. Isn't that the one where the gray-haired guy is out jogging with a gray-haired woman, and after that, they play handball and go rock-climbing? Then he goes swimming while she does tai chi in the park. Then he plays baseball, and finally they go camping and whitewater rafting together that same night. You'd have to give a 20-year-old oxygen and adrenaline to do all that in one day, but these people seem fine. So what's Evenitol for? Chronic severe rectal itch? Adult diaper rash? Mole hair?"

"No — it softly but gently puts you to sleep during the evening news. You'll never have to watch those commercials again. Take two and don't call me in the morning."

Seed exchange, online gardening resources

Mark your calendars for the fifth annual "Seed to Seed Community Seed Exchange" to take place on Jan. 25, from 2-4 p.m. It will be held on the first floor of Adam State University's Nielsen Library.

The goal is for San Luis Valley gardeners to share seeds and information. Since our Januarys are usually so cold, I find meeting with others to exchange seeds and ideas gets me excited about the upcoming gardening season that can seem so far in the future. It's not too early to plan. Hope to see you there.

This event is hosted by Nielsen's "Seed to Seed: A Seed Library for the SLV." The tag line is "Borrow seeds, grow 'em, then harvest and return some seeds for future gardeners." Visit the website: libguides.adams.edu/seedtoseed/exchange. If you can't make it to the exchange, you can check out seeds at the library. They now have 100% community provided seeds. I think this is a great accomplishment. Co-sponsors include the SLV Local Foods Coalition, Valley Educational Gardens Initiative and the Alamosa Community Greenhouse.

Perhaps you're contemplating growing vegetables or flowers this summer but aren't sure what to plant when and where. There are some handy resources available online. For example, from the Seed Library homepage, click on the Flyers and Handouts tab and then on the SLV Planting Guide link.

This takes you to an elegant and easy to comprehend one-page, downloadable pdf file created by VEGI regarding when and where to plant herbs and vegetables. VEGI also has a Facebook page with an events link. Last year's events included a how to backyard compost presentation and a microgreens workshop.

If you're interested in planting a SLVhardy flower garden, visit my Alamosa Flowers website (alamosaflowers.net) and click on the Hardy Garden tab. It gives details on 25 flowers that grow easily in our Valley. All photos are of specimens from our garden, not from a catalog.

The SLV LFC (slvlocalfoods.org) mission is: "To foster an equitable local food system that restores the health of the people, community, economy and ecosystem." The Rio Grande Farm Park (riograndefarmpark.org) is under its direction and has monthly hands-on workshops. Past workshops included helping plant (and learn about plants) at the Farm Park during the summer and constructing birdhouses during the winter. There are several good websites that are not specific to the Valley. You have to be careful as our climate is unique and not the same as the rest of the state. However, in general, our state is higher in altitude than most others with an average elevation of 6,800 feet above sea level. Alamosa is 7,536 feet and has an average of 95 frost-free days. Monte Vista is higher at 7,665 feet and has 97 frost-free days. I was surprised at this as I think of Monte Vista as being a fair amount warmer. In comparison, Denver's altitude is 5,280 feet and it typically has 155 frost-free days.

The United States Department of Agriculture has a plant hardiness zone map for Colorado. The Uncover Colorado website (uncovercolorado.com/gardening-in-colorado) has a link to the USDA zone map, as well as tips for gardening at high altitudes. It lists Alamosa as 4b, meaning our average annual extreme minimum temperature ranges from minus-25 to minus-20 degrees. I tend to consider our yard to be 3b with minimum temperatures ranging from minus-35 to minus-30. I do OK in the warmest and most protected parts of the garden with zone 4 plants.

I also frequently refer to the Colorado State University Extension's website (extension.colostate.edu) for guidance. If you're new to Colorado gardening, I encourage you to search for their pdf fact sheet "Challenge to Newcomers — 7.220". One of the surprising

Safe2Tell conduit for students

Tips continue to increase since last December

DENVER — Safe2Tell released its monthly report for December, and although fewer tips were submitted than last month, monthly tip volume continues to rise when compared to the previous school year.

In December, the program received 2,100 tips, an 8% increase in monthly tip volume compared to December 2018.

To date for the 2019-20 school year, Safe2Tell has received 11,485 tips, a 25% increase over the 2018-19 school year. Suicide threats (403), drugs (150) and bullying (141) continued to be the top categories of tips reported to the program. "Although Safe2Tell reports decrease during the holidays when many of our Colorado schools are on break, the continued increase in monthly tip volume when compared to last year shows our students and families are remaining vigilant," said Attorney General Phil Weiser. "As we move into 2020, it is important that students continue to report anything they deem suspicious or cause for concern."

False tips remain at approximately 2.5% of all tips submitted. False tips are those that contain untrue information and are submitted with the intent to harm, injure or bully another person.

In November, the program received 2,595 tips, showing only a slight decrease to 2,100 during December. Historically, Safe2Tell will experience drops in reports during the spring, summer and winter school breaks.

"Safe2Tell tip volume often decreases during the month of December. Even though most schools are closed for a time during this month, the holidays can be difficult for those dealing with mental health issues. We want to remind students that they can anonymously report any safety concerns they may have, day or night, to Safe2Tell," said Essi Ellis, director of Safe2Tell.

In December, anonymous tips from students and other individuals successfully helped prevent incidents of self-harm and illegal activity. For example:

A Safe2Tell report was received regarding animal cruelty. Police investigated and forwarded the information to the animal control unit.

A report was made to Safe2Tell about underage drinking. Police investigated and issued citations.

A Safe2Tell report was made about a student's welfare. Police conducted a welfare check.

The following is an example of misuse of the Safe2Tell system:

A person reached out to the Safe2Tell tip line requesting advice about how to report a co-worker to human resources.

Safe2Tell is a successful violence intervention and prevention program for students to anonymously report threats to their own and others' safety. Safe2Tell is not an emergency response unit; it is a conduit of information for distributing anonymous tips to local law enforcement, school officials and other appropriate responding parties according to state law.

To make a report, individuals can call 1-877-542-7233 from anywhere, 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Reports also can be made at Safe2Tell.org or through the Safe2Tell mobile app which is available on the Apple App Store or Google Play.

Wolf packs already roaming in Colorado

CRAIG — Tuesday, the Craig Daily Press reported that Colorado Parks & Wildlife has confirmed the presence of a wolf pack in Northwest Colorado.

This news is in direct contradiction to pro-wolf groups' claims that wolves are non-existent in Colorado.

CPW confirmed the presence of a wolf pack Monday, the same day that the Colorado Secretary of State announced that an initiative to artificially introduce more wolves into Colorado will be on the 2020 ballot.

The presence of the wolf pack was confirmed at the site of a bull elk kill in Game Unit 201. CPW now believes there is a pack of six wolves working within the game unit. This confirmation is in addition to another wolf sighting near Rocky Mountain National Park last year.

"The out-of-state radical environmental groups pushing forced wolf introduction into Colorado have falsely claimed that there are no wolves present in Colorado. It's just another false narrative to deceive the citizens of Colorado. The news from CPW (Tuesday) implodes their propaganda. This is another one of their baseless and untruthful claims that pro-wolf radicals are known for," said Denny Behrens, co-chairman of the Colorado Stop the Wolf Coalition.

Colorado Parks & Wildlife has already studied the issue of wolves in Colorado and, dating back to 2016, has been opposed to forced wolf introduction in the state. Colorado Stop the Wolf Coalition has asked CPW officials to test the recovered wolf scat for Hydatid Disease (aka Gray Wolf Disease) to protect humans, pets, and wildlife from this deadly parasite that is spread by wolves which often roam hundreds of miles.

In addition to CPW, 23 Colorado counties have already officially opposed forced wolf introduction in the state, citing the danger to other wildlife populations, livestock, and the needless risk to humans and pets.

Monte Vista can't fend off Wildcats

By STEPHEN JIRON
Courier Sports Editor

MONTE VISTA — It was a rough return to the court for the Monte Vista boys basketball team. The visiting Wildcats took advantage of a few scoring dry spells from the home squad to take a 57-38 win on the road.

Monte Vista is feeling its way through the season. The Pirates (3-3) opened 2019/20 with three straight wins leading them to the championship game in the La Junta Shootout on December 14th.

Monte Vista senior Jarren Chavez (1) eases in an uncontested lay up on a breakaway during Tuesday's game with Pueblo Central.

Since then the Pirates took second place to Centauri and fell in overtime to Buena Vista on the road, setting up Monte Vista's game with Pueblo Central Tuesday night.

Pueblo Central hails from the South Central League in the 4A class. The Wildcats have been having their own struggles this year entering Tuesday's non-league game with a 5-6 record.

Despite giving up a class to the visitors Monte Vista was in the thick of competition in the early going.

The Pirates kept the Wildcats close through the first quarter playing to a 7-7 tie. That was when Central was able to string together 7 unanswered points. A three-pointer from Monte Vista junior Nick Torrez stopped the bleeding and got the Pirates out of the first quarter trailing 14-10.

The second chapter was when the visitors really began to pull away. Monte Vista senior Jarren Chavez potted two buckets in the second stanza to lead an 8-point quarter from the home team, and the Pirates went to the break trailing 30-18.

Back from the locker rooms, Monte Vista's offense continued to struggle and settled for 6 points in the third quarter, four of which came from the free-throw line. Monte Vista went 6 of 8 from the charity stripe on Tuesday night.

Facing a 45-24 deficit to begin the fourth quarter, Monte Vista's offense would get a little room to work. As the quarter wore on the Pirates put together a 6-point run and were able to close the distance a little before the end of regulation. The Monte Vista's team lead in scoring went to junior Tyrese Otero who picked up 11 points, courtesy of a 9-point rush in the fourth quarter. Otero was followed by senior Jarren Chavez who also hit double digits with 10 points.

The loss makes three in a row and knocks the Pirates down to .500 on the season. Monte Vista will be looking for a quick rebound and will get a chance to do just that when they head north for a meeting with Kent Denver (2-3).

The Sun Devils are a game removed from their own three-game skid and will be playing both Alamosa and Monte Vista over the weekend. Alamosa at 7 p.m. on the 10th and Monte Vista at 1:30 p.m. on the 11th.

Alamosa wrestling knows success brings pressure

By DAN MOHRMANN
CHSAA Feature

ALAMOSA — In recent years, it's become a common sight to see the Alamosa Mean Moose hoisting a Class 3A state wrestling championship trophy.

In 2019, the Moose claimed a second straight state wrestling title and their 13th overall. The program soared to extreme heights under coach Gary Ramstetter. But he has since moved on and it's on one of his former assistants, Rusty Johnson, to keep the program performing at the high level it has grown accustomed to.

"There's pressure, and there's quite a bit of it," Johnson said. "I try not to think about it because that just brings on more pressure. I've been an assistant under Ramstetter for 27 years, so I knew there'd be pressure, just not to this extent."

The way he's alleviating that pressure is relying on those competitors that have thrived at Alamosa.

The Mean Moose return four state placers from last year's team and each one will be vital in helping Johnson ease into his role and keep the team competing as a state powerhouse.

Of those four returners, Davion Chavez brings the most experience. He finished second in the 106-pound bracket and claimed a state title as a freshman.

"I lean on him pretty hard," Johnson said. "I also have three other seniors that placed at state last year that I push a lot off on to them as well."

Colton Liddell placed fourth at 132, Hunter Smith placed fourth at 145 and Austin Trujillo placed sixth at 220.

Those finishes along with the state championship claimed by then-senior Joe Chavez at 126 was good enough for Alamosa to hold off Eaton and claim a state title.

But that was last year. If there is one thing that Johnson has learned in his time with the program it's that championship performances don't automatically carry over.

"There's always work to be done," Johnson said. "Just at the tournaments we've competed at so far, they've competed well."

Maybe the best performance came at the Warrior Classic just before the winter break. Davion Chavez found himself in a championship match at 120, but lost to Grand Junction's Dawson Collins.

Liddell finished fourth, Smith finished third and Trujillo took fifth.

The Mean Moose will get back in action this week with a couple of duals before hosting the Alamosa Invitational this weekend.

With just over a month remaining until the state tournament, it's important for the team to see as much action as possible in order to get the full team, not just those who placed last year, ready to get back to Pepsi Center to defend the team title.

"It helps a lot," Johnson said. "There's always some concern with the younger guys and how they're going to perform at state. I'm counting on some of them to perform well and place at state."

In the most recent On the Mat team rankings, the Mean Moose checked in as the new No. 1 team in 3A. Outside perception has a funny way of adding just a bit more pressure to what Johnson is facing in his first year at the helm.

"We're not that good yet," he said with a laugh.

But that doesn't mean that won't be the case on the floor at Pepsi Center on a late Saturday night in February.

Colorado will join state-to-state verification service

Process will ensure driver license, ID card holders have only one credential

DENVER — On Jan. 27, Colorado is expected to implement the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators' (AAMVA) State-to-State (S2S) information sharing program, joining 26 other participating states.

By joining the program, Colorado's Division of Motor Vehicles (DMV) is helping to protect our customers against identity theft and ensuring Coloradans only have one REAL ID-compliant driver license or ID card.

S2S provides a means for states to electronically check with all other participating states to determine if the applicant currently holds a driver license or identification card in another state.

State participation in the program is voluntary. Unexpired, out-of-state credentials, which are often no longer in use, could be used for identity theft if they fell into the wrong hands. Two separate credentials also means two separate records, which can make it more difficult to identify or act upon serious driving violations.

With this implementation, those with credentials in more than one participating state will retain only the most recently-issued credential.

For more information about State-to-State and to view a state participation map, visit www.aamva.org/State-to-State/.

Colorado's participation in the S2S program is part of the state's REAL ID compliance plan.

For more information about REAL ID and how it affects the public and states, visit <https://www.dhs.gov/real-id>.

In implementing the S2S program, the DMV is proactively protecting Coloradans and the identities of those who transferred or are transferring credentials to another state.

Prior to S2S, Colorado and other states relied on an applicant's selfattestation when signing a license or ID card application, with no ability to verify information beyond what a person offered voluntarily.

The information exchanged between participating states in the S2S program is only enough to point inquiring states to the jurisdiction with the applicant's record.

This information includes name, birthdate, customer identification number and the last five digits of an applicant's Social Security number.

The federal government does not have access to the S2S service and the law that funded the development of S2S prohibits the creation of a new means of access for federal agencies.

The Colorado Division of Motor Vehicles offers 35 online services at mydmv.colorado.gov.

Renew your driver license, renew your motor vehicle registration, get a driving record and more.

Report courtesy of Colorado DMV.

Seniors can drive safely

A greater sense of independence is often cited as the reason so many young people anxiously await the day they earn their drivers' licenses. But the connection between driving and independence is not lost on seniors, either.

Aging can take its toll on drivers, prompting such drivers' families to feel as if their loved ones' ability to safely operate motor vehicles has been compromised. However, many seniors can still safely operate motor vehicles, and those who do can take steps to ensure they're as safe as possible behind the wheel.

Avoid driving on days when aches and pains are strong. Aches and pains are common side effects of aging, and seniors know that some days are better than others.

Seniors' ability to control their vehicles may be compromised on days when stiffness, aches or pains seem particularly strong, so it's best to avoid driving during these times.

Fatigue may set in on days when aches and pains require extra effort to perform relatively simple tasks, and drivers of all ages should avoid driving while tired.

Don't skip medical checkups. Few seniors may look forward to their medical checkups, but visits to the doctor can reveal issues that can help seniors be safer on the road.

Schedule routine vision exams so eyeglass prescriptions are always up-to-date.

In addition, seniors should discuss hearing screenings with their physicians so they can ensure they can always hear sirens and other motorists while on the road. Great strides have been made in regard to helping people with fading hearing hear better, and seniors would be wise to take advantage of such advancements, which include hearing aids that can be connected to smartphones.

Familiarize yourself with medication side effects. Whether they do so temporarily or permanently, many seniors take medications, and every medication comes with side effects. When filling a new prescription, carefully read the dosage and description label to ensure that it's safe to drive while taking the medicine. Make note any new effects feel when taking a new prescription, avoiding driving if the medication makes one feel fatigued or drowsy or affects one's motor functions. If the side effects of a new prescription are making it difficult to safely operate a vehicle, discuss potential alternatives with a physician.

Avoid driving in certain conditions. Driving in inclement weather, during rush hour and at night makes many drivers uncomfortable, regardless of their age. But such conditions can be especially dangerous for aging drivers whose vision and reaction times might be fading.

Seniors who avoid driving in harsh conditions and heavy traffic may be more comfortable behind the wheel, thereby reducing their risk of accident or injury.

Seniors need not give up their drivers' licenses at the first signs of aging. But adjusting certain behaviors and exercising extra caution can help these men and women stay safe behind the wheel. FC18A355

Census ramping up its recruiting efforts

Bureau plans to hire up to 500,000 workers

ALAMOSA – The U.S. Census Bureau is ramping up its recruiting efforts across the country to hire temporary, part-time census takers for the 2020 Census in communities across the country, including in Colorado and the San Luis Valley.

Nationally, the Bureau plans to hire up to 500,000 workers from a goal of more than 2 million applicants. The positions offer competitive pay, flexible hours, paid training and weekly paychecks.

“Whether you’re looking to earn some extra cash, pay down your student debt, or offset holiday season spending, our part-time positions are a great way to do that,” said Census Bureau Director Steven Dillingham. “What better way to earn some extra money and help shape the future of your community for the next 10 years than with the 2020 Census?”

The Census Bureau needs more applicants in all 50 states and makes every effort to hire locally so census takers are familiar with the neighborhoods and areas they are assigned to work.

“Aside from Puerto Rico, that has already received enough applicants to fill all jobs in the Commonwealth, every other area throughout the nation needs more applicants right now,” said Timothy Olson, Census Bureau associate director for Field Operations. “With low unemployment, the Census Bureau is taking extraordinary efforts to attract enough applicants to fill nearly 500,000 positions this spring.”

The Census Bureau needs more applicants in all six counties of the San Luis Valley.

As of Jan. 6, all counties in the Valley are short of the Bureau’s goal for applications. A breakdown of each county shows Alamosa County has reached 55.9% of the Bureau’s applicant goal; Conejos County is at 57.3%; Costilla 68%; Mineral County only 30%; Rio Grande County has reached the highest level at 87.4%; and Saguache County is at 64.9%.

Anyone age 18 and older, such as recent high school graduates, college students, veterans, retirees, military spouses, seasonal workers and people who are bilingual are highly encouraged to apply.

People who already have jobs and want to earn extra income evenings and weekends are also encouraged to apply. The selection process begins this month, with paid training occurring in March and April. After paid training, most positions work between May and early July.

Census takers are critical for their communities during the 2020 Census — going door to door to collect responses from households who have not responded online, by phone or by mail.

“Our aim is to reach interested applicants right now, inform them of updated pay rates in their area, and get them into the applicant pool to be considered for these critical jobs,” said Olson. “The hiring process occurs in stages, and we are encouraging everyone to apply right now before selections begin in January and February. Most census taker jobs begin training and work this spring.”

The U.S. Constitution mandates that a census of the population be conducted every 10 years. Census statistics are used to determine the number of seats each state holds in the U.S. House of Representatives and inform how state, local and federal lawmakers will allocate billions of dollars in federal funds to local communities every year for the next 10 years.

To determine the pay rate in a specific area, learn more about these positions, or apply for one of the temporary jobs, visit 2020census.gov/jobs.

For more information about the 2020 Census, visit the Census Bureau website.

CTE programs benefit local food bank

BLANCA—On Dec. 13, the Career and Technical Education (CTE) programs at Sierra Grande High School held a canned food drive at the first high school home basketball games.

SkillsUSA is the student organization for the auto program and FCCLA is the student organization for the early childhood program.

Both organizations empower students to become world-class workers, leaders and responsible American citizens. A canned food drive was a way for the students to join the fight against hunger and give back to their community.

Admission to the games was two cans of food for adults and one can for children. Over 100 cans of food were collected and donated to the food bank at the Blanca/Fort Garland Community Center for distribution to families in need.

“We would like to thank the community for their support of our programs, students and our community service project,” said Sierra Grande HS/MS Principal Brandon Mizokami by email.

Hew Hallock, left, and Sarah Stoeber, with the SLV Complete Count Committee encourage residents of the San Luis Valley to respond to the 2020 Census, which begins April 1. The U.S. Census Bureau is now looking for census takers to help count the nation’s population.

Sister gets more of man's time than his wife and kids

DEAR ABBY: I don't know how to handle this. My husband of 29 years spends more time with his sister and her family than he does with me and our children. If I say anything about it, he jumps all over me, defending her. He says she doesn't have anyone to help her. But Abby, she has two grown sons and a husband she recently decided to divorce.

you may need to consult a licensed marriage and family therapist.

DEAR ABBY: Our 47-year-old son remarried two years ago. We have a 15-year-old grandson from his previous marriage who lives with his mom and who visits his dad every other weekend. We are not close with our new in-laws, who live out of state.

We recently found out that they have purchased a second home very close to our son. The problem is, the home is located within a nudist colony and, therefore, we assume they are in fact nudists. Should this be a problem for us (we are both 70), or should we not be concerned? -- WONDERING IN THE SOUTH

DEAR WONDERING: I don't think there is anything to be worried about. If you are concerned that your grandson will "see" something shocking, please know that he can find whatever he is curious about on his computer or cellphone. However, if you are worried that either of you will be forced to view or participate in nude activities when you visit your son, all you have to say is, "I think we'll stay at a nearby hotel, thank you."

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a wedding and was videotaped while I was dancing. I was shown the tape later at a family gathering. I'm not a great dancer, and I looked silly, so I asked that the video be deleted. Instead, it was passed around and everyone laughed and made fun of me. It was embarrassing and hurtful.

My husband says I'm overreacting. Am I? I said nothing and don't intend to, but I can't get it out of my mind. -- DANCING FOOL IN OHIO

DEAR DANCING FOOL: Your feelings are your feelings. Nobody wants to be made fun of. But you have two choices: The first is to continue to stew about it. The second is to join in the laughter, admit you don't dance like a gazelle -- few people do -- and let it go. If you downplay it, it will go away.
