Short-term closure to replace damaged culvert

SAGUACHE — The Rio Grande National Forest's Saguache Ranger District announced Monday, Aug. 5, that a short-term closure was taking place on National Forest System Road (NFSR) No. 675 at John's Creek (a map is online). "We recognize that this closure will be a slight inconvenience for some people," said Saguache District Ranger Tristram Post. "We appreciate the public's patience as our road crew work to replace the damaged culvert that was temporarily repaired last year." The closure will be in effect for approximately two weeks beginning on Aug. 5. For questions about the closure, contact the Saguache Ranger District at 719-655-2547.

Loosbrock speaking about mining history

ALAMOSA — The San Luis Valley Museum will be hosting a lecture program-slide show presentation about the mining industry in the Valley and Southern Colorado at 7 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 16. The event will be given by Adams State University Professor of History Richard Loosbrock, who is a noted authority on the topic. The program is free. The museum is at 401 Hunt Ave., Alamosa.

Fletcher and Friends performing Aug. 18

CREEDE — Jeff Fletcher and Friends will be performing from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 18, at Basham Park, Creede, for Music in the Park. Fletcher, an amazing singer and guitar player, has had a residency at the Antlers Riverside Restaurant deck for several years. His music is the perfect blend of classic country, classic rock and the blues. He will be performing with some of his Creede musical friends including country singer Kerri Bohan and Debbie Whitmore on flute. This concert is presented by the Creede Arts Council. If the weather is rainy, the concert will move into Sunnyside Bar across the street from Basham Park.

"Everyone had an amazing National Night Out with the South Fork Police Department as well as the Rio Grande Sheriff's Department on the evening of August 6 in South Fork. The community came together in droves to support this event. Businesses donated, volunteers showed up, and adults and kids of all ages had an amazing time. Paper rockets were launched 100 feet in the air, kids got their faces painted, and all ages participated in the games. Of course, there were prizes and fun take home gifts for all," said new South Fork Friends Foundation Committee Director Lauren Woolf.

San Luis Valley Pride through Aug. 25

CONTRIBUTED

ALAMOSA — San Luis Valley Pride, a Non-profit organization dedicated to the ensuring the visibility and inclusion of individuals who identify as LGBTQ+ in the San Luis Valley is hosting the annual Pridefest celebration through Aug. 25 at various locations.

Pridefest brings awareness to queer individuals in the San Luis Valley. According to the group, "We strive that every individual who is LGBTQ+ feels safe to be themselves in the Valley while providing some education around queer issues."

Pride originally began as a protest in the late 60's due to police oppression that was occurring to the queer/LGBTQ+ community in New York. Thus began the famous Stonewall Riots which kick-started some of the most instrumental civil rights work. Pride then was about securing the rights to love people most genuinely, reduce discrimination, and build job protections for individuals who were being fired due to their sexuality. It still is about that, but much progress has been made and there is more to come. Pride now is a celebration of how far we have come as a marginalized group.

Pride is an important event for everyone, not just LGBTQ+ individuals, but allies alike. It's the time of the year to show up and be there in support of our families and friends.

SLV Pridefest includes wonderful events. There will be a Brave Spaces Roller Skating event on Aug. 10 at the Alamosa Recreation Center from 4 to 8 p.m.

There is a Pride Gaming Night at Respawn Gameroom and VR Lounge in Del Norte from 5 to 8 p.m. on Aug. 14.

On Aug. 23, there will be pre-kickoff reading in Cole Park from 4 to 6 p.m. A DJ with some Drag Queen/King performers dropping in will be at the Rio Grande Farm Park from 6 to 10 p.m. The first 100 guests to the Kick-Off Party, will get free tacos from Taco Martinez.

On Aug. 24 at 10 a.m., folks will meet in the Alamosa Library parking lot to begin a human-led parade through town, whoever is Embracing their Rainbow the most enthusiastically dressed in their Pride will be rewarded on stage. After the Hospital, Dr. Haug was a hero among rural doctors throughout Colorado and was the person who envisioned a rural hospital offering state of the art medical care for the San Luis Valley.

Dr. Norman Haug "was a hero" for the rural doctor, said Dr. John Westfall, a former rural doctor who now trains others in the same field. Haug was 69 when he died May 6. He had been a doctor in Del Norte for years, served as coroner and jail physician and spearheaded the drive to open a $10 million hospital after the Del Norte hospital closed. He was hospital administrator for that institution, and the Rio Grande Hospital.

Haug worked to get much of the $10 million for the hospital through a Housing and Urban Development grant. He also was medical director for the Colorado State Veterans' Center in Homelake, near Monte Vista. In 1998, he and his wife, Rebecca Haug, a nurse, went to Honduras to help people injured in Hurricane Mitch. He was named Rural Health Practitioner of the year in 2003 by the National Rural Health Association.

Haug was born in Lakewood on Dec. 14, 1937, and graduated from Regis High School and Regis University in Denver. He earned his medical degree at the University of Colorado at Boulder and a master's degree in public health at the University of Oklahoma.

He was a Peace Corps doctor in Malaysia in the early 1960's and later helped set up the Vietnamese health system. In 1980, he married Rebecca Sue Sutterfield and moved to Del Norte the next year.

Haug liked the idea of living in a small town and of having a few farm animals. He grew up on a small farm outside Lakewood. In addition to his wife and son, Haug is survived by two other sons: Frank Haug of Boulder and Anthony Haug of Denver; and sisters Jeanne Haug and Dorothy Healy, both of Lakewood."

During the fundraiser, Rio Grande

Hospital CEO Arlene Harms spoke about the need to get back to preventative care and working to make a healthy community through wellness. Rio Grande Hospital's vision for the Wellness Center began prior to 2020 as they began making plans and received funding from countless donors but it was the COVID pandemic that stopped the project in its track until June of 2023 when the hospital broke ground.

Mountain View Restaurant of Monte Vista prepared a delicious, healthy meal for the attendees while several staff members volunteered to serve guests as a way to say thanks throughout the evening.

"I just want to say how proud I am of our staff, our physicians and everyone who came to help make this evening one to remember. It was really nice to have this event in our own facility and we are grateful to our community for all of the support," said Development and Communications Officer Eva Timberlake.

Vivian Gay Deitrich-MacLean

Vivian Gay Deitrich-MacLean died suddenly on July 10, 2024, while on vacation in Southern Colorado at the age of 69.

She was born to Richard and Margaret (Burkholder) Deitrich in Del Norte, Colo. She lived her childhood in Baltimore, Md., and Denver, Colo. She graduated from Thomas Jefferson High School and received a bachelor's degree in social work from Colorado State University in 1978. She worked as a program specialist at the C. Henry Kempe National Center for the Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver Colorado for four years before moving to Nashville, Tenn., to study at Vanderbilt University where she received master's and PhD degrees in clinical psychology. She completed an internship in clinical psychology at the Children's Hospital and Judge Baker Children's Center of Harvard University Medical School in Boston, Massachusetts.

She went on to develop independent practices in Nashville, Tenn., Laramie, Wyo. and Madison, Wis., over the next three decades as she and her family moved around the country. As a clinical psychologist, she worked initially with children and youth but gradually transitioned to a practice focused on adults, families and couples. She was a gifted clinician who had the privilege of helping hundreds of clients achieve a more fulfilling life. Although skilled in psychological assessment and therapy, it was her boundless empathy that helped her clients overcome their issues.

She enjoyed the outdoors, particularly bicycling, hiking, camping and fishing. At home, she loved flower and vegetable gardening, feeding birds, reading books, and solving puzzles. She also enjoyed traveling and this became a major focus for her and her husband in retirement. But most of all, she loved her dogs.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Margaret and Dick, and her brother-in-law, Greg Hight.

She is survived by her husband of 39 years, William (Bill) MacLean; children Will MacLean and Michael (Courtney) MacLean; granddaughter Sophronia, grandson Cassian, sisters Leslie (Tom) Shivers and Lori Hight, an uncle Craton (Mardell) Burkholder, nieces, nephews, cousins, and many loving friends.

A celebration of life will be held in the near future. In lieu of flowers, the family requests that donations be made to Cathedral Home in Laramie, Wyo., or the Laramie Animal Welfare Society (LAWS).

OPINION & EDITORIAL

Is your cup half full Montana's politicians have lost their ties to land

You don't have to have lived as long as Ol' Dutch to have heard the phrase "Is your cup half empty or half full?" It's a storied line used by psycho-babble people of every persuasion including pastors, shrinks, doctors, motivational speakers, teachers, and marriage counselors. The use of this phrase, of course, is that these well-meaning "helpers of humanity" want to get a person to look at their life in a positive manner instead of a negative one.

Now, I do know that it's way better for us to think about things in a positive manner and probably makes for a happier life but sometimes I wonder about such thinking. For instance, let's say you are headed on a trip in your car, and you glance down at the gas gauge to make sure you have sufficient fuel for the journey.

In this case, at least, I believe it is better to see the tanks as half empty so that some kind of urgency is placed on finding fuel for the trip. There are people, however, who drive around on fumes as they seem to see that they have "some gas" remaining in the tank hence no rush to replenish the same. They are what we call "walkers" as they soon find themselves without and then cannot believe it happened to them, of course.

Another place where seeing the lack in your situation may be helpful is with a person's bank account. It's a sad fact of reality that having a half full account really doesn't do much good when faced with a purchase. And yes, you can keep positive and say "well, at least I have some money" but that does not seem to help when you want to purchase anything of value. You are still half empty.

I have to say, Miss Trixie is a "half full" type of person and I do appreciate that as she always looks on the bright side of things which tends to pull Ol' Dutch along and out of the "half empty" mentality that he has. It's a good balance, I guess, for any relationship if one person can maintain positive vibes.

There is one area, though, that Ol' Dutch wishes she would come around to my way of thinking. That is with cups of beverages she leaves on the counter. She is her mother's daughter for sure as she is frugal to a fault but saving days old quarter cups of Chai Tea drives me

Trout Republic
by Kevin Kirkpatrick

toward insanity. And yes, I know some of you say well why can't I just dump them out and I do but mostly I hit them as they balance on the edge of the countertop and dump them on the floor. This elicits all kinds of loud exclamations and words not allowed in mixed company let alone here. And when Ol' Dutch lets loose, this causes Miss Trixie to launch off the bed where she is reclined like Cleopatra of old and come running to see what I did now.

I have tried to reassure her that we can afford the cheap Chai tea she buys and to simply dump it out when she thinks she is done but to no avail. So, it appears that while Ol' Dutch sees her cup as half empty, she will continue to see it as half full and keep it around until mold appears in the life-giving nectar of the elite.

And Ol' Dutch will continue to dump it down the drain at every opportunity which causes words of non-appreciation to spew forth from Miss Trixie's mouth. But Ol' Dutch is pretty hard of hearing now so what used to go in one ear and out the other simply does not even make it in the one hearing appendage.

Is your glass half full? Well then dump it out and save your marriage while you can.

Tim Sheehy, the Republican seeking to unseat Montana Democratic Senator Jon Tester, is a business executive born and raised out of state. That same description applies to Troy Downing, a Republican running for one of Montana's two Congressional seats. Same for Montana's Republican Governor Greg Gianforte and his challenger, Democrat Ryan Busse.

I have nothing against out-of-staters moving to Montana or working at a business. I fit both categories myself years ago. But I think this change in politicians' backgrounds reflects a change in how Montanans view their identity.

Previous Montana politicians who weren't government lawyers often came from farming and ranching or related businesses. Today's business backgrounds are less intimate with Montana's land. Gianforte started a software company. Sheehy founded imaging technology and aerial firefighting businesses. Downing, a real estate developer, has owned everything from self-storage units to vineyards.

Seeking business-friendly policies, Republicans have long favored candidates with business backgrounds. But today's desire for political outsiders includes Democrats like Busse, a former firearms executive without experience in elected office. And recent high-profile Democratic candidates have included educators, managers, and a musician—in other words, people who have not worked daily with nature and its resources.

Montanans used to mistrust government officials who lacked intimacy with the land. But today, both parties elevate politicians who lack that intimacy, probably because Montanans care more about ideological issues such as immigration, abortion, inflation or gender identity.

Political power used to flow from grazing stock and vast acreages. Now it flows from Wall Street stock and scenic mansions. For example, Sheehy and Downing own homes in the chichi resort of Big Sky; Gianforte comes from the expensive Bozeman area; Busse comes from the scenic and pricey Flathead region.

Sure, those places are Montana. But Montana's politicians once came from less-glamorous places, including bare-knuckle Butte, the faded mining metropolis; remote Libby, with its logging and mining economy; and dusty Billings, an oil and cow town. In the 2000 and 2004 gubernatorial elections, Democrat Brian Schweitzer owned a Flathead mint farm but bragged that he was raised on an eastern Montana cattle ranch.

In other words, politicians once claimed Montanan identity through shared experience. That often included in-state birth and always included land-based pastimes like hunting. Today it's less "Are you a hunter?" than "Are you endorsed by the National Rifle Association?"

The shift makes it hard to interpret politicians' actions. For example, in 2021, Governor Gianforte killed a mountain lion and trapped and killed a wolf. Because he's not a rancher-politician, we can't understand, much less endorse, such acts in the context of a lifelong working relationship with land and livestock.

Similarly, Gianforte, Busse, and Downing have all been cited for various gradations of hunting violations. Should we judge them differently than we would a native-born hunter? And Sheehy's company is deeply in debt. For a ranch, that wouldn't be surprising. But for an aerospace company?

To the rest of the country, choosing leaders based on ideologies may sound familiar. But Montana, aka "Big Sky Country," used to pride itself on being different. More place-based, more rural, more centered on the individual.

Outsiders may have dismissed such philosophies as insular and backward—but that dismissal was what made them outsiders.

Writers on the Range
by JOHN CLAYTON

How should we react to this change? We might celebrate that Montana is leaving behind its tired frontier myths. Or we might mourn the shift, because Montana's extraordinary landscapes—and people's deep relationships to them—were what once made the state special. As Montana changes from bovines to business and from rural to resort, its politics can feel like yet another big-box store featuring all the latest national trends.

Then there's Senator Jon Tester, the lone elected Democrat who's running for re-election. The third-generation farmer from the wide-open plains of Big Sandy represents the land-based tradition that Montanans once cherished. But do Montana voters still want a senator like that?

Regardless of outcomes this November, the act of choosing by ideology rather than deep roots in the land marks a huge change.

LETTER

Vote yes for cats to uphold fair and ethical hunting in Colorado

Readers will remember Colorado Division of Wildlife's Tom Beck, our state bear biologist working at the time citizens voted to no longer send dog packs out to chase bears in spring, sparing cubs and Colorado from unfair, unethical practices.

"Most hunting can be ethically defended. Some cannot. Change, where necessary, is our only hope of survival," Beck was quoted in Colorado Outdoors.

The bear measure passed but didn't end all hunting; neither did the voter-approved ban on indiscriminate leghold traps. CATs also carves out specific, unethical practices and in the widely marketed trophy lion hunting of Colorado, where outfitters charge upward of $8,000 and a 100% guaranteed head, alongside commercialized fur trapping that lures bobcats with bait to skin them for fur coats on the Chinese market.

Lynx are included because as Colorado Parks and Wildlife reports, bobcats and lynx share habitat, are similar in appearance, and attracted to the same bait.

A vote "YES" in November will uphold those principles of the North American Model of Wildlife Conservation, to not allow unfair chase and unsightly commercialization of wildlife.

CPW states on its website it will enforce the "will of the voters" as it always has done so well on moral issues for basic standards and ethics. Our trusted agency is here for the citizens as wildlife is a public trust, not private property of the fur trappers-and-lion-trophy-hunters-only club.

CATs held a press conference last weekend, where Erik Molvar, a published wildlife conservation biologist who is also an avid hunter of deer and elk, had this to say:

"Hunting for big cats is trophy hunting, pure and simple. It's not to fill the freezer, it's to bring home a trophy...many hunters are like me, they subscribe to hunting ethics, like the fair-chase principle. Running mountain lions for miles with multiple dogs until they climb into a tree, and then shooting them out of the tree at point-blank range, that's not fair chase. The prey animal doesn't have a fair chance to escape, and hunters aren't taking the quarry using their own skill and knowledge."

A yes vote on cats is a vote for the best of Colorado and to weed out what is nothing to be proud of. Visit www.catsarentrophies.org to learn more.

and leading them into the arenas to show their animals during the shows. Many people also entered other competitions, aside from the animals, throughout the week that were held, including baking, cake making, cake decorating, photography, science experiments, and much more. Each person was also interviewed regarding their project, and they were judged and received ribbons and placement holders in the fair.

In preparation for the fair, many raised their own animals, or purchased animals. They invest a lot of time in the animals. The return on time and money invested comes back to when the animal is sold at the livestock sale.

This year's fair also featured food trucks. Vendors were set up inside of the Outcalt Event and Conference at SLV Ski-Hi Complex.

There were some amazing cake entries this year, including a cake that was decorated to look like a skunk, a beautiful 3-tiered cake that had climbing vines all over it, a cake that was decorated to look like a happy bunny rabbit, a cake that looked like a beach, and a cake that was decorated to look like a beehive. Grand Champion for the cakes was Liam Griffin with his cut up cake that looked just like a skunk, and the reserve Grand Champion was Joslyn Mix with her cake that was decorated like a bunny rabbit.

On Friday, Aug. 9, during the livestock sale and barbecue, about 350 people were there. The Grand Champion Market Beef was purchased by Monte Vista Coop for $28,000.

The South Fork National Night Out brought several members of the community together for an evening celebrating South Fork. Some made smoothies by riding on a stationary bicycle.

Millions of people take part in National Night Out across thousands of communities. Neighborhoods host block parties, festivals, parades, cookouts and various other community events with safety demonstrations, seminars, youth events, visits from emergency personnel, exhibits and much, much more.

Even the rainy weather couldn't keep the fun from happening on Tuesday as the South Fork Police Department shifted their original plans from hosting the event in Rickel Park to the community center.

"It was an all-around fantastic, small town get together put together by a collaborative team of community groups and the South Fork Police Department. Much appreciation for the organizations that worked together to make this awesome event happen... South Fork Friends Foundation, Burro Buddies, and the South Fork Chamber of Commerce. Surely all will be looking forward to this becoming an annual event that brings the whole community together," said Woolf. Plans for next year's event are already underway.

The day will begin with the Trot 5K.

Proceeds from the race will support pediatric diabetes patients throughout the Valley. The cost to participate is $25 and early registrants get a free T-shirt.

There will also be an opportunity to join CPAC Executive Director Jim Ehrlich on a free Agricultural Tour. Those who would like to attend can sign up to ride a bus from the festival site to visit the SLV-Research Center and see a field being harvested. The tour is free and provides the chance to learn about the breeding, seeding, growing and harvesting of Colorado's finest potatoes, right here in the San Luis Valley.

Festivities will continue throughout the day and will include free kid's games, the famous mashed potato dunk tank, and a professional chef competition between Chef Jason Morse of 5280 Culinary, Chefs RJ Harvey and Aurora Hollenbeck of Potatoes USA and Chef Tim Alfrey of the Windsor Hotel.

There will also be bouncy houses, and a trampoline quad jumper along with food and craft vendors, live animals and much more.

It's still Kit Carson

Indecision keeps mountain's name unchanged

By JOHN WATERS
SANGRE DE CRISTO MOUNTAINS — The proposal to rename Kit Carson Mountain in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains continues. The Colorado Geographical Naming Advisory Board again discussed the issue at its meeting in May but took no action. The name change has been before the board since last year, and it will again discuss it on Aug. 26.

The proponents of the 14,167-foot peak's name change advocate removing Carson's name, stemming from his violence against Navajo and Apache tribes in the 1800s. Carson was a frontier legend, fur trapper, wilderness guide, Indian agent, and U.S. Army officer. In 1865, Carson became the commander of Fort Garland.

Kit Carson Mountain is nestled near these peaks in the Sangre de Cristo Mountains. Currently, the Colorado Geographical Naming Advisory Board is considering a name change.

The geographic board was created by Governor Jared Polis in 2020 to evaluate proposals concerning name changes, new names, and name controversies of geographic features and certain public places in the State of Colorado and then make official recommendations to the governor.

In an interview with this reporter in September 2022 regarding the possibility of changing the name of Kit Carson, Polis said, "First, we give heavy weight to what local residents want. The geographic naming board sends recommendations to me that we advance to the federal government. Often it begins with a classroom of students or local officials, and it builds — and the naming board is part of that. It starts with local residents."

In November 2023, Saguache County Commissioners voted in favor of a name change without specifically choosing one. Since then, the commissioners have proposed new names that the board has not considered, as those names are already in use.

In a statement made on Aug. 7 to the Valley Courier, Saguache Commissioner Liza Marron wrote, "We have been successful with connecting with a Ute representative from the Ute Mountain Ute Tribal Historic Preservation Office as well as the Assistant Director for Tribal Affairs at the Colorado Department of Natural Resources.

"They are researching the original name for the mountain pre-colonization. The Crestone Town Board hopes to invite a contingent of Ute representatives to come to Crestone, share a meal, and discuss the naming. It seems this is moving forward. The wish by most parties is that the historic inhabitants of this area have the naming opportunity for the majestic mountain that looks down on us from the Sangre de Cristo range."

The Colorado Geographical Naming Advisory Board will meet on Aug. 26 from 5 to 7 p.m. and again consider renaming Kit Carson Mountain.

For details on how to view the meeting via ZOOM, use Meeting ID 885 7290 3329 and Passcode 266179.

The UPWalker is a revolutionary new mobility device that can change your life by changing the way you walk. It enables you to stand upright when you walk— with your spine straight and your eyes looking straight ahead. Your weight is supported by your upper arms and shoulders, some of the strongest parts of your body. Traditional walkers and rollators force you to put the pressure of your body weight on your hands and wrists. You push them in front of you, looking at the ground instead of where you going. The UPWalker moves with you, with your body perfectly aligned and your feet free to walk in a normal fashion. Its easy-adjust height system allows it to be the perfect fit/height for anyone from 4'10" to 6'1" and supports up to 300 pounds. The new stand-assist handles enable you to distribute your weight across your arms and shoulders, not your hands and wrists to help reduce back, neck, wrist pain and discomfort. It features comfortable arm pads, hand brakes, a fold-down seat, a backrest and two storage bags. It's built with aircraft-grade aluminum to be sturdy yet lightweight, and its sleek design and oversized wheels make it perfect for tight spots in the house or walking in the yard.

Why spend another day bent over and shuffling around— or worse yet, plopped in front of the TV all day. Pick up the phone and take back your life. Call now.

Transmission line study to start later this year

By JOHN WATERS

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Last month, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) granted Alamosa County $1,699,965 to study transmission lines in the Valley. The grant is due to the efforts of Alamosa County Commissioner Lori Laske and others.

Laske gave the Valley Courier an overview of the project and said, “I became involved when I first became a County Commissioner in 2021, when there was the fire in Boulder [December 2021], and all of the gas and electricity was turned off in the Valley. This was at night and in winter.

“I started to receive calls from residents who were concerned about the outage. They had family members who were on oxygen and other medical issues. People asked when the power would be on and why something in Boulder was impacting the San Luis Valley and Alamosa County.”

Laske said that event initiated her interest in the issue of transmission lines and learned the lines come through “the same Poncha Pass corridor. We also had an outage in May related to a line down at Poncha Pass. That pass has been identified by emergency managers as a possible fire hazard.”

Laske said her interest in transmission lines increased when she was contacted by Erin Minks with Senator Michael Bennett’s office and asked to attend a meeting to have the issue be placed on a docket to look at providing transmission in and out of the San Luis Valley. This is something that has been considered for a long time, she said.

Xcel Energy operates a 115-kilovolt line over Poncha Pass, and Tri-State Generation and the Western Area Power Authority operate a 230-kilovolt line over the pass. According to Laske, a new line, such as one south to New Mexico, would reduce the risk of relying on power through the one route over Poncha.

“We will study a bigger line, a 345-kilowatt line, that might allow us to export solar energy out of the Valley. As solar is only produced during the day, if we have solar energy storage, that power could stay here.”

Laske added that she has attended many meetings with power experts and always asks why, despite increased solar production in the Valley, no rates have gone down in the region. To date, no one has answered that question.

The study will be an analysis and extensive community engagement around three potential transmission corridors to identify the optimal Power lines over Poncha Pass serve the San Luis Valley. According to the Colorado State Forest Service, Western Spruce budworm and Douglas-fir beetle have decimated trees in the area. The dead and dry timber has increased fire risk in the area, which may imperil the power lines.

route to increase electric transmission capacity to the Upper Rio Grande Valley in southern Colorado and northern New Mexico.

According to the DOE, “In a continued effort to expedite the build-out of a resilient and reliable electric grid, the U.S. Department of Energy announced 20 projects across 16 states selected to receive up to $371 million to accelerate the permitting of high-voltage, interstate transmission projects.

“These projects will also support community infrastructure projects along major new and upgraded transmissions lines, including upgrading public school buildings and emergency response facilities. Administered by DOE’s Grid Deployment Office, today’s Transmission Siting and Economic Development (TSED) grants will help advance at least 16 high-impact transmission lines across the country, supporting the deployment of reliable and affordable energy for consumers and creating good-paying jobs.

“Today, every pocket of the country is experiencing the grueling impact of extreme weather, and there’s no doubt that we must expand our transmission grid to get more clean, resilient power to more people, in more places,” said U.S. Secretary of Energy Jennifer M. Granholm.

The study is moving forward. Laske said, “We have a conditional proposal; before we applied for this application, we did an RFP [request for proposal], and that really made us competitive for this grant; there are only 20 grants. We have a contract with a company to do a study.

“The first component is stakeholder engagement and outreach. Community meetings with the railroad, CDOT, and forest service will be held. The second component will be an analysis, not a complete engineering study; it will look at what the best route is, mapping, and routes. After that we will receive their recommendations.”

The Colorado Electric Transmission Authority has applied to construct the line, although Laske said they are a last-resort option, and the line could be built by any entity.

The $1.7 million grant study will begin later this year and take 18 months to complete. After this study is finished an engineering study must be completed.

Laske thanked Craig Bearclaw with the Council of Governments and Sarah Stoeber with the San Luis Valley Development Resources Group and the Colorado Energy Office for their assistance.

How to Make Fear Disappear

It has been said that F-E-A-R stands for “false evidence appearing real.”

Too many times the enemy tries to fill our minds with fear and make us feel trapped—backed into a corner with no way out. He makes what is false look so real!

It’s important to remember that fear comes from our enemy—Satan. Whatever good things God tries to give to us, the enemy tries to ruin it with some kind of poison. Satan uses fear to keep us from having everything God wants us to have.

However, for every poison the enemy tries to bring into our lives, God has the antidote—faith. Faith is the antidote for the poison of fear. We don’t have to stay stuck in a corner surrounded by fear (false evidence appearing real). We can break free, release our faith, and walk in victory.

Fear always makes everything seem worse than it really is and sometimes causes us to do unreasonable, even ridiculous, things.

When my husband, Dave, and I were first married and I was pregnant with one of our daughters, we lived in a place that had mice and we began to see them here and there. I can’t stand mice and would literally scream when I saw them.

Well, one day I went into the bathroom and there was a mouse in the bathtub. I just freaked out. I was petrified. My heart and mind were racing trying to figure out how I could contain this “monstrous” mouse and keep myself safe.

How ridiculous! I’m sure that mouse was more afraid of me than I was of it. The point is that fear can make us do things that are quite unreasonable...even foolish.

Before we react in situations, we need to remember that fear will push us to a level of emotion where we will do things that make absolutely no sense. Our human nature tends to react in fear because we think the situation is so much bigger than it really is.

Fear appears huge and overshadowing. However, when we shine the light of faith on it, fear begins to diminish. The minute fear comes into our lives, all we have to do is release our faith. When we do, the feeling of fear doesn’t always go away, but our faith will keep us going...even if we have to do it afraid.

You see, God wants us to keep going forward and do what we believe He wants us to do. He doesn’t want us to back off because we feel fear. As Psalm 34:4 says, “I sought the Lord, and He heard me, and delivered me from all my fears” (NKJV).

There’s no way to count all the people who totally lose their God-ordained destiny because of fear. When they try to step out in faith, fear comes to them, asking all the “what ifs.”

What if I fail? What if people don’t like me? What if I don’t have all of the answers?

Sadly, there are probably relatively few people who actually push past fear and end up boldly doing everything God has planned for them to do in life. Too many consider the fear instead of the evidence of God’s Word about overcoming fear.

Everything that God has for us is better and more powerful than anything Satan has to offer. No matter how powerful and overwhelming fear feels to us, we need to remember that faith is greater.

The Bible says that each one of us is given a measure of faith (Romans 12:3). What does this mean exactly? It means that God will give us the amount of faith we need to do what He has called us to do in life. The evidence is clear!

Whatever you’re going to face in life—whatever is coming in your future—God has already given you the faith for it. It may not look like it, and you may not feel like you have what it takes to overcome, but appearance isn’t everything!

God has given you His Holy Spirit, and He’s all you need to handle whatever life throws your way. The enemy would like for us to believe that we don’t have a chance in life, we’re too weak, too poor...too whatever. But God has a different view of us. God sees us through the eyes of love. He sees what we can be—not what we see or what others see.

But it takes faith to move forward and overcome the situations of life. And faith does you no good if you don’t know how to release it. You have to release it in order for it to work. We release faith through our words, actions, and, of course, through prayer.

Some people seem to go through harder times than others, but God is no respecter of persons (Acts 10:34) and will give each of us the faith we need for every part of our journey in life. However, it’s up to us to act.

You can’t sit around and think fearful thoughts and continue to walk in faith. What we think about and meditate on is very important. First John 4:4 is a scripture we quote a lot, and almost anytime I say this verse in church or a meeting, everybody claps and cheers. But I wonder, how many people really believe it? It says: “...Greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world” (KJV).

You and I don’t have to be fearful. I don’t mean that we won’t feel fear, but it does mean that appearance isn’t everything. It doesn’t matter what the enemy wants us to see or how things might look. Our faith overcomes through the One Who lives in us!

First John 5:4 says: “...This is the victory that has overcome the world—our faith” (NKJV). It’s so simple. What do you need so you can overcome the things that come against you? Childlike faith!

That means simply believing God more than you believe anything else. It means believing His promises. It means believing what you know in your heart more than how you feel, what you think, what your friends say, what your circumstances look like, or what the enemy tells you.

Fear doesn’t have to rule your life. Remember, it’s false evidence appearing real! And when you make a decision to stand in faith and consider the truth of God’s Word, fear will disappear...and you will win the battle.

Celebrating 80 years of Smokey Bear

The air was heavy with a weak monsoon season moisture as I drove up the mountain on patrol, secretly hoping not to discover any illegal campfires - regardless of whether they were attended, unattended or abandoned. The national forest was under fire restrictions at the time, so campfires weren't allowed where I was patrolling. Windows down, my senses were on high alert as I passed a popular dispersed camping area close to, but not immediately visible from the road. Near the upper part of that area, a light hint of smoke drifted through the truck's cab and into my nostrils igniting a spark of anger within me. I felt violated. So many regular campers on that mountain 80th birthday, around 28, 000 firefighters are working to manage the several hundred active fires in the United States, primarily in the west. Nearly one hundred of those are considered large fires, accounting for over 95% of the firefighters committed. A large portion of those fires are human caused. Portions of the west are critically parched by drought and when you combine carelessness with anything that can start a fire, you quickly see the often-tragic results of those circumstances. Eighty years ago, the US was deep into WWII and getting increasingly concerned about the use of young men fighting wildfires and not supporting the war effort. Not to mention the loss of the timber. As part of a greater effort to address the problem, on August 9, 1944, the creation of Smokey Bear was authorized by the Forest Service, and the first poster was delivered on October 10 by artist Albert Staehle. The poster depicted a bear pouring a bucket of water on a campfire. The first live Smokey Bear was found in a wildfire in the Capitan Mountains on the Lincoln National Forest in New Mexico in 1950. As word of that bear got out, the campaign spread like wildfire! This is a great true story and I encourage everyone to read about it on smokeybear.com.

The campaign evolved over the years and in 2001, the slogan was updated to its current version of "Only You Can Prevent Wildfires" to address the unplanned and unwanted brush and grassland fires. Wildfire prevention remains crucial, and Smokey still needs your help. His catchphrase reflects your responsibility: Only you can prevent wildfires. Remember that this phrase is so much more than just a slogan: it's an important way to care for the world around you. These last words, found in "About the

While not all of us want to, or can, work for the Forest Service, we CAN all choose to be good land stewards. One of the most common ways to do this is to practice campfire safety - every time. Keep your fires manageable and always put them out, cold to the touch, before you leave it. Even just to go to sleep. It's the repetition that will set the correct example for the next generation of forest users. I urge you to foster that ethic and promote it as much as you can. And, above all, teach your children, and the adults that may not already know, about Smokey Bear. Because, after all, Only YOU Can Prevent Wildfires.

Center hosts community mural project

By MARIE MCCOLM

CENTER — On Aug. 4, the Town of Center and artist Bianca Maestas hosted a community mural paint by numbers event at the 300 block of Worth Street.

People of all ages were invited to participate in this beautiful mural project. The Town of Center hosted it as a way to help beautify the downtown area.

The San Luis Valley Agriculture Coalition was having an agriculture appreciation barbecue and encouraged people at their event to also participate in the mural project.

According to Lisa Lucero, a member of the San Luis Valley Agriculture Coalition, and the director of Community Engagement for the San Luis Valley Area Health Education Center, the origins of the paint by numbers mural was from a community survey. A mural was decided for Center. Part of the survey also asked community members what they thought of when they thought of Center. The community stated that they thought of family and community. The paint by numbers mural represents a community quilt.

Maestas was chosen by a committee to create and design the community quilt mural. Committee member Lares Feliciano talked about the selection process.

"It was an awesome opportunity," Feliciano said. "We had a handful of submissions from all over the state, not just from the Valley. Bianca presented this beautiful proposal that was bright and joyful but also rooted in the earth and agriculture, and the joy and experience of production. We enjoyed her presentation and chose her. It's been really cool to watch this all unfold."

Maestas talked about the creation of the mural.

"If you look at the community quilt pattern there are a lot of different things here," she said. "There is a community weaving through time, there are different flowers featured in the area. We have potato flowers, canola flowers, and alfalfa flowers. There's a view of the fields representing agriculture."

Maestas said the paint by numbers was put in the mural, on all the pictures, with the idea that people of any age could help paint the mural. Maestas said that many people had been by to help paint, "mostly children."

"I also wanted to make the mural easy and not too complicated, so that small children and anyone else that wanted to, could enjoy painting the mural," she said.

Lucero said she enjoyed being a voice regarding the mural painting in Center.

"I had been wanting to do something like this forever. I cannot take any credit for this, except to be one of the biggest voices in the room. I maybe helped the process along by helping with the marketing and making sure it happened on the same day as the barbecue. I

CREEDE — In honor of its 130th anniversary on Aug. 4, the Creede Community Church dedicated its new Meditation Garden.

During the ceremony, the Rev. Sarah B. Linn offered appreciation to the trustees and to church members Stan and Michael Tucker-McDermott of the Tucker-McDermott Foundation, who shepherded the project over the past five years.

Several members and friends of the congregation contributed hours of work to bring the vision to life.

The Meditation Garden is open to the public 24 hours a day and features picnic tables, park benches, lovely plant life, and "Spin/Monarch," an inspiring work of art by public sculptor Joe Norman. The sculpture was a generous gift from an anonymous donor and serves as the centerpiece of the garden.

Creede Community Church, UCC began as a series of house meetings in 1892. The original congregation was chartered as Creede Congregational Church on Aug. 4, 1894.

Five years later, CCC formed the Ladies Auxiliary to raise money to support the church. They eventually become what is now known as the "Ladies Aid Society" (LAS), which has expanded its mission to include supporting local non-profits and neighbors in need. LAS is celebrating its 125th anniversary this summer.

The Congregational Church became Creede Community Church, UCC when it was folded into the United Church of Christ when the denomination was founded in 1957.

The Meditation Garden at Creede Community Church welcomes anyone who could use a break, a sunny or shady place to rest, or a moment of quiet reflection.

did enjoy being a part of the process," Lucero said. Lucero said she enjoyed seeing a little girl painting at the site. "She is a little artist, and her mom is too," Lucero said. "It was so cute she texted all her little friends, to help her paint that night, and they all came down too. Another aspect of the mural that I really liked was that agricultural workers were involved in the painting. I have a picture that I took, where there were a lot of H2H workers painting the mural. If you think about it, they may not come back next year, but their spirit, a piece of them, will always be in Center, because they painted there."

of her home studio in Creede. Carol Jones (quilting), David Robinson (metalwork) and Jody Stroh (fused glass) are stops 7, 8 and 9. Ten artists from the Studios at Bristol will be participating this year. Kathy Barnard (handblown glass), Mary Jo Depriest (handmade accessories), Joni Franks (children's books), Teri Inman (clothing design), Kyle Inman (photography), Brielle Killip (western-inspired fashion), Kathy Killip (jewelry), Cathy Ledeker (watercolor), Ken Orr (ceramics), and Rocky Wilson (woodworking) will all be present at the Studios at Bristol to discuss their work. This year, the Creede Musical

Arts Collective will be performing concerts along the Studio Tour route, schedule TBA soon. For questions or more information, e-mail creedearts@outlook.com or call the CAC at 719-658-0312. Alamosa County will receive $1.7M from the U.S. Department of Energy

Funding to study three potential electric transmission lines

STAFF REPORT

WASHINGTON, D.C. —The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) has granted Alamosa County $1,699,965 to study transmission lines in the Valley, according to Alamosa County Commissioner Lori Laske.

Alamosa County will conduct an analysis and extensive community engagement around three potential transmission corridors to identify the optimal route to increase electric transmission capacity to the Upper Rio Grande Valley in Southern Colorado and northern New Mexico.

According to the DOE, "In a continued effort to expedite the build out of a resilient and reliable electric grid, the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) today announced 20 projects across 16 states selected to receive up to $371 million to accelerate the permitting of high-voltage, interstate transmission projects.

"These projects will also support community infrastructure projects along major new and upgraded transmissions lines, including upgrading public school buildings and emergency response facilities. Administered by DOE's Grid Deployment Office, today's Transmission Siting and Economic Development (TSED) grants will help advance at least 16 high-impact transmission lines across the country supporting the deployment of reliable and affordable energy for consumers and creating good-paying jobs."

"Today, every pocket of the country is experiencing the grueling impact of extreme weather and there's no doubt that we must expand our transmission grid to get more clean, resilient power to more people, in more places," said U.S. Secretary of Energy Jennifer M. Granholm.

The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) has granted Alamosa County $1,699,965 to study transmission lines in the Valley.
