MVPD Police Chief selected as Alamosa Police Chief

George Dingfelder

By PRISCILLA WAGGONER

ALAMOSA — Monte Vista Police Chief George Dingfelder has accepted the position of Chief with the Alamosa Police Department (APD). He will begin working for the APD on May 6. He replaces former Chief Ken Anderson who resigned last December.

"I am honored to be selected as the next Chief of Police for the City of Alamosa and look forward to working with the dedicated officers of the Alamosa Police Department," Dingfelder said in a statement issued by the city on Monday. "I thank the City of Alamosa for giving me this opportunity to serve the citizens of Alamosa and the San Luis Valley in a profession I have dedicated my entire adult life to."

Dingfelder is not unfamiliar with the workings of the APD as, during former Police Chief Anderson's tenure, there were multiple times that the two law enforcement agencies co-operated on major felony cases.

The co-operation was frequent and effective, ultimately culminating in an inter-agency agreement approved by the Alamosa City Council making it an accepted part of procedures, when necessary.

According to the city's press release announcing the decision, Dingfelder has a long history of law enforcement service that includes six years in the US Army Military Police, 25 years in the Colorado State Patrol, and four years as Chief of Please see CHIEF on Page 6A

Police for the City of Monte Vista. While serving with the Colorado State Patrol, Dingfelder moved up through the ranks, ultimately serving as the Major overseeing field operations for District 5, comprised of 17 counties, including the San Luis Valley.

"Chief Dingfelder brings not only a strong technical background to the position, but he also brings superb leadership skills and a strong moral code," the statement reads. "[He] dedicates himself to continuous learning for himself and all his staff. Beyond his long history of law enforcement service, Chief Dingfelder also volunteers on state and local boards and committees."

In the statement, City Manager Heather Sanchez cited Dingfelder's "knowledge and professionalism," adding, "He continuously works for the best of the community and is gifted at bringing people and agencies together to tackle issues. That is exactly what we need for the complex, challenging issues we are working on."

She then acknowledged the contribution made by APD Capt.

Joey Spangler, who served as Interim Police Chief after Anderson's departure.

"He has jumped in and made several changes to strengthen the Police Department and has ensured that service to the community remained a priority. His competency has allowed us to take our time with the process and to allow time for Chief Dingfelder to help the City of Monte Vista with the transition," she stated.

Dingfelder's statement also acknowledged the years he has spent with MVPD.

"I also greatly appreciate the citizens and the City of Monte Vista for the support they gave to me and the Monte Vista Police Department," he said. "Over the past four years the Monte Vista Police Department has made significant impacts to the drug trade with a group of professional and well-trained officers who continue to make Monte Vista a safer community."

Sanchez also thanked the members of the committee for all the work involved in interviewing and hiring a new Chief of Police.

It's a circus out there

If you have had the good fortune to have been on this old Earth for an extended period, you've had the opportunity to experience some real oddities in human nature. And, no, I am not talking about visiting the freak show at the circus. I'm talking about the normal, everyday happenings around us that people have taken to tearing asunder for reasons known only to them.

We have seen some real doozies too, such as concerns for cow farts in their contribution to global warming, all the while we as humans gather in increasing masses in traffic-clogged cities with polluted air as the result. And like most things of that nature, it does not have to make sense to become a rallying point for some environmental whacko group to gather round either. Masses of their leaders will fly hundreds of private jets to destinations far away, polluting more than any thousand cows ever could, just to try and take away your gas stove, fireplace or car.

I can recall an interview I heard where one of the Kennedys told the host that he himself had a big SUV, three mansions and flew private but he "needed" all that pollution spewing lifestyle whereas the common folk do not. Now Ol' Dutch usually just goes along with such nonsense and lets it slide considering the source of such ideas but of late the whacko's have taken on some new things to ban and it's just driven me over the edge. Miss Trixie says I went over that proverbial and maybe actual edge long before this, but you know how excitable she can be at times. So there is that.

It was bad enough that they have taxed people to death on cigarettes and booze, plus, where legal, marijuana all under the guise of helping them to quit. Now, though, they have started on something near and dear to the American soul. Yes, you guessed it, the merry-go-round. For it seems that the lovely, colorful ride seen at carnivals and State fairs has somehow become a danger to us. A danger on a level far exceeding even world wars as we are being asked to give up the first and not the latter by these well-meaning folks.

So what is the big offense of a brightly-colored merry-go-round you may ask? I am glad you asked that question as you know Ol' Dutch was gonna tell you anyway. It seems that to incorporate carved wooden exotic animals in a ride has somehow become a sort of an insult to those mighty beasts. Apparently having little children ride around in a circle atop a plastic or wooden camel or zebra has brought pain and suffering to the animal kingdom.

Even Ol' Dutch can stretch his old noggin and see that animals have been abused in many places across the globe, but honestly, it's hard for me to see that riding around in a circle on these contraptions has ever hurt one of them.

Maybe it could become a teachable moment to people about the plight of such beasts, too. I guess like their real life namesakes, we should also demand that the wooden ones be fed and watered on a daily basis, too. (They do know they are fake, don't they?)

And for sure we want to try and hide from concerned eyes the fact that all of those same exotic beasts are being chased and eaten by lions and tigers on a daily basis. Which seems to Ol' Dutch to be a tad worse than being ridden by an old woman or diaper wearing toddler.

But hey, that's just me. Regardless of your treatment of fake animals that you have participated in during your lifetime, we all have to admit that we have reached a level of stupidity in the human experience. And just think. It's only going to get worse as the powers that be come after everything you enjoy including your food and drink until finally we will be reduced to eating the styrofoam packing peanuts that arrive with our purchases.

I am going to quickly go ride a wooden horse before they are relegated to the pile of human insanity for good. And eat a big old steak before those are outlawed as well.

Calving sediment below Clay Hills, San Juan River.

Glen Canyon Dam has created a world of mud

When the San Juan River flows out of the San Juan Mountains in southwestern Colorado, it contributes 15% of Lake Powell's water.

But there's a problem: The river carries a hefty 55% of the sediment entering the reservoir, and that mud is piling up, and that mud is piling up.

The sediment-heavy river flows south into New Mexico before jogging into Utah, then it joins the Colorado River close to the Arizona border. The confluence is submerged under Lake Powell.

After decades of drought, the reservoir created by Glen Canyon Dam has dwindled to just a third full. Now, as the San Juan River flows toward Lake Powell, it rambles over a huge pancake of mud that's 49 miles long, a mile wide in some places, and as much as 120 feet deep in the final reaches of the San Juan River.

Unique hydrology has contributed to this plug. A relatively wide canyon and multiple waterfalls slow down the river, allowing sediment to drop out. Though the San Juan is the muddiest tributary, all the Colorado's tributaries drop a good deal of mud 100 miles or more upstream of Glen Canyon Dam.

It's a Western phenomenon caused by damming swift rivers, said Jeff Geslin, a geologist at Fort Lewis College in Durango. The result is that reservoirs in the West have become "temporary sediment storage facilities."

If that mud could move through the Grand Canyon, like it did before the dam, biologists say that would help restore the canyon's ecosystem, which depends on sediment-laden flushes in spring to scour riverbanks. Then, as the river slows, beaches form and vegetation returns.

Gary Gianniny, professor of Geosciences at Fort Lewis College in Durango has been studying the San Juan River, along with river researchers who call their team, "The Returning Rapids Project."

The group's big worry is that without drastic action — draining Lake Powell to let the Colorado River run free — time may be running out for the languorous San Juan River.

Mike DeHoff, principal investigator of the Returning Rapids Project said the sediment layer on the San Juan has created new channels and new waterfalls. DeHoff added that no one knows whether the river's sediment plug would dissipate even if Glen Canyon Dam were breached.

Researchers boating the San Juan River where it approaches Lake Powell say they're forced to navigate an ever-moving pile of sediment that also involves portaging around rock waterfalls. When they finally arrive at Lake Powell, there's dangerous liquefied clay and sand to navigate.

"I've seen people sink to their chests in the mud, saved only by their flotation devices and nearby boaters," said DeHoff of Moab, Utah.

"We'll need a drone to study that area," added Gianniny.

Researchers with the Returning Rapids Project talk a lot about what to call these giant slabs of calving sediment. DeHoff suggests "mud bergs."

Semi-solid mud walls along the river have already been dubbed "the Dominy Formation," named after the avid federal dam-builder Floyd Dominy.

"Technically, Gianniny said, the giant mud plug is a "mass of uncompacted mud and sand that causes alluvial faning." And falling slabs of sediment, those "mud bergs," act as semi-permanent river features.

BLM River Ranger Chad Niehaus

uses a packraft to regularly visit what researchers are calling the Lowest San Juan. He floats over 30-plus miles of the muddy river, finishing with a four-mile backpack out to a four-wheel drive vehicle 48 miles from Page, Arizona as the crow flies.

Niehaus marvels at the deserted region. "Sediment is moving around, and you must be vigilant in a different way than you do on a 'normal' river."

Drought, climate change, "whatever you call it, the Lowest San Juan has re-emerged," Niehaus said about wildlife in the once-submerged canyon. "I've seen river otters, mountain lions, coyotes — even pelicans — but the most astounding aspect is how quickly nature is coming back." In places, cottonwood trees are 20 feet high, he said.

"When I was a teenager there were places on maps that were considered forever gone," he said, pointing to sections on the map entitled, "Glen Canyon National Recreation Area."

Now, he said, "some forever-gone places are revealed." He mentions Cathedral in the Desert, a wondrous site on the nearby Escalante River. Enough water has receded to make it visible, though some of this sacred place for Indigenous people is buried under 30-plus feet of sediment.

Meanwhile, the muddy end of the San Juan River is wild again: "I rarely see a footprint."

a booth, Pam Self of the Homelake Veterans Living Center was also at the craft show.

Alfonso Duran was a vendor at the trade show and said, "I am happy to be here. This morning was a sheet of ice coming in. I live in Bailey, Colorado. This is my fourth or fifth time here. I missed the year when there was COVID. This is the first time I have ever come with snow out here, usually it's beautiful when the cranes come in. It's been a little slow this morning, but I bet it will pick up by this afternoon. Same thing yesterday. I enjoyed the Crane Festival. Lots to see."

Monte Vista Chamber of Commerce Manager Heather Hillin was at the vendor event and said, "Things are going well. We have had a lot of people come out. We look forward to a lot more. The snow won't slow it down. I think it's going well despite the snow."

In addition to the Craft and Nature Fair, there were crane tours that took place mornings and evenings on Friday and Saturday, and Sunday morning. The crane tours ranged from the Baca Wetlands, to Homelake, and the Monte Vista National Wildlife Refuge. The tours were expert led and included viewing of multiple different wildlife, including ducks, geese, owls, and Sandhill Cranes. The weather was chilly but each morning the buses left for the tours, and the tours were all sold out. New this year was a Spanish led tour.

An art exhibit took place featuring artist Jocelyn Catterson. The movie "Migration" was also shown at Vali 3 Theatre for free. The animated movie followed a family of ducks on the vacation of a lifetime.

Marigold Watson and her daughter Daisy of Crestone were in town in front of the Sandhill wings mural on the side of the Elks Lodge in downtown Monte Vista, taking pictures.

Watson said, "My daughter was all excited about taking a picture in front of these wings. This is her first time experiencing cranes, she just turned 5, and she giggled when I took her out to the refuge, and she watched the cranes flying around. I would recommend locals and out of towners to come to this every year. I come every year. This is an experience that you will never forget. Whether you go on a crane tour or drive yourself there, I did both, you just can't forget the beauty of the cranes, how they roost, how they fly, and how they play together. It is one of the most breathtaking experiences I have ever had. I also now have memories with my daughter, and I know she won't forget it either. An amazing experience for the San Luis Valley and Monte Vista."

The fifth annual Swoop of the Cranes art project was also on display throughout downtown. Blank steel cranes were painted by local artists and hung on light poles right before the Crane Festival for people to enjoy.

Even though the festival is over, the cranes will be here for a couple of weeks. Local and out of town residents are encouraged to drive to the refuge and experience the cranes during their spring migration.

tary. Each decoration also had a kind saying on it.

Facilitators for the Kindness Club, Francisca Archuleta and Lorelyn Buss, were excited about the donation. Archuleta said, "We passed out these hearts back in February and told the kids to decorate them however they wanted to. Each heart has words of kindness, beautiful sayings, the kids worked hard on these. The decorations were attached to a non-perishable food item. Everyone who receives a food item will also get one of these decorations, with these beautiful sayings. There were many students at Bill Metz who donated. We are happy to be able to help the Monte Vista Food Bank and spread some love and kindness."

Jennifer Becker said the kids did an incredible job.

"This is just so wonderful and awesome," she said. "Right now, the food bank is in a pretty dire situation, that we are trying to get ourselves out of. The extra food is well welcomed. These kids donated and collected enough donations from other students at Bill Metz to feed at least 5 families. This big donation is very much appreciated. It was really touching. I am going to save all the little hearts that were all over the food and hang them up in the lobby for everyone to enjoy."

Becker said that it meant a lot to her for the kids to come and donate the way they did, and the food would help the community immensely. Becker smiled when she received the food and gave many of the kids hugs and high fives thanking them for collecting the food.

Mayor Dale Becker was also pleased with the donation and said that he enjoyed seeing the kids help the community.

Business owner starts Coffee and Business networking event

By MARIE MCCOLM

MONTE VISTA — On March 5, Randy Ellis, of Randy Ellis Photography hosted Coffee and Business at Bobolicious Gourmet Coffee. Approximately 11 people attended the event at 139 Adams St. will be ongoing every Tuesday morning for local businesses to network.

“Sandra Perez of SBCD (Small Business Development Center), and I were having a conversation,” Ellis said. “She mentioned to me about wanting to get to the Rio Grande County area. I live in Monte, in Rio Grande County. I have been wanting to start networking with more businesses. My thought was having Sandra as a resource, a person I could refer others to, and making a way to get to know others, and other businesses. Not only what products we have to sell, but as friends and a support group. I started this to help other businesses. The Alamosa Chamber has Coffee Connections, I think this is a good idea for Monte Vista, too.”

Ellis said for businesses to thrive, he feels that networking is necessary. Ellis said that businesses can gain insight by networking and can trade ideas and thoughts.

“We have a variety of businesses here today. Insurance, retail, this is a good start,” he said.

Ellis, who has lived in Monte Vista for a year, said that his background was in heating and air, when he lived in Denver. Ellis started his photography business when he noticed that other businesses had a need for stock photos, and images for their companies.

“I thought about it and thought I can do that,” he said. “Every business has a uniqueness about them. Through our uniqueness we attract the clients we want and the employees we need. When I moved to the Valley, I moved to the Valley to offer my services to see what I could do. I love the community here. I had been coming this way for a while. In Denver, I felt like it was always how much we can get versus, what do others really need. I want to work with businesses that want to look good, I want to help them.”

Ellis said when he lived in Denver, he was into business networking. He had a good friend there, who did a lot of business networking and that was also what gave him the idea.

“I am blessed this morning. I didn’t know how many people would show up this morning. I thought even if it’s just a small group, it can grow,” he said.

Ellis said that it doesn’t have to necessarily be businesses just from Monte, that people from all over the Valley are welcome.

“It’s a coffee connection group for small businesses to meet other businesses and attend and speak with each other about different ideas and out and networking together. I think there is a need for this, and we can help each other.”

SLV Law Enforcement Victim Response Units

Providing help and support when and where it’s most needed

By PRISCILLA WAGGONER

SAGUACHE — In what appears to be another example of law enforcement agencies across the San Luis Valley working together to meet needs that impact all six counties, the SLV Law Enforcement Victim Response Units program is being reinstated after a twenty-year hiatus, providing a comprehensive and unified approach to meeting victims’ needs.

This is not the first time that law enforcement agencies have created a coordinated effort in supporting victims. According to Ellen Cox, Saguache County Sheriff’s Office Victim Response Coordinator and leader of the SLV Law Enforcement Victim Response Units, an umbrella organization called SLV Victim Services was initially created more than 20 years ago by Alamosa County to “incorporate all the counties in the SLV under one Victims of Crime Act (VOCA) grant allowing county coordinators and assistants to focus on the victim services they provided in their area.”

Alamosa County was responsible for writing and administering the grant and it “worked very well for quite a few years and grant cycles.”

But as things progressed and county victim service programs grew and changed, counties chose to stop functioning under the umbrella as they were awarded and administered their own county VOCA grants.

“As the goals and objectives change in the way victim services focus on diversity, equity and a victim centered approach to our response to survivors of crime in the San Luis Valley,” Cox says, “we realized we needed to come back together as a unified group.”

Cox went on to say, “The SLV Law Enforcement Victim Response team realized the need to support each other as well, learning from years of combined experience, and pushing forward in vastly diverse, complex rural communities. So much culture, history and fortitude must be appreciated and respected while providing services to these survivors.”

As a result, the newly formed SLV Law Enforcement Victim Response Unit was created as a “First Responder” to victims of crime in the San Luis Valley. Victim advocates in all six counties are coordinating together to provide caring responses, blended resources and much needed support in helping people navigate through traumatic and personal events.

In the course of creating this new organization, it was also realized that there was a need for public education as there is not a general understanding of the differences between what services and support (and the timing of both) can be provided by Law Enforcement Victim Response unit versus a community based program, such as Tu Casa and other service providers.

When asked to explain the difference, Cox says, “Organizations like Tu Casa and the Alliance in Chaffee County are usually serving victims of domestic Violence, sexual assault, elder abuse and human trafficking. They usually have in-house resources such as counseling, some legal assistance and other resources to help with housing, shelter and longer-term aid. In contrast, law enforcement advocates are on-scene in an immediate response to crime victims in the middle of one of the most traumatic events of their life.”

As Cox describes it, law enforcement advocates provide physical and emotional support in whatever capacity victims need. They then continue to provide resources, whether it’s accompanying the victim to and through a medical procedure, transportation to shelter for them and their children or support with employers or landlords.

Their help is also invaluable in supporting the victim through what can feel like an overwhelming and very complicated legal process by explaining mandatory restraining orders, bonds and court proceedings. They also keep victims informed of crucial notifications about court dates and release information and provide any help needed with victim impact statements and victim compensation applications.

“We follow up, just to be there for the victims. But, just to be clear, we cannot counsel or provide legal advice, but we are there, and available for support and help.”

Despite working in an occupation where she encounters people who are going through, perhaps, the most devastating experience of their lives – an occupation that would probably weigh heavily on a number of people – Cox speaks of the potential inherent in SLV Law Enforcement Victim

Response Unit program with genuine excitement and optimism about the difference the Response Unit and the people who staff it will make in the lives of others.

“My hope and driving desire is that we can get resources to people before a crime happens, or someone is hurt or a tragedy changes a life forever,” she says.

Bearing Good Fruit When Hard Times Come

The Bible talks about bearing good fruit and how that is God’s purpose for our lives. For example, in John 15:5, Jesus says, “I am the Vine; you are the branches. The one who remains in Me and I in him bears much fruit, for [otherwise] apart from Me [that is, cut off from vital union with Me] you can do nothing” (AMP).

And Psalm 1:3 (AMP) says that the person who follows God’s ways is “like a tree firmly planted [and fed] by streams of water, which yields its fruit in its season; its leaf does not wither; and in whatever he does, he prospers [and comes to maturity].”

When we understand what it means to bear good fruit, then we can fulfill our destiny as ambassadors of Christ in this world (2 Corinthians 5:20). There are two ways this happens: by working with the Holy Spirit to develop the fruit of the Spirit in our lives (Galatians 5:22-23), and by displaying that fruit as we help others.

Many people want the “fruit” of more money, more opportunities in their career, more material possessions, or to be more well known. It’s certainly not wrong to have these things. But these things alone won’t fulfill us or make us permanently happy and peaceful.

We need to go deeper than that! The good fruit God wants us to have in our lives is peace, joy and mental and emotional stability when the storms of life come. And the Bible teaches that we can grow to the point where we are so deeply planted in the love of Christ that when the storms of life come, we still bear good fruit (Psalm 1:1-3 and Ephesians 3:16-19)!

The real fruit of Christianity is seen in your life when you can bear good fruit when hard times come—and we all have difficulties in life. It may be an unexpected illness, the stress of financial debt, or being betrayed by someone you thought you could trust.

God wants us to be peaceful under pressure and have a good attitude in the midst of pain because when others see us behaving differently, they’ll want to know why we can be that way and want to have what we have, too!

Colossians 3:12-15 (AMP) gives us a detailed list of genuine, acceptable Christian behavior, and it should be our goal to live this way every day. Verse 12 says that “as God’s chosen people, who are holy [set apart, sanctified for His purpose] and well-beloved [by God Himself],” we should “put on a heart of compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness, and patience [which has the power to endure whatever injustice or unpleasantness comes, with good temper.”

Now, I want to say here that we can’t just live this way in our own strength, without God. I remember when I would decide in the morning: “I’m going to be nice to everyone today!” and I succeeded while I was home alone. But when the people came home, that’s when I had trouble with my attitude.

I had to pray for God to help me put on the right attitude and mindset so I could treat others with compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness and patience, “which has the power to endure whatever injustice or unpleasantness comes, with good temper.” I had to put my faith in God to give me His grace—His strength to do what I could never do in my own effort—believing that He would do it because of who I am in Christ (2 Corinthians 5:17, 21).

These verses in Colossians should be our number one goal as believers in Christ. As new creations in Christ, saved by faith, we have a desire to do good things. And as we grow in our relationship with Him, we learn new ways to act and respond to others.

Moving Up Higher

with
Joyce Meyer

I know from personal experience that this is not always easy. It won’t always feel good to obey God and you may have to sacrifice something to do it. But when we choose to trust God and do what He tells us to do no matter how we feel about it, what we think about it, or what others think we should do, then we’ll have the amazing life Jesus died for us to have!

We don’t have to settle for anything less than God’s best for us. Make a decision today to trust God to change you and help you do what’s right in every situation. Remember John 15:16 (AMP), which says He has chosen you and “appointed and placed and purposefully planted you, so that you would go and bear fruit and keep on bearing, and that your fruit will remain and be lasting” at all times of your life!

‘Electrify and Save’ coming to SLVREC members

CONTRIBUTED

MONTE VISTA — In the market for new insulation, windows and doors, water heaters, HVAC systems and other qualifying energy-efficient technology? Take advantage of San Luis Valley Rural Electric Cooperative’s (SLVREC) Electrify and Save on-bill repayment program for a simple and transparent financing option.

The new program, “Electrify and Save,” launched for its electric members on March 4. Through partnerships with REC’s wholesale power supplier Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association and the Colorado Clean Energy Fund (CCEF), REC is offering the on-bill repayment program to REC members or business owners to install certain energy upgrades to their properties at no upfront cost.

The term “repayment” denotes that a third party, in this case CCEF, provides the upfront funding for the installation. In turn, REC will bill members monthly to recover CCEF’s costs over an agreed-upon timeframe. Since there are no loans, these home upgrades will not affect credit scores or add to the homeowners’ debt.

“San Luis Valley Rural Electric Cooperative members will be at the forefront of what we believe will be a cutting edge, significant Tri-State program offering unique to our cooperative industry,” said Pete Rusin, Tri-State electrification manager. “On-bill repayment gives consumer cooperative members an equitable and common sense means by which they can reduce overall utility spend and improve their quality of life.”

As an example, Rusin noted that SLVREC members still using propane could see their overall bills decrease, by addition dual fuel air source heat pump to an existing propane furnace, or even by financing a full furnace replacement through the on-bill repayment program.

Upgrades include new insulation, windows and doors, water heaters, electric HVAC systems, electric vehicle chargers and more. In many cases, the energy savings achieved through the newly installed measures are greater than the monthly repayment obligation, thereby saving members money on their utility bill every month.

Educator Highlight Award for February goes to Aaron Williams

English teacher at GOAL High School meets students where they are

By ADAMS STATE UNIVERSITY

ALAMOSA — Aaron Williams wants you to believe. Believe in yourself, believe in your abilities, and believe in what you’re capable of accomplishing.

As an English teacher at GOAL High School and a track coach at Alamosa High, Williams preaches to students the importance of believing. His work and accomplishments led Adams State School of Education to present Williams with its Educator Highlight Award during a ceremony this week.

“He understands our population,” said GOAL High Principal Jason Hochevar. “When a student needs something, needs help, he’s always willing to jump in and listen to the kids’ stories and find a solution around their barriers and their issues to give them a second, third, fourth chance which is what it takes sometimes.”

GOAL High, with a new regional office off Highway 160 in Alamosa, is Colorado’s growing online school with more than 5,000 students across the state taking courses with GOAL. Williams is a statewide English teacher, meaning he’s working online with students who are in Fort Morgan, Colorado Springs, Cortez and elsewhere across Colorado.

Williams said he’ll interact with 20 or so students on a daily basis and around 200 for a school semester through GOAL’s online model. “We’re trying to reach them wherever they are in life.

Every kid that comes to us is different so we’re allowed to be flexible and get them what they need,” he said.

When he’s done at GOAL for the day, he’ll head to Alamosa High where he works as an assistant track coach. Last track season he coached Aani Hardesty to state track titles in the 100- and 300-meter hurdle races. Again, by getting her to believe in the training and what she was capable of accomplishing.

“When I work with kids online, I try to keep that same energy I have if they’re right here in front of me,” he said.

“It’s a unique experience, I’d say,” he said of working both for GOAL online and coaching at Alamosa High. “Track is what brought me to school here and what brought me to Alamosa. So it’s a way for me to give back to the community.”

Williams hails originally from Richmond, CA., and enrolled to run track at Adams State. Like so many others, he met a girl from Alamosa, married her and settled down and settled in for life’s haul. He and his wife, Marina, now have two children, Kinwood and Onyx, and he has a growing career in teaching at GOAL and coaching track at Alamosa High.

All because he believed.

This monthly award recognizes Adams State University School of Education alumni, prominent local teachers, and other educators working within or hailing from the San Luis Valley. In so doing, Adams State University hopes to build familiarity with the community as a serious destination for future educators. ## Rio Grande Hospital gives update on Wellness Center, thanks donors

By LYNSIE FERRELL

DEL NORTE — Rio Grande Hospital announced recently that the new Wellness Center currently being built near the hospital will be finished by early summer and thanked everyone who has donated to the project.

According to Development and Communications Officer Eva Timberlake, the Wellness Center is on track to open by June and the hospital plans to celebrate the grand opening in style.

“We are on track for the finish of the Wellness Center and our hope is to have a community grand opening by early summer. Construction on the project is nearing completion and we can’t wait to share it with the community,” she said.

The Wellness Center project began before 2020 to not only offer patients at the hospital and their families a place to stay but also to offer patients a way to learn about how to be healthier living through several different programs.

At the beginning of the planning phase of the project, Rio Grande Hospital CEO Arlene Harms looked at what are termed Blue Zones throughout the US and through her research and with the help of several different organizations and people they began to form a plan for what the Wellness Center would look like.

Blue Zones are in about five or six different countries throughout the world and are known for their healthy living lifestyles and longevity of the residents.

One group here in the US is known for the healthy living habits formed by its members which is group of Seventh-day Adventists. The group is in the Loma Linda area in California. The group has made headlines in certain circles for their residents who live almost a decade longer than the average person and they attribute this fact to their lifestyle.

The Wellness Center will have a community center where members of the community can come host meetings, meet for coffee or utilize resources offered by the center. It will be an intersection for employees who can take their breaks there, there will

Haskin Elementary kindergarteners celebrate 100 days of school

By MARIE MCCOLM

CENTER — Haskin Elementary kindergarten classrooms recently celebrated 100 days in school. Kindergarten teacher Jatón Najera’s class was just one of many that celebrated the milestone.

Najera said the children enjoyed the celebration.

“It was a fun day for the kids. The kids were so cute. I have been a teacher for 11 years now and every year we have the 100-day celebration,” Najera said. “The kids were told they could dress up like they were 100 years old, and there were kids that came dressed up like they were 100 years old. The boys were wearing suspenders with big pants, and some of the boys even wore stick-on moustaches. The girls had curly hair and lots of fancy jewelry, it was a fun time for all.”

Najera said that the classroom often celebrates different things based on happenings at the school and holidays. She said that the kids were informed of the celebration, and they all acted like they were 100 years old.

“A lot of the kids also brought in canes. They were walking around

Changes to the Harvest Information Program (HIP) small game hunters must know

By COLORADO PARKS AND WILDLIFE

COLORADO — Colorado Parks and Wildlife (CPW) is changing how hunters register with the Harvest Information Program (HIP) for the upcoming small game hunting season. Beginning March 2024, hunters will be able to complete their HIP survey when they purchase a license at cpwshop.com, or a CPW office.

This change will bring the HIP registration process into CPW's Integrated Parks and Wildlife System, launched in 2017, that created a one-stop shop for all CPW products, including hunting and fishing licenses, campsite reservations, OHV and snowmobile permits, and more.

CPW apologizes for any inconvenience this change will cause for some hunters; however, the change should streamline HIP registrations for most. Hunters can now register for HIP when they buy their licenses in the same system. Also, hunters are no longer required to write down a HIP number on their license to prove registration, as it will be documented on their customer record.

If you buy a small game license at an external license agent, you must complete the HIP survey through your online account at cpwshop.com before hunting small game. Later this year, an automated phone service will be available for hunters to register with HIP.

Colorado requires all small game hunters to sign up with HIP to help CPW better estimate harvest for species that are difficult to assess through a general small game survey. HIP is a joint U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) and CPW program designed to improve small game and migratory bird harvest estimates.

For hunters that are or plan to hunt light geese in March of 2024, you can still get your 2023 HIP at 1-866-265-6447; however, the website at www.colohip.com will be disabled on March 1.

Remember, if you plan to hunt light geese on or after April 1, you will need a 2024 license and 2024 HIP registration before you hunt on or after April 1, 2024.

Please note: if you are buying a small game license only as a qualifying license for the big game application period and will not hunt small game in Colorado in 2024-2025, do not register with HIP.

Courtesy photo

Small game hunters are urged to learn about the new changes to small game regulations for the coming season. More information about the changes can be found at www.cpw.state.co.us.

with canes and giggling. The kids had a fun time for the celebration," she said.

Najera said that during the celebration the students sang songs together, they counted to 100, and they also read 100 words, and counted out 100 words as they read them.

"The kids knew that it would be their 100th day at school," Najera said.

Najera said that the kids also colored little paper hats with the number 100 on them. The kids also colored paper gumball machines that said they had a ball on the 100th day of school. Najera said that the pictures also had 100 dots on them in honor of the 100 days at school.

Najera said there is a man named Jack Hartman who creates YouTube videos and content for kids.

"He has a video called the one hundredth day of school, and in the video, he counts to 100. The video has him and another lady also dressed up like they are 100 years old counting too. The kids were able to watch the video and count to 100 with him and the lady on the video.

We also listened to some different books about one hundred days at school," she said.

HONOR

CCFD Chaplain Robert Dale said, "It is something inside of us. I always thought we do what we do if we can save one person or one house..."

Dale and his fellow firefighters have been able to help many people.

The firefighters were presented with a plaque which showed the community's appreciation for what they do.

The plaque read, "Greater love hath no man than this. That a man lay down his life for his friend," which is from the Bible, John 15:13.

The firefighters were treated to a delicious meal. There are several fathers and sons working side by side for the department, like Raphael Maestas and his son Russell and Robert Espinoza and his son Juan. Isaiah Montano is the grandson of one of the church members.

This past November the Helping Hands Foundation helped the Costilla County Fire Department obtain badges and new uniforms.

Storytime at the Conejos Library District

LA JARA — Every Thursday morning from 11:40 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. the Conejos Library Maria De Herrera Branch in La Jara hosts a weekly Storytime and Crafttime. The stories selected are usually seasonal in nature with a craft activity related to the story. In February, young patrons listened to Valentine stories and got to make Valentines for Veterans. Sometimes though, the story-subject is what the librarian wants to learn more about. Take for example last week, the librarian wanted to know more about giraffes and so several books fictional and nonfiction were read, and the librarian learned about giraffes and the smallest patrons learned about giraffes. This week, young patrons will hear a story called "The Doorbell Rang" by Pat Hutchins, which is a story about sharing and problem solving, as well as a memorable introduction to the concept of division.

CRT boasts educational and CMAC programs for coming season

By LYNDIE FERRELL

CREEDE — Creede Repertory Theatre (CRT) has a year of discovery planned for the 2024 season and alongside the many unique and colorful productions, the theatre also has several educational programs for adults and youth as well as a schedule of musical programs through the Creede Musical Arts Collective (CMAC).

One of the longest standing educational programs offered through CRT is the Young Audience Outreach Tour. This program has offered musical and theatrical art education to over 40,000 young people in the 40 years the program has been in place. This educational outreach has brought the joy and fun of theatrical education to several rural schools throughout the southwestern US and continues to grow each year.

This season, the Young Audience Outreach Tour will be bringing "Coyote and the Counting Game" to students beginning Aug. 30. Each production comes with a book that is passed out to students and this year the book and lyrics are by Diana Grisanti with music by Emiliano Messiez.

According to the play's description, "Gaby's having a rough year. She's failing third grade math, her genius brother is about to go off to college, and her parents won't buy her the drum set of her dreams. But when a crafty Coyote comes into her life, she discovers that she might be able to trick her way out of her troubles. A modern-day trickster tale, full of fractions, word problems, and good old-fashioned sibling rivalry."

Another annual educational program brought to the community has been captivating students ages 10 to 18 since 2003 and this year will be no exception. This year's production will be "Maximum Conflict and External Strife." This is a comedy written by Steve Moulds and directed by Tyler Horn.

"There's a new role-playing game that's all the rage — though not everyone's a fan. Some kids find the game's wall-to-wall fighting exhausting. And parents are worried that it's making their kids angrier. But when one family casts a magic spell that sucks them inside the game, they have to navigate the cartoonishly violent world of Maximum Conflict to find their way back home."

Not only is the theatre continuing with their exceptional educational programs, but they will be again offering musical programs through the Creede Musical Arts Collective and the Summer Concert Series.

"On the Stage of Sondheim: A Musical Adventure" is bound to bring a dash of class to Creede this summer. "Sondheim reaches new heights in Creede..."

Creede Rep teams up with the spectacular artists at Creede Musical Arts Collective (CMAC) to bring you a one-of-a-kind concert series. Complementing our season of discovery, each concert will be a fresh experience with a rotating catalog of prolific songs and performers from both organizations who will use the magic of Stephen Sondheim to delight your ears and your heart this summer."

The Creede Musical Arts Collective

has brought music to the streets of Creede since 2021 and is known for popping up in wonderful places throughout town and during events to share their musical talents with visitors and residents alike.
